Disabled People

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of people with disabilities have jobs.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The labour force survey asks people of working age if they currently have a health problem or disability which limits the kind of paid work they can do. Estimates based on answers to this question will include people with short-term health problems and disabilities as well as those registered as disabled.

The latest LFS estimates for summer 1993 show that of all such people of working age in Great Britain 34 per cent. were in employment, 10 per cent. were ILO unemployed and 56 per cent. where economically inactive.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of the proportion of employers complying with the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Roger Berry, dated 28 April 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about his estimate of the proportion of employers complying with the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944.

As at 1 June 1993, the latest date for which information is available, there were 5,525 (18·9%) employers for whom my Placing, Assessment and Counselling Teams (PACTs) had records and who met or exceeded the 3% Quota.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many referrals for employment rehabilitation were made by the Employment Service in the years 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Roger Berry, dated 28 April 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question, about how many referrals for employment rehabilitation were made by the Employment Service in the years 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94.

The number of people who were referred to employment rehabilitation by the Employment Service and who started programmes in the years from 1991-92 to 1993-94 were:

	Number
1993-94	9,532

The figures for 1992-93 have been revised. The figures for 1992-93 published in the departmental Report contained a clerical error. A figure of 8,036 rehabilitation starts for 1992-93 was quoted in the department Report. This was a forecast outturn which appeared in previous documents, and should not have been given as the actual outturn. The actual outturn was 7,569.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many complaints under section 9(5) of the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1994, relating to the dismissal of a registered disabled person without reasonable cause, have been (a) investigated by the Employment Service, (b) referred to a district advisory committee and (c) prosecuted by the Secretary of State in each year since 1964.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility of the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Roger Berry, dated 28 April 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about how many complaints under section 9(5) of the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944 have been investigated by the Employment Service; how many have been referred to a district advisory committee; and how many employers have been prosecuted by the Secretary of State in each year since 1964.

It may be helpful if I explain that the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944 does not provide a statutory complaints procedure. However, registered disabled people who lose their jobs, and who think their employers may have infringed the 1944 Act in dismissing them, may complain to their local Disability Employment Adviser. Complaints which cannot be resolved satisfactorily by negotiation are thoroughly investigated and all the relevant factors are taken into account before a decision is taken.

Employers cannot be prosecuted without the authority of the Secretary of State for Employment. Criminal proceedings cannot be commenced against an employer under the unreasonable discharge provisions of the Act unless the matter has first been referred to a local district advisory committee these bodies are (now known as Committees for the Employment of People with Disabilities—CEPDs) for a report.

I regret that we do not have information on the number of complaints investigated. This information is not held centrally. However, the average annual number was probably very small.

Similarly, information is not readily available on the number of such cases referred to CEPDs for a report for the full period since 1964. However, one case was referred to a CEPD in 1983, another in 1991, two in 1992 and one in 1993.

Three employers have been prosecuted since 1964, for alleged offences against the unreasonable discharge provisions of the Act; there was one prosecution in 1964, one in 1973 and one in 1974.

I hope this is helpful.

Multinational Companies

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 19 April, Official Report, column 491, what is the policy of the European Commission on the applicability to Britain of the draft legislation on works councils for multinationals; and what plans he has to resolve disagreements.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The European Commission accepts that the proposed directive on European works councils should not apply to any companies or employees in the United Kingdom.

Women's Unwaged Work

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what evaluation he has made of the report issued by the European Parliament on the assessment of women's unwaged work; what steps the Government intend to take to implement the recommendations in the report that women's unwaged work should be included in the figures for gross national product; and what plans he has to provide social security and pension rights for unwaged women at home.

Miss Widdecombe: The Government recognise the important contribution women make to society both at home and in the workplace. The compilation of gross domestic product figures are the responsibility of the Central Statistical Office. The CSO follows the internationally agreed system of national accounts which recommends that domestic work is not included. The reasons for this are explained in paragraphs 6.19 and 6.22 of the new SNA, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Concerning social security rights, a married woman can qualify for a retirement pension based on her husband's insurance record. In addition, women with caring responsibilities at home may qualify for home responsibilities protection. Responsibility for these two issues lies with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

Code of Practice on Government Information

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether the new code of practice on Government information applies to training and enterprise councils.

Miss Widdecombe: Yes, the code extends to functions carried out on behalf of Departments by contractors and, as such, training and enterprise councils are regarded as being within scope.

Employment Service, West Midlands

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Edgbaston (Dame J. Knight) of 19 April, Official Report, column 727, how many of the people of the west midlands placed in work by the Employment Service in the last 12 months were in (a) full-time and (b) part-time (i) temporary and (ii) permanent jobs; and what information he has on the proportion of these jobs which paid less than a half of the current average hourly rate.

Miss Widdecombe: Approximately 70 per cent. of those placed into employment by the Employment Service in the west midlands in the last 12 months were placed into full-time jobs, the rest in part-time jobs. It is estimated that 82 per cent. of vacancies filled in the last 12 months were in permanent jobs, the rest were temporary jobs of up to six months in duration. No information is available on the rates of pay which these jobs attracted.

Equal Pay Cases

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many cases have been taken to the European Court under article 119 of the EEC treaty on equal pay since its acceptance; if he will make a statement on the trends; and what proposals Her Majesty's Government will bring forward based upon those trends.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We are aware of 46 cases which have been taken to the European Court of Justice under article 119 of the EEC treaty since it came into effect in 1957.

The decisions reflect developing jurisprudence in the field of equal pay between men and women for equal work. They do not reveal any discernible trend.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Prescott: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many employees of the Employment Department are employed on six month contracts; and, of these, how many have had their contracts renewed (a) once, (b) twice, (c) three times and (d) more than three times.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 26 April 1994]: Only one, and his contract has been renewed more than three times.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Prescott: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list for each quarter since spring 1992 the number of people in Great Britain surveyed by the labour force survey who, although they are without a job, have looked for a job within the four weeks prior to their labour force survey interview or are waiting to start a job they had already obtained, were not available to start a job within the two weeks following their labour force survey interview, and the number of people on the International Labour Organisation measure, but who said they would like a job.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 26 April 1994]: Both of the categories asked for in the question are defined as economically inactive according to international ILO guidelines. Estimates from the labour force survey for each quarter since spring 1992 of the numbers in each group are given in the table.

As shown by the analyses of these groups routinely published in the LFS helpline section of the Employment Gazette, the majority of people who say they want work but are not actively seeking it are students, looking after a family or home, or long-term sick or disabled.

Mr. Prescott: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a breakdown of the latest data on the actual and usual hours worked by (a) part-time employees, (b) self-employed part-time workers and (c) all part-timers who work (i) less than eight hours per week, (ii) between eight and 16 hours per week and (iii) between 16 and 24 hours per week.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 26 April 1994]: Estimates from the autumn 1993 labour force survey for Great Britain of the number of people whose main job was part time are as shown in the table. Actual hours returned in the survey are shorter than usual hours because they take into account periods of absence from work in the survey reference week arising from, for example, holidays or sickness.

Redundancies

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many claims were processed by the Redundancy Payments Service in 1992-93 and 1993-94; what were the costs of meeting payments shortfalls under the Employment Protection Act 1978 when enterprises were insolvent; and what sums were recovered in 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Miss Widdecombe: The number of claims processed by the Redundancy Payments Service in 1992-93 was 301,913 and in 1993-94, 242,332.

The Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978 provides for various payments out of the national insurance fund when an employer is unable to make them by reason of insolvency. Payments made and sums recovered in 1992-93 and 1993-94 were as follows:

	1992-93	1993-94
Payments
To employers in respect of arrears of pay, holiday pay, compensation for pay in lieu of notice and certain other payments	154·9	129·7
To occupational pension schemes in respect of unpaid contributions	4·7	7·2
TOTAL PAYMENTS	159·6	136·9
Debt recovery
Recovery of debts in insolvency	18·7	16·8

Note: Because of the delay between the making of payments and the eventual settlement fo claims in the insolvency, the sums recovered do not correspond directly to the year in which payments were made. The figures for payments and recoveries for 1993-94 are, at this stage, provisional.

Pregnant Workers

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish his estimate of the additional number of women in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland, (d) Northern Ireland and (e) the United Kingdom, who would be entitled to have their posts kept open for them while pregnant in the event of implementation of the ruling of the Law Lords in March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Government are carefully considering the House of Lords judgment to ascertain its full implications and will make an announcement as soon as possible.

Jobcentres (South Yorkshire Villages)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what jobcentre catchment areas cover the south Yorkshire villages of Adwick-on-Dearne, Barnburgh, Brodsworth, Clayton-with-Frickley, Hampole, Hickleton, High Melton, Hooton Pagnell and Marr.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 28 April 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking which Jobcentre catchment areas cover a number of South Yorkshire villages.

It may be helpful if I explain that Jobcentre boundaries are designed to reflect the geographical areas from which Jobcentres can realistically expect to attract clients in terms of employers and job seekers, therefore boundaries are not static.

I should also point out that there is some flexibility in the choice of Employment Service office at which clients claim unemployment related benefits. Therefore job seekers living in these villages may not necessarily attend the office given below.

The answers requested are provided in the table below.

Villages	Covered by Jobcentre at
Adwick-on-Dearne	Mexborough
Barnburgh	Goldthorpe
Brodsworth	Doncaster[1]
Clayton-with-Frickley	South Kirby
Hampole	Doncaster[1]
Hickleton	Goldthorpe
High Melton	Goldthorpe
Hooton Pagnell	South Kirby
Marr	Doncaster[1]

[1]There are five offices in Doncaster.

I hope this is helpful.

Construction Industry

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on fatal injury rates for the construction sector.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The estimated fatal injury rate for employees for 1992-93 is the lowest on record, at 7·5 per 100,000. The comparable rate for self-employed workers is 3·7 per 100,000, which is significantly lower than for most of the 1980s. The combined rate for major injuries has also fallen by 20 per cent. over the last five years. I am greatly encouraged by these reductions, which have undoubtedly been helped by the efforts of committed people in the industry, the Health and Safety Commission and the Health and Safety Executive.

However, there is no room for complacency. Good planning and management is the key to better health and safety performance, and we must continue to seek ways of getting that message adopted right across the industry. For that reason, the HSE will continue to attach a high priority to inspection in the construction sector, through checks on the quality of site management, and through head office visits and risk-targeted campaigns. In addition HSE inspectors will not hesitate to use their considerable enforcement powers to require improvements, or take prosecutions, where necessary.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Slaughterhouses

13. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what abattoirs exist in Northern Ireland for the purpose of slaughtering (a) equines and (b) other animals; how many such animals were slaughtered in the past year; what was the total value of the animals in categories (a) and (b) which were slaughtered; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: There are no abattoirs in Northern Ireland approved for the slaughter of equines. In 1993, 20 abattoirs were approved for the slaughter of other animals and those slaughtered some 453,000 cattle, 981,000 pigs and 1 million sheep worth in total some £403 million. I have arranged for additional information to be placed in the Library.

Cross-border Security

14. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what further progress has been made regarding cross-border security co-operation with the Irish Republic.

Sir John Wheeler: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Sutton and Cheam (Lady Olga Maitland).

Public Services

15. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what expansion is proposed in the essential public services of Northern Ireland during the current financial year.

Sir John Wheeler: The departmental report Command Paper 2516, published on 11 March, summarised plans for the provision of public services which involve departmental expenditure.

Political Talks

16. Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a further statement about the progress of the inter-party talks.

20. Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met the leaders of Northern Ireland's political parties; and if he will make a statement on progress in the talks.

Mr. Ancram: I am continuing bilateral discussions with three of the four Northern Ireland parties on the same basis as previously and the two Governments continue to work intensively on a framework to carry the process forward.

25. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions he has had with political leaders from Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland about the peace process.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: My hon. Friend the Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram) and I meet political leaders from Northern Ireland regularly to discuss a range of matters including political development and the prospects for a permanent end to violence.

I met the Irish Deputy Prime Minister, Mr. Spring, at a meeting of the intergovernmental conference in Belfast this Monday.

26. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on meetings which have been held with the political parties in Northern Ireland and the Irish Government regarding a constitutional settlement for Northern Ireland.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Glasgow, Rutherglen (Mr. McAvoy) earlier today.

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on progress towards securing a resumption of the inter-party talks on the future of Northern Ireland; and what discussions he has had with the Government of the Republic of Ireland.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: My hon. Friend the Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram) is continuing his bilateral discussions with, at present, three of the four Northern Ireland parties. The two Governments continue to work extensively on a framework to carry the process forward.

Security Situation

17. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his assessment is of the current security situation in the Province.

22. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on security matters as they relate to Northern Ireland.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I refer my hon. Friend and the hon. Member to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Basingstoke (Mr. Hunter) earlier today.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

18. Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the results achieved by the Northern Ireland criminal injuries compensation scheme with particular reference to the effects on the victim.

Sir John Wheeler: The chief executive of the Compensation Agency advises that the 1994 provisional outturn for criminal injuries was 11,289 claims cleared and compensation totalling £29·6 million paid. No amount can fully compensate for the effect of criminal injuries.

Joint Declaration

19. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has for advancing the Downing street declaration; and what he proposes for the next stage.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Castle Point (Dr. Spink) earlier today.

Social Security

21. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on eligibility for social security benefits in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Ancram: Social security benefits are available in Northern Ireland on the same basis as they are in Great Britain.

Inward Investment

23. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what initiatives he is making to promote investment by United States companies in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tim Smith: The year 1993-94 has been an encouraging year in terms of inward investment and I believe that new Industrial Development Board initiatives in San José and Atlanta will help to maintain the momentum and reinforce success.

27. Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on prospects for inward investment to Northern Ireland during the period 1994 to 1995.

Mr. Tim Smith: Recent results suggest the Industrial Development Board is experiencing increasing success and it is my hope that we will see a continuation of this trend.

Trade With the Irish Republic

24. Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he is taking to encourage trade between Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Tim Smith: The Industrial Development Board has organised a series of export seminars and clinics to advise Northern Ireland companies about export opportunities in the Republic of Ireland. In addition, since 1992 the board and the Irish Trade Board have co-operated in a wide range of trade and export activities.

Mr. Gerry Adams

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has received the document agreed between the hon. Member for Foyle (Mr. Hume) and Mr. Gerry Adams; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: No.

Housing

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to meet future housing needs in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tim Smith: I commend the Housing Executive, housing associations and the private sector for the excellent contributions they have made, and continue to make, to improving housing in Northern Ireland and meeting the Government's objectives of increasing owner-occupation, improving housing conditions and meeting urgent housing need. Future housing policies and programmes must build on the progress made to date. I have, therefore, asked the Department of the Environment to initiate a housing review with the following terms of reference:

"to review policies and programmes aimed at meeting housing need in Northern Ireland".

The Department will shortly be inviting a wide range of interests to submit comments and proposals to this review and I intend to publish a consultation paper on the outcome. I want to make it quite clear that this review is of policies and programmes and is predicated on the continued existence of the Housing Executive as the single regional housing authority, together with an expanding voluntary housing sector and a growing private sector.

Nursing and Midwifery Staff

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the whole-time equivalent numbers of (a) agency and (b) bank nursing and midwifery staff employed in the NHS for each year since 1987.

Mr. Ancram: There are no agency nurses employed in the health and personal social services in Northern Ireland. Information on the number of bank nurses, whole-time equivalent, is only available from 1990 and is as follows:

	Number

There are no bank midwifery staff.

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many qualified NHS nurses and midwives, unqualified NHS nursing staff and nursing learners there were in each year since 1993; and what percentage each group was of the total NHS and midwifery staff in each year.

Mr. Ancram: The information, at December 1993, is as follows:

	Whole time equivalent	Percentage of all nurses	Percentage of total NHS staff
Trained nursing	12,230·88	77·19	28·58
Student nursing	230·10	1·45	0·54
Other nursing	3,384·69	21·36	7·91

Note: Figures for Student Nursing represent traditional students and exclude 1694 Project 2000 students.

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the numbers of whole-time equivalent NHS nursing and midwifery staff employed on each grade and pay point of the clinical grades, educational grades and senior nursing and midwifery pay spine in each year since 1990.

Mr. Ancram: Details of the number of whole-time equivalent nursing and midwifery staff are as follows:

Senior Nursing Staff	74·11	65·00	66·00	56·00
Scale A	2,737·19	2,899·24	2,807·74	285·37

Scale F	430·92	419·23	438·31	422·27
Scale G	2,221·14	2,142·14	2,034·61	1,905·79
Scale H	183·40	223·40	241·59	238·59
Scale I	184·64	165·67	155·27	136·27
Educational Grades	284·73	288·80	282·09	274·87

Note: Information for 1990 and details of nurses on pay points is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Nursing Education

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the numbers of entrants to initial pre-registration nursing education by course of study and by the academic qualifications possessed by entrants in each year since 1989.

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

Part of register	Number of students who commenced training 1988-89	1989-90
Part 1 (general nursing)	708	671
Part 3 (medical health nursing)	186	176
Part 5 (mental handicap nursing)	58	54
Part 8 (children's nursing)	10	18
Part 1-degree	20	22
Part 1-part 8	56	46
Total	1,038	987

Part of register	Number of students who commenced training 1990-91	1991-92	1992-93
Part 1 (General Nursing)	409	180	150
Part 1/Degree	27	32	—
Part 3 (Mental Health Nursing)	94	61	27
Part 5 (Mental Handicap Nursing)	12	34	22
Part 8 (Children's Nursing)	23	12	—
Part 12 (Adult Nursing—P2000)	217	429	461
Part 13 (Mental Health Nursing: P2000)	36	94	79
Part 14 (Mental Handicap Nursing: P2000)	18	43	34
Part 15 (Children's Nursing: P2000)	16	30	49
Part 12/Degree	—	—	32
Total	852	915	854

It is not possible without undertaking a detailed manual exercise to provide details of the academic qualifications possessed by entrants in each year. However, the minimum entry requirements are five GCSE or GCE O-level grades or equivalent.

Health Service Staff

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of the numbers of health service directly employed staff by main staff group for each year since 1987; and what were the changes between each year and the next over the whole period in numbers and percentages.

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

HPSS workforce by staff group (whole time equivalents)

Main staff groups	Numbers

Departmental Publications

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for how many regular publications he was responsible in 1993-94; what was their circulation; and how many were obtainable by subscription.

Sir John Wheeler: The Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments produced 192 regular publications during the financial year 1993-94. Circulation included a wide range of public and private sector bodies, groups representing clients interests, interested parties, academics, various officials and, where appropriate, Northern Ireland Members of Parliament, Northern Ireland and party spokesmen and the Library of the House. Some 107 of those regular publications were available by subscription or for purchase through HMSO.

Strangford Lough Marine Nature Reserve

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans have been made to ensure that the livelihoods of fishermen will be protected as a result of the proposed designation of the Strangford Lough marine nature reserve; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tim Smith: It is not anticipated that the creation of the proposed marine nature reserve for Strangford Lough will adversely affect the livelihoods of local fishermen; nonetheless, following objections received from organisations representing the fishermen, the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland will continue its dialogue with the representatives concerned with a view to resolving any problems.

Ambulance Service

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the standard response times of the ambulance service in the Southern and Eastern health board areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: The standard response times for an emergency ambulance call in Eastern ambulance HSS trust area is 18 minutes, that is, from the receipt of the call to the arrival of a vehicle at the site of the patient. Over the nine months period 1 April to 31 December 1993, 93 per cent. of emergency ambulance calls were responded to within this target.

The standard response times for an emergency ambulance call in Southern health and social services board area is 21 minutes, that is, from the receipt of the call to the arrival of a vehicle at the site of the patient. Over the nine months period 1 April to 31 December 1993, 95 per cent. of emergency ambulance calls were responded to within this target.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the current response times of the ambulance service in the Mournes area of South Down covered by the Southern health and social services board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: Information on response times is not available for the Mournes area of South Down as this information is collected only on an area board basis.

Vehicle Crime

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the reduction in (a) non-terrorist related vehicle crime and (b) all vehicle crime, since the introduction of photo-driving licences in Northern Ireland.

Sir John Wheeler: None. Photographs have appeared on driving licences in Northern Ireland since 1927.

Cremations

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the latest available annual figure for the number of people cremated.

Mr. Tim Smith: In 1993, 1,926 cremations took place.

Social Workers

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it compulsory for the new trust boards to employ approved social workers to care for (a) the mentally sick and (b) people with disability; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: Any health and social services trust holding an authorisation from a board to exercise statutory functions under the Mental Health (Northern Ireland) Order 1986 is already under a statutory duty to employ approved social workers and accordingly no further action is necessary.

Approved social workers are only appointed under the Mental Health (Northern Ireland) Order 1986 to exercise functions in relation to applications for admission to hospital and guardianship in respect of people with mental disorder ie mental illness, mental handicap or any other disorder or disability of mind.

HEALTH

Water Births

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will issue guidance clarifying whether a mother has a right to a water birth.

Mr. Sackville: District health authorities as purchasers and hospitals as providers should seek the views of women in determining arrangements for maternity care, including the birth itself. The Expert Maternity Group's report, "Changing Childbirth", calls on the national health service to provide a service which is as responsible as possible to the needs of women.

Circular EL(94)9 already sets out action required by the NHS to implement the recommendations of the expert maternity group within the next five years.

Copies of "Changing Childbirth" and circular EL(94)9 are available in the Library.

AIDS

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what allocations were made to local authorities in the northern region for AIDS support in (a) 1993-94 and (b) 1994-95; and what was the basis of allocation to such authorities in each of those years.

Mr. Sackville: For 1993-94 AIDS support grant allocations were made on the basis of open-ended bids submitted by local authorities. Local authorities not receiving AIDS support grant were given money under the health alliances scheme for HIV prevention and joint working with health authorities.

For 1994-95 local authorities were invited to submit expenditure plans against indicative allocations of both AIDS support grant and healthy alliances moneys. These allocations were based on confidential information available for the first time and supplied to the Department by the Public Health Laboratory Service on the distribution of AIDS cases by local authority area. Where this formula would mean a reduction in grant in 1994-95, local authorities were advised that there might, in exceptional circumstances, be some scope to adjust allocations on a transitional basis and that applications for additional grant could be made. We hope to issue letters confirming final allocations shortly.

The information requested for the northern region is shown in the table. The figures in brackets relate to allocations under the healthy alliance scheme.

Authority	1993-94 Allocation		1994-95 Indicative allocation
	AIDS support grant £	Healthy alliances	AIDS support grant £	Healthy alliances

Junior Doctors

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of junior doctors in each region and in England.

Dr. Mawhinney: The most up-to-date figures, for September 1993, are expected to be available in August this year.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the average working hours for junior doctors in each of London's regional health authorities; and what the figures were in 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information on the average working hours of junior doctors is not available.

Trends in the patterns of contracted hours are monitored by the regional task forces and are summarised in the table. Data for 1990 are not available.

Percentage contracted for 83 hours a week or less	North West Thames	North East Thames	South East Thames	South West Thames
September 1991	84	66	77	78
September 1992	85	80	75	91
September 1993	100·0	98·9	99·8	99·9

Medical Negligence

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost of the proven cases of medical negligence in hospitals in England in the last 10 years; what was the average completion time in such cases; in how many cases medical practitioners were (a) dismissed from the health service, (b) advised to retire or (c) suffered some other sanction; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 14 March at columns 537-38.

Ophthalmics

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what restrictions exist on ophthalmological departments of hospitals setting themselves up as opticians.

Mr. Sackville: None, provided that this does not significantly interfere with national health service activity or disadvantage NHS patients.

Staff Levels

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the adequacy of the present level of nursing staff in (a) London and (b) Lewisham.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East (Mr. Cunningham) on 27 April at column 197.

Maternal Death

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action the Department intends to take to improve co-operation or impose sanctions so that all report forms of maternal death are returned to the confidential inquiry into maternal death.

Mr. Sackville: One of the outstanding features of the confidential inquiry into maternal deaths and one of the factors contributing to its success, has been its voluntary nature. The Department therefore has no plans to impose sanctions on health authorities for the return of report forms notifying maternal deaths.

However, when the latest report, covering the period 1988-90, was disseminated in January of this year, under cover of a leter PLCMO(94)1 from the Chief Medical Officer, the opportunity was taken to remind health professionals of the importance of completing reports promptly. This is a matter that is kept under regular review. Copies of the letter are available in the Library.

Paracetamol Overdose

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of suicide deaths resulted from paracetamol overdose in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Suicide deaths from poisoning where paracetamol is mentioned in the deaths' records. England and Wales 1988-1992

Year	Paracetamol without mention of other drugs		Paracetamol with mention of other drugs
	Numbers	Percentage of suicide deaths	Numbers	Percentage of suicide deaths
1988	102 (10)	2·4	29 (4)	0·7
1989	64 (3)	1·7	13 (3)	0·3
1990	101 (5)	2·6	5 (–)	0·1
1991	81 (5)	2·1	23 (3)	0·6
1992	99 (11)	2·5	12 (3)	0·3

The figures in brackets are deaths where there was also a mention of alcohol.

Note: This table is compiled using the information available in Table 2 of Series DH2, and Table 10 of Series DH4.

Table 2 of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys publication "Mortality Statistics: cause" Series DH2 lists all three-digit ICD (International Classification of Diseases) categories containing a death, and also all four digit categories that are expected to attain 20 deaths annually.

Table 10 of the OPCS publication "Mortality statistics: injury and poisoning" Series DH4 nos. 15-19, lists all substances mentioned in the records of deaths assigned to accidental and other poisoning by solid or liquid substances. The inclusion of a substance in this list does not, however, imply that it is necessarily toxic. Where two or more substances are mentioned together the contribution, if any, of each to the death is unknown; even where one substance is listed alone there may well be the other factors with an important bearing on death.

Copies of the publications are available in the Library.

Hospital Consultant Posts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital consultant posts by specialty are currently vacant.

Dr. Mawhinney: The most up-to-date figures, for September 1993, are expected to be available in August 1994.

Health Services, Leeds

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds have been closed in (a) the Leeds St. James trust and (b) the Leeds general infirmary trust since their inception as trusts.

Mr. Sackville: The latest information available is published in "Bed Availability in England 1992-93", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many operations were cancelled in the last three months of the 1993-94 financial year in (a) the Leeds St. James trust and (b) the Leeds general infirmary trust;

(2) how many patients were not admitted within a month of their second cancelled operation in (a) the Leeds St. James trust and (b) the Leeds general infirmary trust in the last quarter of the 1993-94 financial year.

Mr. Sackville: These are matters for the St. James's university hospital and United Leeds teaching hospitals national health service trusts. The hon. Member may wish to contact the acting chairman and chairman Councillor Mr. Bernard Atha and Mr. Tony Clegg, respectively.

Health Services, Sunderland

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on which date Sunderland district health authority (a) considered and (b) resolved to move the Sunderland family health services authority to the Durham road children's centre.

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for the Sunderland family health services authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. John Brown, chairman of the authority for details.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list the dates and occasions on which the Sunderland district health authority consulted with (a) the City of Sunderland social services department, (b) the Sunderland district health authority clinicians, (c) GPs and health personnel involved in the delivery of child health services over the (i) options to unify child health services and (ii) the use of the Sunderland eye infirmary site;

(2) on which date building work and alterations were (a) authorised and (b) commenced at the Sunderland eye infirmary to accommodate the proposed move of child health services to that site;

(3) if she will give the date on which the Sunderland community health council received public consultation documents concerning the proposed unification of child health services on the Sunderland eye infirmary site;

(4) if she will list the dates or occasions on which the children, parents or carers and other users of the Sunderland health authority child development unit were consulted on the proposed move to the Sunderland eye infirmary site;

(5) on which date the Sunderland district health authority invited tenders for the building and alteration work to accommodate the children's department unit at the Sunderland eye infirmary; how many tenders were received and on what dates;

(6) what was the date of the Sunderland health authority decision to move the child health services to the Sunderland eye infirmary site;

(7) if she will list all the options considered by the Sunderland district health authority for the proposed unification of child health services and the dates on which these options were discussed by the Sunderland district health authority board.

Mr. Sackville: We understand that Sunderland district health authority has conducted formal consultation on a proposal affecting child health services in Sunderland. It is reviewing this proposal, as a result of the consultation. The proposal may be referred to the Northern and Yorkshire regional health authority and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health in due course for a final decision.

Details of the consultation and tendering process are a matter for Sunderland district health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. George Bedell, chairman of the DHA for details.

Data Protection

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to publish guidance on confidentiality in the use and disclosure of national health service information.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 21 January at column 888. We hope to issue this draft guidance, for consultation, shortly.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what rights general practitioners have to sell computerised data on patients.

Mr. Sackville: The disclosure of patient data outside the national health service, whether computerised or manually held and whether for a fee or not, is subject to the common law of confidentiality. Computerised data are also subject to the Data Protection Act 1984. Patient data should not be released outside the NHS without the patient's consent unless disclosure can be justified in the public interest. Data may also be disclosed if required by court order or statute.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to enable patients' notes to be used in the interests of the national health service where it conflicts with interests of patients.

Mr. Sackville: We have no such plans. Patients' notes are compiled primarily for the care and treatment of the individual patient. However, the information in them may be used to help with planning and managing the national health service, and monitoring and maintaining the public health to benefit individual patients and the population as a whole. Most of these wider functions require only anonymised data, and confidentiality is strictly maintained throughout.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to define the need to know in relation to access by non-clinicians to patients' notes in the national health service; and to what parts of the patients' notes managers should have access.

Mr. Sackville: Advice on this will be included in the draft guidance on the confidentiality, use and disclosure of personal health information which we plan to issue for consultation shortly. Patient information is used only on a strict need-to-know basis within the national health service, including bodies acting on behalf of the NHS, for care and treatment and for other NHS purposes. Only that part of the information which a recipient needs to know to fulfil his responsibilities may be disclosed, and the information should be anonymised unless it is essential for the recipient to know the patient's identity.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what access patients may have to their own primary care notes; and to what extent this applies to older notes.

Mr. Sackville: National Health Service bodies have been asked to encourage informal, voluntary arrangements for patients to see their records at the discretion of the health professional principally responsible for their clinical care. Under the Data Protection Act 1984 patients have a right of access to all personal information held on computer, subject to safeguards to protect themselves from serious harm and prevent the identification of third parties. They also have the right of access to their manual health records subject to similar safeguards under the Access to Health Records Act 1990, which applies to records compiled on or after its operative date of 1 November 1991. Access to manual records compiled before that date is at the discretion of the record-holder.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the agencies outside the national health service which have access to patients' notes.

Mr. Sackville: Patient information may not be disclosed to any agencies outside the national health service unless the patient consents, or unless disclosure can be justified in the public interest or is required by court order or statute.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance she has issued in relation to primary computers accessing hospital computer systems including clinical records.

Mr. Sackville: Communications between computers in primary care with computers in hospitals are by predetermined messages which comply with strict standards ensuring security. Such messages do not involve access by one computer to records held in another. If access of that type is proposed in future, strict security guidance will be issued to control it.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who is the final arbiter within a hospital in relation to confidentiality of patients' notes.

Mr. Sackville: National health service bodies and staff have a legal duty of confidence towards patients. Decisions on the use or disclosure of information in patients' notes are the responsibility of the health service body but are usually taken by, or after consultation with, the health professional principally responsible for a patient's care and treatment.

General Practitioners (Cars and Minibuses)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to enable non-fundholding general practitioners to be given the resources to finance cars and minibuses for their surgeries.

Dr. Mawhinney: Under the terms of their cost-plus contract, practice expenses, including necessary motoring expenses, incurred in the delivery of general medical services are fully reimbursed to the profession.

Patients Charter Managers

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of patients charter managers currently employed in regional and district health authorities.

Dr. Mawhinney: Many regional offices, district health authorities and national health service trusts have designated a senior manager to be responsible for patients charter matters.

Office Accommodation

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the office blocks and other accommodation vacated as a result of reorganisation within the national health service, including the movement of the national health service executive to Leeds and internal changes within the regions; and which buildings are currently unoccupied.

Mr. Sackville: Prior to their move to Leeds, the national health service management executive staff occupied parts of 10 buildings in London. These were State house, Portland court, Richmond house, Russell square, Eileen house, Friars house, Market towers, Euston towers, Milbank tower and Hannibal house. Of those, two have been disposed of and seven remain occupied by Government Departments. Hannibal house is currently empty but is to be partly reoccupied by the Department of Health to allow another building to be disposed of. The move of the NHS management executive to Leeds is saving some £10 million a year on the cost of office space in London and on higher London salaries.

Information is not available centrally in the form requested on accommodation changes in the NHS more widely. These are a matter for the health authority or NHS trust concerned.

Cervical and Breast Cancer

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the upper age limit for routine screening for (a) cervical cancer and (b) breast cancer recommended by her Department.

Mr. Sackville: The upper age limit for routine screening for cervical cancer is 64 years. Women aged 65 and over who have not had two consecutive negative smear tests in the previous 10 years should also be screened, otherwise smears are available at least every five years on request. The upper age limit for routine screening for breast cancer is 64. Women aged 65 and over may continue to be screened at least every three years on request.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women (a) were diagnosed as having and (b) died from (i) cervical cancer and (ii) breast cancer by five yearly age groups in each of the last five years; and what is the total number of women in each of those age groups.

Mr. Sackville: Figures for the incidence of cervical and breast cancer are given in "Cancer Statistics Registrations" Series MB1 nos. 16, 18, 19, 20 and 21 (1988 the latest available); and for deaths in "Mortality Statistics: cause" series DH2 nos. 11-19, copies of which are available in the Library.

Prescription Charges (Asthmatics)

Mr. Hoon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of prescriptions issued to asthmatics in (a) 1992-93 and (b) 1993-94; and how many were (i) free of charge, (ii) covered by a pre-payment certificate, (iii) paid for a straightforward commercial transaction and (iv) paid for in some other way.

Dr. Mawhinney The available information is shown in the table.

Number of prescription items for drugs used in the treatment of asthma (Bronchodilators, Corticosteroids, and Cromoglycate and related therapy[1]) dispensed by community pharmacists and appliance contractors in England in 1992 and 1993

Year	Free of charge	Charge at point of dispensing	Pre-payment certificate	Total
1992	21,088,000	3,879,000	2,396,000	27,363,000
1993	22,912,000	3,817,000	2,496,000	29,225,000

Note:
[1]Drugs used in the treatment of asthma are contained in the British National Formulary sections 3.1 (Bronchodilators), 3.2 (Corticosteroids), and 3.3 (Cromoglycate and related therapy). The therapeutic classifications are based on the September 1992 issue. The drugs for Bronchodilators may be used for other conditions. Patients with asthma may also be prescribed drugs which are not specifically for the treatment of asthma.

NHS Trusts

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many trusts in (a) London and (b) England failed to meet financial targets set by her Department in 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. Sackville: The information requested is shown in the table. Information for 1993-94 will not be available until the accounts of trusts are audited. The majority of trusts had technical issues which affected their ability to meet their financial duties. This does not imply any failure in financial control. In a number of cases the difference between actual financial performance and statutory target is deemed to be immaterial.

NHS Management Executive

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints her Department and the NHS management executive have received in each year since 1990-91.

Mr. Sackville: We do not keep central records of the number of complaints received in the Department and the national health service executive.

GPs, Birmingham

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners there were in Birmingham in each of the last 10 years.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information relating to the Birmingham family health services authority area is shown in the table.

Date 1 October	Number of unrestricted principals	Date 1 October	Number of unrestricted principals
1985	547	1990	579
1986	556	1991	564
1987	570	1992	563
1988	574	[1]1993	560

The Medical Practices Committee has advised that since 1990 there have been a number of single-handed general practitioners leaving the medical list and because they had small list sizes their lists were dispersed. There have also been a number of GPs leaving partnerships where the partnerships have succeeded to the outgoing doctor's list but no replacement was required.

Local Medical Committees (Functions)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes are being considered in the functions of local medical committees; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Mawhinney: None.

General Practitioners (Mobile Phones)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to subsidise or reimburse the cost to patients of making essential calls to general practitioners where the latter are using mobile phones in the course of their duties.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Benomyl

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she plans to publish the report concerning the alleged connection between anophthalmia and the use of the pesticide Benomyl; when this report was originally due; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Department has commissioned a comprehensive epidemiological study of cases of anophthalmia and microphthalmia from the environmental epidemiology unit at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine. This is projected to run from January 1994 until November 1995.

Young Persons Unit, Macclesfield

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received about the proposed closure of the young persons unit at Macclesfield.

Mr. Bowis: Ministers have received letters from 10 hon. Members and one from a member of the public.

Psychiatric Services (Young People)

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she has for ensuring that specialist psychiatric services for young people continue to be available.

Mr. Bowis: We recognise the importance of child and adolescent mental health services and are currently involved in a number of initiatives aimed at promoting their development. These include research and other service-based studies and preparation of a purchasing guide for the relevant health, social services and education authorities.

Children's Homes

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to monitor the placement of children in homes unregistrable under the Children Act 1989.

Mr. Bowis: The social services inspectorate undertook a study of the prevalence and use made of these homes by local authorities in the north-west of England. "Small Unregistered Children's Homes", the report of a study by the social services inspectorate, was published in March and copies are available in the Library. Further studies will be made in due course.

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her estimate of the total number of children placed in homes unregistrable under the Children Act 1989.

Mr. Bowis: This information is not separately identified in figures available centrally.

Health Services, Sheffield

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Dulwich (Ms Jowell) of 12 April, Official Report, column 72, how much is spent per capita in health services for residents in Sheffield as a whole; and what proportion is spent in treatment by (a) district health authorities and (b) family health services authorities.

Dr. Mawhinney: 1992-93 expenditure per capita by health authorities in Sheffield was:

	£	Per cent.
Sheffield DHA	455	77
Sheffield FHSA	135	23

Nuclear Weapons

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what responsibilities agencies and bodies accountable to her Department are required to assume in the event of an accident or incident involving United States nuclear weapons in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Sackville: The arrangements for the response to radiation incidents are essentially the same regardless of the source of the incident. The national health service is responsible for the treatment of any casualties, for monitoring for radiation of anyone who may have been exposed to radiation and for the provision of information and advice to the public.

The National Radiological Protection Board is required to specify emergency reference levels of radiation dose for members of the public in the event of any radiation incident and will provide advice to the operational bodies in the event of an incident.

Medical Audits

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans she has to commission a medical audit of the quality of treatment being received by patients of the general practitioner practices whose annual prescribing costs are 20 per cent. or below the average for practices in their family health service authority areas;

(2) what plans she has to commission a medical audit of the quality of treatment being received by patients of the four general practitioner practices cited in the Audit Commission's recent report on rational prescribing.

Dr. Mawhinney: Family health services authorities are responsible for working with general practitioner practices to make sure that their prescribing is both cost-effective and meets all real clinical needs of patients.

SCOTLAND

Student Awards

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to publish the framework document for the new executive agency to administer student awards in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: I have agreed that the new agency established to administer student awards in Scotland should be known as the Student Awards Agency for Scotland; it commenced operations on 5 April. I am arranging for copies of the framework document to be placed in the Vote Office and in the Libraries of the House. I shall remain accountable to Parliament for the activities of the agency, but I am delegating to the chief executive full managerial authority for its day to day operation. For the future, I envisage that the agency will use its greater flexibilities to help meet increasingly demanding targets and to improve further its standards of service.

I will arrange for copies of the executive summary of the agency's corporate plan, which will detail the key performance targets I have set, to be made available shortly.

Registers of Scotland

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has completed the review of the Registers of Scotland executive agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I have reviewed the Registers of Scotland at the end of its first three years as an executive agency and have concluded that agency status should continue. ROS's performance has been evaluated, and the following main conclusions reached:

despite some difficulties in 1990-91, ROS has had a successful first three years; substantial improvements in quality of service to customers have been achieved in line with the principles of the citizens charter;

backlogs of work have been largely eliminated;

the extension of the Land Register is now proceeding to an agreed timetable; and a major information systems strategy is being successfully implemented.

the satisfactory introduction of accrual accounts for the year 1992-93 will allow consideration of ROS moving to trading fund status in the near future.

ROS's framework document has been revised and I have placed a copy in the Libraries of both Houses.

I have set ROS the following key targets for 1994-95:

to reduce turnround times for recording writs on the Sasines register from eight to seven weeks.

to reduce turnround times for dealings on the Land Register not attached to a first registration or Transfer of part from 12 to 11·5 weeks.

to implement the agreed Land Register extension programme.

to contain any increase in unit costs in real terms for each of its main categories of work to 1 per cent.

Bird Killing

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, by estate, those occasions on which birds belonging to protected species have been found (a) shot, (b) poisoned or (c) otherwise illegally killed in each of the past five years; and if he will state the number of (i) prosecutions and (ii) convictions which have resulted.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 28 March 1994]: The information relates to incidents reported to the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department's wildlife incident investigation service. The estate or other location listed is that recorded when each incident was reported. The location of a find has in itself no bearing on the responsibility for the incident.

Reports are made to the procurator fiscal where sufficient evidence is available. In respect of these cases, one prosecution in 1989, three in 1990 and one in 1993 all resulted in convictions. One case is pending.

Abortions

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many NHS abortions were performed on women who were under 13 weeks pregnant and resident in each health board area in Scotland in each year since 1990; and how many of these operations involved admission and discharge of the patient on the same day.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 27 April 1994]: The figures for 1993 are not yet available. The information for 1990-92 by health board of residence is as follows:

Ambulance Service, Glasgow

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the success rate for the Scottish ambulance service, Greater Glasgow area, in percentage terms of achieving its ORCON standards for (a) reaction to a 999 call and (b) reaching the site.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 27 April 1994]: Activation and response times in Glasgow have improved since 1992-93. This improvement has been secured despite a 5 per cent. increase in demand.

The information is as follows:

Target	Achieved 1992-93 Per cent.	Achieved 1993-94 Per cent.
Activation time
95 per cent. in 3 minutes	83	92
Response times
50 per cent. in 7 minutes	32	38
95 per cent. in 14 minutes	80	89

Prison Officers

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many days work have been lost by prison officers due to illness in Scotland in each of the last five years.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 27 April 1994]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Scottish Prison Service under its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. John McFall, dated 3 May 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about days work lost by prison officers, due to illness, in Scotland, in each of the last five years.

Information held centrally relates to all days covered by sick certificates and does not necessarily equate to working days lost. It also includes all prison service grades, not just prison officers.

The information is as follows:

Year	Number
1989	80,496
1990	73,980
1991	75,602

1992	80,781

Departmental Publications

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for how many regular publications he was responsible in 1993-94; what was their circulation; and how many were obtainable by subscription.

Mr. Lang: There were 66 regular publications published and sold by the Scottish Office in 1993-94. All are available by subscription or standing order. There are 707 addresses on the subscription file.

Local Government Etc. (Scotland) Bill

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give an estimate of the total cost to his Department of all aspects of (a) the consultation paper on the structure of local government of June 1991 and subsequent consideration, (b) the White Paper of July 1993 and (c) all correspondence, meetings and briefings before and during the second reading debate and the committee stage of the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Bill.

Mr. Stewart: The total cost of the consultation paper "The Case for Change", which was published in June 1991, of the consultation paper "Shaping the New Councils", published in October 1992 and of associated material, including leaflets, a video and so on, was approximately £148,800. The cost of the White Paper "Shaping the Future—The New Councils" and related material was £58,200. It is not possible to identify or quantify administrative costs incurred by the Scottish Office which are related specifically to correspondence, meetings and briefings about the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Bill.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many civil servants from his Department have been required to travel to London in connection with the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Bill during each week since 16 January; and if he will give the number from each grade, the number of days and the costs of (a) travel and (b) subsistence.

Mr. Stewart: Details of the civil servants travelling to London in connection with the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Bill since 16 January are given in the table:

Totals 152 official journeys		465	373

[1] Overnight stays include only those spent in London and not nights spent away from home whilst travelling between London and Edinburgh on the sleeper service.

It is possible to produce only broad estimates of travel and subsistence costs, as follows:

(a) Travel

A return air journey costs approximately £220.

A return train journey including travel by sleeper and overnight travel allowance costs approximately £180.

Assuming, therefore, an average cost of £200 for each official travelling the total travel cost is approximately £30,400.

(b) Subsistence

Subsistence is paid at the rate of £65·15 to every official required to spend a night in London.

Using the total number of overnight stays required in London, the approximate subsistence cost is £24,300.

"Shaping the New Councils"

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library copies of the submissions in response to the consultative document on local governments, "Shaping the New Councils", from Dumbarton district which did not request confidentiality.

Mr. Stewart: Arrangements have been made for copies of those responses on the consultation document "Shaping the New Councils" relating to Dumbarton district to be placed in the Library of the House.

Respite Care

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of children with disabilities have access to respite care.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not held centrally.

Cigarettes Sales

Mr. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the numbers of reported cases of illegal selling of cigarettes to children and the number of prosecutions following such sales in the past year.

Mr. Stewart: Five reports were submitted to procurators fiscal for offences under the Children and Young Persons (Protection from Tobacco) Act 1991 concerning alleged illegal sales of cigarettes to children in the period 1 March 1992 to 31 July 1993. Four of these reports resulted in prosecutions.

A727 and A726

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the routes of the A727 and the A726; if he will specify how those roads, and the designation of those roads, has been altered since 1975; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The A726 is a principal road and runs from Strathaven to Erskine bridge. The A727 which ran from Clarkston to Cathcart is no longer a classified route. In 1980 part of this route was declassified and the remainder was reclassified A730, B766, B768, B762 and B767.

The responsibility for these roads lies with the local roads authority, Strathclyde regional council, and the information regarding alterations to these roads is not held by central Government.

Lambs

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 12 April, Official Report, column 121, if he will place in the Library the published Scottish Office research on viable lambs predated by foxes.

Sir Hector Monro: A copy of "Scavenging and Predation upon Sheep and Lambs in West Scotland" pubished in 1984 has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to the average percentage of yearly lamb loss caused by hypothermia.

Sir Hector Monro: No information on this is held centrally.

Fox-hunting

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce legislation to ban fox-hunting in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government have no plans for legislation in this area. Over the years, there have been a number of private Members' Bills whose purpose has been to ban or to regulate various forms of hunting, including fox-hunting, but to date none of these Bills has commanded sufficient support in Parliament to become law. The Government have consistently adopted a position of neutrality towards such legislation and regard this issue as very much a matter for individual conscience and decision.

Trust Hospitals

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total cost of redecoration and furnishing of chief executives' and senior managers' offices in each trust hospital to date since it acquired trust status.

Mr. Stewart: The information requested is not held centrally.

Scottish Power

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of Scottish Power; what matters were discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend meets representatives of Scottish Power from time to time to discuss a range of issues.

Rats

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what studies he has had made available to him during the past five years on the infestation of sewers by rats; what plans he has to accelerate the elimination of rats from sewers; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: No studies have been made available to my right hon. Friend in the last five years on the infestation of sewers in Scotland by rats. Any evidence of such infestation would be dealt with by the regional and islands councils' drainage departments and it is for the authorities to determine the appropriate action. Any incidents in recent years have been of a minor nature and dealt with promptly by the authorities.

Speedwell

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what advice her Department offers farmers and growers on the eradication of Veronica species, commonly known as speedwell; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: Advice to farmers on the control of all weed species is available from the Scottish Agricultural college through its network of local advisory offices.

Sight Tests

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many NHS sight tests took place in each financial year since 1984-85 in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 April 1994]: The number of national health service sight tests paid for by health boards in each of the financial years from 1984-85 to 1993-94 is shown in the table.

National health service sight tests

Year	Number
1984-85	884,727
1985-86	913,901
1986-87	965,160
1987-88	1,098,145
1988-89	1,169,610
1989-90	[1]475,479
1990-91	432,885
1991-92	496,598
1992-93	538,684

[1] Since 1 April 1989 free national health service sight tests have been available only to children, full-time students under 19, those in receipt of income support or family credit, the registered blind and partially sighted, complex lens users, those who hold an AG2 exemption certificate from the health benefits unit, diagnosed diabetic or glaucoma sufferers and close relatives aged 40 or over of glaucoma sufferers.

Hospital Services

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average number of (a) beds available and (b) new accident and emergency cases during 1993-94, by regional health board; and what were the figures per 1,000 population.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 April 1994]: Information on average available staffed acute beds and accident and emergency new out-patient attendances for the year ended 31 December 1993—latest available—is set out in the table:

	Average available staffed acute[1] beds		Accident and Emergency[2] New Out-Patient attendances

[2] Rates based on Registrar General mid-1992 population estimates. Health board area rates are based on total resident population and therefore do not take into account the cross-border flow of patients for treatment.
[3] All patients who present at an accident and emergency department, some of whom would become in-patients.

Health Service Staff

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) men and (b) women were employed at the latest available date for each grade in the administrative and clerical pay group of the national health service, for grades 0 to 12 in the senior managers pay group, for each grade in the ambulance staffs pay group and the ambulance officers pay group, and for general managers and chief executives in the national health service; and if he will express the figures as numbers and as full-time equivalents.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 April 1994]: The numbers in whole-time equivalent terms of administrative and clerical staff and ambulance staff by grade and sex employed by the NHS at 30 September 1993 are given in the table. Not all chief executives can be identified separately and are therefore included in the general manager category. Senior manager grades 0-12, introduced in October 1993, are not reflected in the data which refer to the "old" scales.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many applications the Forestry Commission made for financial assistance from the European Community for each of the last five years; what was the purpose of each application; and what has been the success of these applications;

(2) whether an application has been made by the Forestry Commission to the European Community for financial assistance to help with the development of community forests.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 27 April 1994]: Council regulation 2328/91, and its successor Council regulation 2080/92, provide for member states to claim part-reimbursement from the European Community of eligible expenditure to support the afforestation of agricultural land and other forestry operations on farms. Under these provisions, the Forestry Commission has made annual applications for, and received, the sums shown for woodland grant scheme and farm woodland scheme planting grants for each of the last five years. The woodland grant scheme's community woodland supplement, which was introduced to encourage the development of community forests, is included in the provisions and the first claim for reimbursement of eligible expenditure will be made this year.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to change the structure of the Forestry Commission.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 27 April 1994]: The Forestry Ministers are currently considering the report of the forestry review group, which was asked by Ministers to review, among other things, the options for the ownership and management of Forestry Commission woodlands. An announcement will be made in due course.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Accidents

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what responsibilities (a) United States diplomatic and military officials and (b) British officials would assume in the event of an accident or incident involving United States nuclear weapons in the United Kingdom;

(2) what regulations cover the procedures that would be adopted in the event of an accident or incident involving United States nuclear weapons in the United Kingdom in peacetime;

(3) which agency would assume primary responsibility under current emergency planning procedures in the event of an accident or incident involving United States nuclear weapons in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Hanley: In the highly unlikely event of an accident involving nuclear weapons in the United Kingdom, those United Kingdom regulations which are relevant to any radiological hazard to the public would be applied, irrespective of whether the weapon in question belonged to the United Kingdom or the United States.

The general responsibilities of British officials in the combined response to any major incident affecting public safety are described in the Home Office publication "Dealing with Disaster". For an accident involving nuclear weapons in the United Kingdom, the lead Government Department would be the MOD. The civil police would co-ordinate the activities of all those responding at and around the scene. The same principles would apply in the event of an accident involving United States weapons.

Within this framework, the United States would supply specialised personnel and equipment to render safe any damaged United States nuclear weapon and to recover it and any components into United States custody, and would provide advice on any specific measures necessary to maintain public safety.

Exercise Diver Mist

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Exercise Diver Mist taking place in Suffolk.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 25 April, Official Report, columns 84-85.

Search and Rescue

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the civilian search and rescue missions flown by helicopters from RAF Chivenor, RAF Brawdy and RAF Valley between 00·01 hours and 23·59 hours on Tuesday 19 April, including time of call and time of arrival on scene.

Mr. Hanley: The search and rescue helicopter flight at RAF Chivenor was called to one incident on the day in question. The call for assistance from the rescue co-ordination centre was received at RAF Chivenor at 15.35. The helicopter was stood down before reaching the incident scene and the rescue was completed by the Fishguard lifeboat. The flights at RAF Brawdy and RAF Valley were not involved in any civil search and rescue missions during that day.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the purposes of the plans to transfer the area of responsibility of the search and rescue facility at RAF Brawdy, Dyfed to that of RAF Chivenor; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: My Department's decision to move the RAF search and rescue flight from Brawdy to Chivenor formed part of our overall plan for the basing of RAF search and rescue helicopters in the United Kingdom as set out in the 1992 open government document "The Future Provision of RAF Search and Rescue Helicopters", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

This decision, which has recently been re-examined in the light of subsequent developments and reconfirmed, was based on operational factors relating to the military requirement for search and rescue while maximising the effectiveness of the RAF search and rescue force for civil search and rescue operations.

RAF Chivenor

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are to close RAF Chivenor; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: On 7 December 1993, Official Report, column 177, I announced proposals to cease flying training at RAF Chivenor from 1 October 1994 and to place Chivenor on to a care and maintenance basis. This proposal has been the subject of consultation with the trade unions and other interested parties. The consultation period has ended and I hope to be able to make an announcement shortly.

Specialised Image Intensifiers

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 15 April, Official Report, column 348, what other actions he has taken to ensure the maintenance of a United Kingdom source of specialised image intensifiers: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: None.

Defence Equipment

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 15 April, Official Report, column 348, what other decisions he has made to ensure the maintenance of a United Kingdom source of a particular type of defence equipment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: Where relevant, industrial considerations and the importance of maintaining a domestic source are taken into account in my Department's procurement decisions. The weight given to these factors will vary from case to case. Records are not kept which identify any other decisions which were taken specifically to maintain a United Kingdom source of a particular type of defence equipment.

Armed Forces Pay Review Body

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy regarding the provision of information on the work of the Armed Forces Pay Review Body: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The Armed Forces Pay Review Body—AFPRB—is an independent review body and as such it is not my Department's practice to provide information on matters which are the sole responsibility of that body, such as the appointment of consultants. My Department will of course provide information on the work of the AFPRB where such matters fall within our responsibility.

RNSD Eaglescliffe

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current estimate per person of the cost of relocating MOD personnel from RNSD Eaglescliffe to Bath.

Mr. Hanley: The current average cost of a permanent move in the public interest within the United Kingdom is £30,000. This represents a reduction from the 1993 average due to savings associated with the relocation company scheme.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the office block at RNSD Eaglescliffe will be left vacant by the removal of mobile staff to Bath.

Mr. Hanley: The planned relocation of Naval Support Command Headquarters posts at Eaglescliffe to the Bath area should result in some 75 per cent. of the office block at Eaglescliffe becoming vacant. My Department is currently looking for alternative occupants for the building from other Government departments.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent on the recladding and updating of the store sheds at RNSD Eaglescliffe.

Mr. Hanley: It was considered necessary to reclad the store sheds at Eaglescliffe for fire safety reasons. A total of £4,850,000 has been spent on this programme between October 1989 and February 1993.

Defence Cost Studies

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the results of defence cost study (10).

Mr. Aitken: We hope to make public the bulk of our conclusions arising from the defence costs study before the summer recess.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for how many regular publications he was responsible in 1993-94; what was their circulation; and how many were obtainable by subscription.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Walsall, South (Mr. George) on 24 February 1994, Official Report, column 383. The three publications referred to in that answer are all available by subscription.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 29 April 1994

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Wessex Regional Health Authority

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what were the costs to the public purse of the abandoned case at Winchester Crown court in respect of conspiracy to defraud Wessex regional health authority.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I am not able to state the amount of the costs to the public purse as a re-trial was ordered by the trial judge and accurate figures will not be available until the case has been concluded and the bills of costs determined. In any event, not all these costs will have been wasted, as much of the preparation work by solicitors and counsel will not need repeating.

Hague Conference on Private International Law

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the 1993-94 expenditure on the permanent bureau of the Hague Conference on Private International Law; and how many staff are employed and paid under this expenditure vote.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The United Kingdom's expenditure on the permanent bureau of the Hague Conference in 1993-94 amounted in total to £55,931·03 —Dfl. 158,115·73. This amount was paid as a lump sum contribution in August 1993 and represents the United Kingdom's contribution towards the permanent bureau's total budget of Dfl. 2,317,418 for 1993-94.

There are currently 12 permanent staff employed by the bureau. The latest available figures show that the total salary bill for the financial year 1 July 1992 to 30 June 1993 was Dfl. 1,452,348.

Juvenile Court Magistrates Panels

Mr. Cox: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) men and (b) women from an ethnic community were members of a juvenile court magistrates' panel for courts covering the Greater London area as of 20 April.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Information is available only in respect of the Inner London Commission area in which there are currently 10 men and nine women from the ethnic minority community sitting as members of the youth court panel, formerly the juvenile court panel.

Civil Enforcement Agencies

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what analysis has been reached by his Department of the responses received to the consultation paper on the organisation and management of civil enforcement agents.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The response to the public consultation was positive; the vast majority of consultees were pleased that the issues had been raised and agreed that the law should be simplified and procedural changes made to rule out abuses which might occur under the present system. A wide variety of views were received on the options set out in the consultation paper. The options are still being considered by the Lord Chancellor who will want to discuss his proposals with Government colleagues before making any further announcements.

Legal Aid

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will introduce a limitation on the amount of legal aid available to persons accused of fraud.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I am examining the provision of criminal legal aid as a whole as part of the fundamental review of my Department's expenditure currently under way. But any changes that may be made will need to take account of the presumption of innocence.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what are the final expenditure figures for legal aid for 1993-94; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Final figures are not yet available. However, provisional outturn figures show that the net cost of legal aid in 1993-94 was £1,210 million compared to a provision of £1,283 million. This represents an increase of £117 million on the previous year. Of the £73 million underspend against provision in 1993-94, £39 million related to criminal legal aid where the number of bills paid fell short of expectations, reflecting the fall in business in the criminal courts. Most of the remaining shortfall, £27 million, related to civil legal aid.

Payments to the legal aid fund, particularly in respect of costs and damages recovered, amounted to £21 million more than anticipated, which we believe is mainly because of speedier settlements resulting from the transfer of business from the High Court to the county court following from the civil justice review. In addition, the number of civil bills paid were some 3 per cent. lower than expected, resulting in a reduction in expenditure of around £6 million. The remainder of the shortfall was due to green form expenditure being some 2 per cent. lower than estimated and the number of assistance by way of representation bills being some 30 per cent. lower than expected, resulting in shortfalls in expenditure of £3 million and £4 million respectively.

Executive Agencies

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what are the key performance targets for Her Majesty's Land Registry and the Public Record Office executive agencies for 1994-95.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The tables set out the key performance targets that the Lord Chancellor has set for Her Majesty's Land Registry and for the Public Record Office.

Her Majesty's Land Registry Executive Agency
Key performance targets 1994-95

Indicator	Target
1. Financial
Return on average capital employed:	6 per cent.
External Financing Limit:	0 per cent.
2. Efficiency
Progressive reduction in unit costs in real terms:	To achieve at least 2 per cent. reduction in the year.
3. Productivity
Progressive increase in output per post:	To achieve at least 2 per cent. increase in the year.
4. Speed of service
Percentage of pre-completion applications handled in 3 days:	No less than 98 per cent.
Average handling time for post-completion applications:	Where no requisitions arise, no more than 5 weeks.
5. Quality of service
Percentage of pre-completion applications handled free of error:	No less than 99·75 per cent.
Percentage of post-completion applications handled free of error:	No less than 97·70 per cent.
6. Development of Land Registration
Number of computerised registers:	To increase the number of registered titles in computerised format to 10·50 million.

Note
Fuller details of the Registry's performance targets are given in its "Business Plan", which is available from Her Majesty's Land Registry.

Public Record Office Executive Agency
Key performance targets 1994-95

Indicator	Target
1. Efficiency
Indicator: Unit cost of selecting and accessioning records	To decrease the unit cost of selecting and accessioning records by 3 per cent.
Indicator: Unit costs of providing record storage space, document productions and reader services	To reduce the unit cost of providing records storage space by 1 per cent.
	To decrease the cost per document produced to readers by 4 per cent.
	To increase the reader service costs per reader visit (Census microfilms) by no more than 2 per cent.
	To decrease the reader service costs per reader visit (other records) by 2 per cent.
Backlog of records awaiting review:	To identify and quantify the backlog in two departments.
	To reduce the known backlog of records over 30 years old which have not been processed, by 1,500 feet (current known backlog 5,500 feet).
Storage of records:	81 per cent. of records to be stored to an acceptable standard (standard as recommended in BS5454).
2. Quality of service
Reader satisfaction:	87 per cent. of reader satisfaction survey forms returned to have an overall assessment of "good", or better.

Indicator	Target
Response times for answering correspondence:	To send replies to letters requiring a response by stock letter within one week. To send replies to other letters to Reader Services and Reprographic, Publishing and Publicity Departments (including those requiring estimates for copies) within three weeks.
Document production times:	To make documents (excluding documents produced on microform, or stored at Hayes, or requiring special handling) available to readers within the following maximum times: Kew: 35 minutes Chancery Lane: 40 minutes

Note:
Fuller details of the Office's performance targets are given in its "Business Plan", which is available from the Public Record Office.

PRIME MINISTER

D-day Commemoration

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Prime Minister what was the involvement of the Cabinet Office in the appointment of Lowe Bell Communications as consultants to the D-day Commemoration.

The Prime Minister: None.

Drugs

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Heywood and Middleton (Mr. Callaghan) of 26 April, at column 101, concerning the actions and plans of Her Majesty's Government to fight drug addiction and related crime, what powers the Government possess to stop and search all cargo or persons wishing to enter the United Kingdom.

The Prime Minister: Her Majesty's Customs and Excise has powers to stop and search persons, vessels, aircraft, vehicles and their cargo, wishing to enter the United Kingdom, in respect of prohibited goods, including drugs and firearms. As a contribution to the fight against drug addiction and related crime, Customs uses these powers to combat the smuggling of prohibited goods.

War Widows

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister what representations were made to him by the Royal British Legion to receive a deputation of war widows to discuss the Government's decision to reverse a decision of the High Court by amending the Service Pensions Order to restrict the pension entitlement of widows or ex-service men; what reply he made; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 28 April 1994]: As far as I am aware, none.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister what direct consultations Ministers had with (a) the Royal British Legion and (b) the Normandy Veterans Association about the Government's decision to reverse a decision of the High Court by amending the Service Pensions Order to restrict the pension entitlement of ex-service personnel and war widows; and if he will now himself directly consult the two organisations on the Government's decision.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 28 April 1994]: The customary mechanism for consultation on proposed changes to war pensions legislation is through the statutory Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions. The committee includes representatives of several ex-service organisations, including two members each from the Royal British Legion and the Royal British Legion (Scotland).

The Minister with special responsibility for war pensions at the Department of Social Security, my noble Friend, Lord Astor, consulted the committee on the recent proposals to amend legislation following a decision of the High Court which suggested that the law did not clearly reflect long-standing policy. We always consider, as we did on this occasion, any other points made by any individual or organisation.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Parliamentary Boundaries

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) members of the public and (b) organisations have sought a reference back to the boundary commission's revised proposals for South Yorkshire in respect of the boundaries for Barnsley, East and Mexborough, and Don Valley constituencies; and on what date he hopes a decision will be announced.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand that the parliamentary boundary commission for England has received representations concerning the revised recommendations for South Yorkshire in respect of the boundaries for Barnsley, East and Mexborough, and Don Valley constituences from 144 members of the public and from 17 organisations. These were evenly divided between representations in support of the commission's revised recommendations and those which objected to them. A further 1,249 signatures were put to petitions relating to the recommendations. A news release announcing a decision in respect of the boundaries of the Barnsley, East and Mexborough, and Don Valley constituencies will be issued in May 1994.

EC Fraud Investigations

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to ensure that investigations into fraud in the EC are made immediately and publicly and that individuals are brought to account.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. and learned Friend gave on 4 March 1994 to a question from my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Sir I. Lawrence) at column 934.

Murder

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, (1) pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Welwyn Hatfield (Mr. Evans) of 21 April, Official Report, column 1034, if he will list any family relationship of the victims of the first and second murder to the murderer;

(2) how many convicted murderers released from prison since 1979 killed again; and if he will list the nature of the second conviction and any family relationship of the victims of the first murder and the second killing to the offender.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Nine murderers released from prison on life licence since 1979 have been convicted of a further killing. Seven were convicted of murder on the second occasion and two of manslaughter. Another murderer released on life licence committed suicide while awaiting trial for a second murder.

In the cases of the seven double murderers, there were four where none of the victims were related to the offender. In one case, the victims of the first and second murders were members of the offender's family, his wife and sister respectively. In one case, the victim of the first murder was the father of the offender. In the remaining case, the victim of the second murder was the female partner of the offender.

The two released murderers convicted of manslaughter killed people unrelated to them.

Circus Animals

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will seek a report into the transportation and general treatment of circus animals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Circus animals are protected against unnecessary suffering by the Protection of Animals Act 1911, and by the Welfare of Animals During Transport Order 1992 and other legislation governing the importation and transport of animals. Additionally, the Performing Animals (Regulation) Act 1925 provides for the registration of trainers and the inspection of premises by local authorities. I have received no evidence to suggest that these provisions provide inadequate safeguards for circus animals.

Physical Restraints

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prisons in England and Wales at which physical restraints have been used on (a) men and (b) women inmates and the number of times such restraints were used in each establishment during 1993.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 29 April 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking if he will list the prisons in England and Wales at which physical restraints have been used on (a) men and (b) women inmates and the number of times such restraints were used in each establishment during 1993.

The number of applications of restraints under Rule 46 of the Prison Rules 1964 and Rule 49 of the Young Offender Institution Rules 1988 are given in the attached table.

The figures do not cover the use of restraints whilst prisoners are being escorted between Prison Service establishments, or between cells or to the governor's office within an establishment.

Prison Deaths

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all deaths that have occurred in 1992 and, if available, in 1993, of persons detained in prison department establishments, stating in each case the age and sex of the inmates and cause of death, the inquest verdict, whether the inmate was sentenced or on remand, the establishment where the inmate was detained, whether death occurred there or in an outside hospital and, where the death occurred within the prison, whether the inmate was segregated either in the hospital wing or in the punishment block.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 29 April 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about deaths in Prison Service custody in England and Wales.

Some of the information which you have requested is not held centrally and could not be obtained except at a disproportionate cost. The information that is available on self inflicted deaths in 1992 and 1993 is set out in the table. In each case the cause of death was hanging. We are also gathering together information on other deaths, including those from natural causes. I shall let you have this information as soon as it is available and also arrange for it to be published in the Official Report.

Firearm Certificates

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to raise the fee for firearms and shotgun certificates.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The fees for the grant and renewal of firearm and shotgun certificates are currently under review. In reviewing fee levels we are taking into account the 1991 report of the Home Office working group on the administration of the firearms licensing system. This identified models of best practice for police forces in administering the licensing system. The result of the subsequent costing exercise, undertaken by the consultants Ernst and Young, will also be taken into account.

An announcement will be made as soon as possible.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will construct a table showing the cost in each police force area of issuing a firearms or shotgun certificate.

Mr. Charles Wardle: This information is not available.

Detainees

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to ensure that the treatment of detainees is not in breach of any convention which has been ratified by the United Kingdom.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Government are committed to their obligations under the 1951 United Nations convention relating to the status of refugees, and the protocol to that convention, and are satisfied that United Kingdom legislation and practice do not breach these or other relevant international obligations.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of applicants for asylum in each month of 1993; and what proportion was refused in each case.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Information for 1993 on the number of applications received for asylum in the United Kingdom and decisions made, is given in the table.

Police Cells, Manchester

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list total numbers of convicted and remand prisoners held in police cells in Greater Manchester since 1 January; and how much they have cost.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Andrew Bennett, dated 29 April 1994.

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the numbers of prisoners held in police cells in Greater Manchester since 1 January and the costs involved.

A sub-division into convicted and remands is not available centrally for the earlier part of the period from 1 January 1994. However, the total numbers of prisoners held in police cells in the Greater Manchester police area on each date from 1 January 1994 to 26 April 1994 are available and are set out in the attached table.

A total of £21,633 has been paid to Greater Manchester Police Authority. Further invoices, totalling some £488,000, have recently been received and are under consideration.

Iraqi Business Men

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visas have been granted to Iraqi business men in each month since the conclusion of the Gulf war.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I have been asked to reply.

I regret that the information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Statistics of visas granted are recorded on the basis of the categories of visas issued at each post and not by the nationality of the applicant. In addition, visiting business men are granted a "visit" visa. There are no sub-divisions within this category.

Diver Mist

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent the principle of police primacy was maintained throughout exercise Diver Mist.

Mr. Hanley: I have been asked to reply.

The principle that the police co-ordinate the activities of all those responding at and around the scene, as described in the Home Office publication "Dealing with Disaster", was maintained in full throughout exercise Diver Mist.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Plugs and Sockets

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he will be discussing with his European partners the implications of the EC proposals to harmonise the plugs and sockets of electrical appliances throughout the EC.

Mr. Heseltine: There is no such proposal. If one were to be put forward we would consider it.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the dangers there are for United Kingdom consumers in any transitional period from the harmonisation of electric plugs and sockets; and what steps he is taking to ensure that the safety of consumers in the United Kingdom is not compromised.

Mr. Heseltine: CENELEC—the European Committee for Electrotechnical Standardisation—the relevant standards-making body, has not published a standard for a harmonised European plug and socket system against which an accurate assessment could be made. In considering whether any change to our present standards might be desirable at some future date, full account will be taken of consumer safety issues. There is no EC proposal for harmonisation.

Industry Council Meeting

Mr. Amess: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting of the EC Industry Council held in Luxembourg on 22 April.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the Industry Council meeting in Luxembourg held on Friday 22 April.

Mr. Sainsbury: The main item on the agenda of the Industry Council held on 22 April was steel. Commissioner Van Miert gave an interim report, in advance of the full report expected on 1 May, on monitoring of the conditions attaching to the six state aid cases agreed by the Council last December—Ilva, Ekostahl, Preital, Siderurgia Nacional, CSI and Sidenor. I was supported by several other member states in underlining the importance the United Kingdom attaches to rigorous monitoring to ensure that the conditions agreed by the December Council are met.

Commissioner Bangemann gave a report on progress towards restructuring of the EC steel industry. There was agreement to prolong until the autumn the support measures—which include enhanced European Coal and Steel Community social aid, market monitoring, a more liberal approach to mergers and joint ventures, and external measures—agreed in February last year. I suggested additional references in the conclusions agreed by the Council to the importance of monitoring of the steel state aid cases and these were accepted.

The Council reached a satisfactory agreement to reduce steadily ECSC lending activities in the run-up to the expiry of the treaty of Paris in 2002. Importantly, it also ensures progress towards phasing out of the ECSC levy before 2002. The agreement by the Council allowed certain loan applications, which have been blocked pending resolution of this issue, to be approved.

There was a wide-ranging debate on industrial competitiveness in the context of the follow-up to the Delors White Paper on growth, competitiveness and employment published last December. I underlined the importance of increased labour market flexibility and reduced labour costs as a means of improving competitiveness, as well as the need to minimise the burden of regulation on business.

The Council agreed conclusions on the textile and clothing industries and a resolution on the automobile industry.

Commissioner Vanni d'Archirafi presented an outline of an integrated programme for small and medium-sized enterprises which sets out areas for joint action with member states and a two-pronged Community contribution relating to improving the environment for SMEs, and some support measures. I reminded the Commission that the main responsibility for SME policy lies with member states but I undertook to consider the proposals when they are spelt out in greater detail. I was able to welcome the importance the Commission was now attaching to deregulation.

To end the Council there was a brief discussion of the Commission's annual report on competition. No votes were taken.

Laboratories

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether operational budgets and targets have been agreed for (a) AEA Technology, (b) the national environmental technology centre, (c) the national physical laboratory, (d) the Laboratory of the Government Chemist and (e) the national engineering laboratory for 1994-95; and how those budgets and targets have changed from those for 1993-94.

Mr. Heseltine: AEA Technology and the national environmental technology centre are part of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority: they are not set separate budgets and targets by my Department. The UKAEA has been set a negative external financing limit of £8·8 million for 1994-95. Other financial targets have yet to be set. In 1993-94, the UKAEA was set a negative external financing limit of £2·1 million; it was also set a 12·1 per cent. average annual return on net assets employed. Its internal budgets are commercially sensitive and are not published.

In the light of the restructuring of the national physical laboratory, the Laboratory of the Government Chemist and the national engineering laboratory to match the downturn in forecast work load, the laboratories' budgets and targets for 1994-95 are still being finalised. A comparison with the budgets and targets that were set for 1993-94 cannot therefore be provided.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he proposes to implement his consultants' recommendation that an overall steering committee and project manager should be appointed for the DTI laboratories.

Mr. Heseltine: Yes.

Government Chemist

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether primary legislation would be required to fully privatise the laboratory of the Government Chemist; and in what form the post of the Government Chemist would survive after privatisation.

Mr. Heseltine: No primary legislation is required to privatise LGC. The post of Government Chemist will continue.

Contracts

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many responses he received to his consultation document on the directive on unfair terms in contracts; and when he proposes to finalise his conclusions, and place legislation before Parliament.

Mr. McLoughlin: I have received 89 such responses. It is intended to lay regulations implementing the EC Directive on Unfair Contract Terms in Consumer Contracts before Parliament in time for them to enter into force, subject to parliamentary approval, by 31 December 1994.

Industry Awards

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish a table showing the total number of applications, the number of successful projects, the number of participating companies and the total sum committed in (a) SMART and (b) SPUR awards; and if he will provide a regional breakdown.

Mr. McLoughlin: The number of applications, the number of successful projects and the sum committed between 1 April 1993 and 31 March 1994 under the small firms merit award for research and technology—SMART—and support for products under research—SPUR—schemes are shown in the tables. Both schemes offer support to single businesses and the number of successful projects is the number of participating companies.

Note: Some successful projects result from applications in the previous financial year.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 4 March, Official Report, columns 891-92, what was the number of responses and applications to (a) the 1994 SMART—small firms merit award for research and technology—scheme and (b) the 1994 Queen's awards.

Mr. McLoughlin: I hope to be able to announce shortly the number of responses and applications to the 1994 SMART scheme. For the 1994 Queen's awards there were 10,733 inquiries and 1,682 applications.

Sizewell B

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which of Sir Frank Layfield's recommendations from the Sizewell B inquiry were accepted by the then Department of Energy.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the decision letter of 12 March 1987, a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House.

Package Holidays

Mr. James Hill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will bring forward legislation to allow deposits in excess of 10 per cent. of the actual purchase price to be charged for goods or services only in circumstances where the seller secures those deposits by means of insurance, bonding or by using a trust account, in a similar way to that required for package holidays by the Package Travel, Package Holidays and Package Tours Regulations 1992, SI 1992, No. 3288, but with improved provision for enforcement.

Mr. McLoughlin: No. Such regulation would be bureaucratic and expensive, and would, through its adverse effect on the cashflow of businesses, be likely to put up prices. This would not be in the long-term interests of the consumer.

Coal Industry

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish the criteria, and procedure of review, to be used to devise the map which will determine the three categories of land use, as specified in the Coal Authority explanatory note.

Mr. Eggar: I intend to make available in due course a draft map of the coalfields indicating the areas in which the terms for access by the coalbed methane industry will be judged. The criteria for delineating the areas will form part of the consultation exercise.

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to harmonise the regulatory framework for seismic testing to identify (a) coal deposits and (b) coalbed methane.

Mr. Eggar: I have no plans to harmonise the regulations for seismic testing at this stage. It is important that the regulatory framework for each activity reflects the needs of the relevant industry. Seismic testing to identify coalbed methane is subject to the Petroleum (Production) Regulations. Under the regulatory regime for the privatised coal industry, those wishing to explore for coal will require the consent of the owner of the coal, which would in most cases be the Coal Authority, to enter that coal. A draft model Coal Authority exploration licence, which indicates the form it is envisaged that licence will take, has been made available for consultation to all interested parties.

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what commitments those companies which are granted methane drainage licences will be required to fulfil in relation to the commencement of mining the coal.

Mr. Eggar: Methane drainage licences are granted to enable those engaged in mining the coal to drain methane in order to make mines safe. There are no commitments in relation to the commencement of coal mining, as the sole purpose of this licence is safety.

Gas Prices

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date he secured a report from the gas regulator concerning arrangements which may affect the price of gas in certain areas.

Mr. Eggar: The Director General of Gas Supply has no duty to report to my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade on gas pricing issues. However, as the President announced on 21 December 1993 the DTI and Ofgas are jointly preparing a consultation paper on the regulation of gas supply after the ending of the statutory monopoly. I expect that this will be published soon.

Eurostat

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what examination he has made of the basis for the figures in the first issue of the Eurostat newsletter "EDICOM/INTRASTAT" for the trade balance between the United Kingdom and France, Germany and Italy shown in the list for the United Kingdom and for each of those countries;

(2) what assessment he has made of recent Eurostat returns in assessing the accuracy of United Kingdom returns of the trade deficit between the United Kingdom and France, Italy and Germany.

Mr. Nelson: I have been asked to reply.

I refer to the answer given by the Paymaster General to the hon. Member on 26 April, 1994 Official Report, column 88.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Royal Palaces

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans there are to close to the public any of the palaces of the Historic Royal Palaces Agency; for what purpose; and for how long.

Mr. Sproat: The 1994-97 corporate plan of the Historic Royal Palaces, which is currently being considered by Ministers, proposes the closure of the state apartments and royal ceremonial dress collection at Kensington palace temporarily for a period of about 18 months, starting no later than autumn 1995, to allow the complete refurbishment, re-presentation and re-interpretation of these parts of the palace, including the updating of fire and security precautions.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage for how many regular publications he was responsible in 1993-94; what was their circulation; and how many were obtainable by subscription.

Mr. Sproat: The Department publishes an annual expenditure plans report, which is a sale publication via Her Majesty's Stationery Office. A short guidebook "A Guide to the Department and its Sponsored Bodies" is updated and distributed free of charge at intervals—circulation 2,500 copies. A number of other annual reports are published each year and the most recent issues of these are:

"Report by the Secretary of State for National Heritage on Library and Information Matters during 1993" (HMSO, HoC 339, £7·10 net).

"Treasure Trove Reviewing Committee Annual Reports 1991-92 and 1992-93".

"Export of Works of Art 1992-93, Thirty-ninth Report of the Reviewing Committee appointed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in December 1952" (HMSO, Cm 2355, £14·45 net).

"Report by the Secretary of State for National Heritage on the Public Lending Right Scheme 1992-93" (HMSO, HoC 61, £7·65 net).

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Commission

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue guidance to the Local Government Commission indicating the evidence he will expect to be put forward in any recommendation for a new unitary local authority of effective arrangements for the provision of personal social services within a new authority and for the co-ordination of such services with health services.

Mr. Curry: Annex B of the Department's policy guidance to the Local Government Commission sets out considerations relevant to a range of local government functions, including personal social services. A copy of the guidance is in the Library.

It is for the Commission to decide what evidence it will submit in support to its recommendations. After receiving the Commission's report on an area it is, however, open to my right hon. Friend to direct the Commission to supply him with additional information.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much has been written off in total in customer debts in the PSA for the 1992-93 appropriation accounts; and if he will give details of the constituent amounts.

Mr. Curry: The 1992-93 PSA Services appropriation account losses statement included the following abandoned claims:

Milton Keynes Community Transport	37,933·53
Conder Projects	8,407·07

In addition, £4,674,767·59 was charged to subhead D10 of the account, in respect of the unrecoverable works debts owed by non Exchequer customers:

Tate Gallery/Tate in the North	3,276,911·64
Imperial War Museum	761,611·42
Natural History Museum	273,138·76
Miscellaneous other debts individually not exceeding £100,000	363,105·77
	4,674,767·59

Boat Dwellers

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to amend the law in respect of the payment of business rates and council tax by boat dwellers whose boats are moored in boatyards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: None.

Energy Conservation Bill

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mrs. Maddock) of 20 April, Official Report, column 531, how many letters he had received which were opposed to the Energy Conservation Bill.

Mr. Atkins: None.

Council Tax

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average council tax per household for each district in England.

Mr. Curry: I have arranged for this information to be placed in the Library of the House.

Ordnance Survey

Mr. Lord: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what performance targets have been set for the Ordnance Survey executive agency in the year 1994-95.

Mr. Atkins: The following performance targets have been set for Ordnance Survey in 1994-95.

1. Recover at least 75 per cent. of the total costs incurred by the Agency.
2. Complete and make available to customers the initial digital conversion of basic scale mapping for the whole of Great Britain by 31 March 1995.
3. Survey and map at the basic scales 886,000 units of change.
4. Despatch 90 per cent. of Land-Line digital map units within six working days of a valid order being received.
5. Despatch 90 per cent. of small scale maps within five working days of a valid order being received.
6. Operate a telephone help line service for customers between 8.30 am and 5.00 pm on working days, a 10 second response time within these hours, and a telephone answering service at all other times.

These targets require a number of challenging improvements over good performance in previous years.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Sleeping Drugs

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what restrictions are in place on advertising drugs available without prescriptioin which are designed to aid sleep; what checks are carried out to ensure that addictive or potentially harmful drugs are not advertised for mass consumption; what health warnings should be given in such advertisements; in what ways regulations or guidelines on the advertisement of such drugs have been amended or relaxed within the past five years; what plans he has to introduce new legislation, statutory orders or guidelines to regulate the promotion of aids to sleep which are available without prescription; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: Licensed medicines may be advertised only under the stringent controls of the Medicines Act 1968 and supporting regulations. These ensure that the advertising is in accordance with the product licence and is not misleading. Products which are available without prescription may be advertised to the public, in compliance with the Medicines (Labelling and Advertising to the Public) Regulations 1978. These regulations prohibit the advertising of a treatment for sleeplessness of insomnia. Advertising for the relief of temporary sleeplessness is permitted.

Medicines which are considered to be addictive or potentially harmful when used without medical supervision are available only on prescription and may not be advertised to the public. Proposed legislation to amend the 1978 regulations in order to implement Council directive 92/28/EEC is currently under consideration.

Agriculture

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will extend the time for claims to be submitted to the agricultural development operational programme to the end of 1994; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: The Commission has ruled that financial support under the Northern Ireland agricultural development operational programme will be limited to payments made to farmers by 31 December 1994. In order to comply with this condition it was necessary for the Department to require all claims for grant to be submitted by 30 June 1994 so as to allow sufficient time for claims to be verified and payments issued to farmers by 31 December.

Because of the need to ensure that all payments are made by 31 December 1994 it is not possible to extend the time for claims to be submitted.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total salary of the CSA chief executive in 1993-94; which part of that figure relates to performance; and what is the maximum payment possible under the performance payment part of the salary agreement.

Mr. Burt: The current basic salary of the Child Support Agency chief executive is £48,520 plus London weighting of £1,776. Details of the total remuneration, including any performance bonus, will appear in the agency's annual report for 1993-94. However it is not the policy of the Department to give details of chief executive performance pay arrangements.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the total sum collected by the Child Support Agency in maintenance payments in the first year of operation; and of this, what sum went to parents with care and their children and how much to the Treasury via reduced benefit payments.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Donald Dewar, dated 28 April 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the latest estimate of the total sum collected by the Child Support Agency in maintenance payments in the first year of the Agency's operations.

To the end of February 1994, £186 million had been collected. This includes £155 million paid direct from absent parents to parents with care, which has offset benefit spending, and £31 million paid through the Agency's collection service. Of the latter figure, £1·8 million has been passed on to parents with care, and £24·4 million has offset benefit spending. The balance remained in the Agency's account awaiting allocation.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) in how many cases in which the absent parent had not been paying maintenance at the time the inquiry form was issued by the Child Support Agency a maintenance assessment had been finalised at the latest date for which figures are available; and what percentage that is of the total number of cases where the absent parent was not paying maintenance when the inquiry form was issued;

(2) in how many cases where an inquiry form has been issued by the Child Support Agency to an absent parent the parent concerned was not paying maintenance on a regular basis at the time the form was issued; and what percentage that represents of all cases in which an inquiry form has been issued at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Donald Dewar, dated 28 April 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the total number of maintenance payments made to the Child Support Agency.

At 28 February 1994, 420,600 absent parents had been issued with maintenance enquiry forms and 188,600 maintenance assessments had been completed. Although the Agency does not keep detailed figures on the proportion of these cases in which maintenance was not already being paid, we estimate that some 60 per cent. of cases taken on during this period were cases where maintenance was not previously in payment.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the housing benefit management information system annual 1 per cent. sample was last updated; what plans he has to update those data; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: The data contained in the annual one per cent. sample are regularly reviewed to reflect changes to existing policies or the introduction of new benefits. It is expected that the data contained in the May 1993 sample will be available this summer.

Income Support

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the circumstances in which a deduction from income support can be made by the Benefits Agency, in the order in which they rank for payment, and the total deduction that can be made as a percentage of the total income support payment.

Mr. Burt: Payments may be made direct from income support to certain third party creditors in the circumstances specified in schedules 9 and 9A to the Social Security (Claims and Payments) Regulations 1987, SI No. 1968. Also, deduction may be made for payment of unpaid community charge, council tax and fines and recovery of overpayments of benefit under the appropriate regulatory provisions—SI Nos. 507/1989 and 545/1990, 494/1993, 2182/1993 and 664/1988 respectively. Social fund loans are also recoverable by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, through deductions from income support. The rules governing limits on deductions and the priority order for deductions are contained in paragraphs 8 and 9 of schedule 9.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients of income support in England, Scotland, Wales and Britain there are; and what percentage of the total had deductions made from benefit for social fund repayments and fuel bills in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

	Number of cases	Percentage
England
Deductions for fuel	185,000	4·3
Deductions for Social Fund repayment	458,000	10·7
Deductions for fuel and Social Fund	84,000	2·0
Number of Income Support recipients	4,282,000	100·0
Wales
Deductions for fuel	17,000	5·9
Deductions for Social Fund repayment	34,000	11·9
Deductions for fuel and Social Fund	8,000	2·8
Number of Income Support recipients	287,000	100·0
Scotland
Deductions for fuel	42,000	8·1
Deductions for Social Fund repayment	94,000	18·1
Deductions for fuel and Social Fund	22,000	4·2
Number of Income Support recipients	519,000	100·0
Great Britain
Deductions for fuel	243,000	4·8
Deductions for Social Fund repayment	586,000	11·5
Deductions for fuel and Social Fund	114,000	2·2
Number of Income Support recipients	5,088,000	100·0

Source: Income Support Statistics Annual Enquiry, May 1992.

Notes:

1. The figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand, percentages are correct to one decimal place.
2. Fuel costs include payments for gas and/or electricity. Deductions may be for current charges only or may include the standard amount in respect of arrears.
3. There will be a degree of overlap in the deductions figures in that people with deductions for fuel costs may also have a deduction for repayment of a social fund loan. Numbers with fuel cost deductions and those with social fund repayment deductions do not therefore exactly total.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many parliamentary questions, in the period November 1992 to March 1993, were answered with the response that the information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost; and how many were referred on to an agency chief executive.

Mr. Hague: In the stipulated five-month period a total of 1,183 questions were asked of this Department. The POLIS database in the Library has identified 65 questions as not answered on the grounds of disproportionate cost or because the information was not held centrally. Agency chief executives replied to 150 questions.

Severe Hardship Unit, Glasgow

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what training has been provided for local staff in handling the problems associated with 16 and 17-year-old applicants following the closure of the severe hardship unit in Glasgow; and what other additional resources have been made available to assist staff to deal with the changes which result;

(2) what savings he expects to accrue to his Department as a result of the closure of the severe hardship unit in Glasgow.

Mr. Burt: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Mike Watson, dated 28 April 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions concerning suggestions that the Severe Hardship Claims Unit (SHCU) in Glasgow is being closed. The SHCU unit is not being closed, but there is to be a change in emphasis away from the SHCU to the Benefits Agency (BA) Districts.

Following the comments in the 8th Report of the Social Security Advisory Committee, recommendations were made about the claims procedures for discretionary awards for 16/17 year old customers. As a result, from the 4 April 1994 decisions on the majority of these claims will be made by locally based BA staff, rather than by contacting the SHCU. The SHCU will, however, be required to make decisions on the more complex cases and those where the District Office feel that a severe hardship payment should not be made.

Before the process of devolving this work commenced, training for the handling of this type of claim was revised. All staff authorised to make decisions about the award of benefit to 16/17 year old customers must complete the new training package before they can carry out these duties. To ensure that all staff are fully trained the SHCU is providing a complete service to all offices until 2 May 1994. In addition, further guidance is available in the form of a Handbook, "Income Support for 16/17 year olds" which has been recently revised and updated. The revised Handbook was issued to all of the BA's District Offices in March 1994 and a copy of it has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

There will be no increase in the workload for locally based BA staff, but in fact a small administrative saving, calculated to be 10 staff years. Instead of having to contact the SHCU in Glasgow, staff will make decisions locally immediately following an interview, thereby leading to an improved service for 16/17 year olds.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Contributions Agency

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will publish the revised framework document for the Contributions Agency.

Mr. Hague: The Contributions Agency's revised framework document has been published today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

WALES

Forestry Commission Land

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is the programme for the disposal of Forestry Commission land in Wales from 1 April 1989 to 31 March 2000;

(2) if he will make it his policy not to allow the disposal programme of Forestry Commission land in Wales to be increased without his permission.

Sir Wyn Roberts: In the five years from 1 April 1989 to 31 March 1994 the Forestry Commission sold some 5,500 hectares of forest land in Wales and currently expects to sell about a further 9,000 hectares by the year 2000. Ministers asked the commission to dispose of 100,000 hectares of forest land in Great Britain between 1989 and the end of the century. The commission is responsible for selecting properties for sale in accordance with criteria laid down by Ministers. Any change to the overall disposals programme would be subject to the agreement of my right hon. Friend.

Consultants

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost of Touche Ross consultancy exercise, which included the questionnaire sent out on 1 February to all school governors in Wales; if Touche Ross were awarded the contract as a result of competitive tender; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Details of the survey's costs were provided in my reply to the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley) on 17 February 1994 at column 947. Touche Ross Management Consultants was appointed to carry out the survey following a tendering exercise in accordance with standard procedures.

Grant-maintained Schools (Promotion)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost of the recent conference held in the Copthorne hotel, Calverhouse Cross, to promote grant-maintained schools in Cardiff and the Vale.

Mr. Redwood: The total cost of the three conferences on grant-maintained status held last year was £46,210. It is not possible to identify separately within this figure the costs incurred in relation to the conference held in Cardiff.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) part-time and (b) full-time jobs were created in Wales in 1993 in (i) the manufacturing industry, (ii) the service industry and (iii) all industries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 27 April 1994]: Comprehensive information on the number of jobs created is not available. According to the Employment Department's latest quarterly estimates series the change in the number of employees in employment is shown in the following table.

Change in number of employees in employment, December 1992-December 1993: Wales

	Part-time	Full-time
Manufacturing industry	-1,100	+10,600
Service industry	+2,500	+1,900
All industries	+1,400	+5,300

SCOTLAND

Land Grants

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the amounts (a) applied for and (b) received by the Scottish Office from the European Community for land grants relating to industrial regional aid and the amounts paid to Scottish applicants for land grants for each year since 1975.

Mr. Stewart: The Scottish Office does not itself undertake land renewal work. Local authorities and local enterprise companies do, however, carry out and assist with land renewal. Such activities are normally eligible to compete for European regional development fund grant if the work is carried out in an area designated under the European structural funds. Detailed records of projects are not kept centrally either for applications or grant received but it is considered that such work would form only a small part of any programme.

Education Statistics

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of those aged 16 to 18 years in Scotland are in full-time education; and how many are in each educational sector.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The latest available information is in respect of 1992.

16 to 18-year-olds in full-time education in Scotland, January 1992[1]

	Number (thousands)	Percentage of population in age group
All full-time education	82·3	41 of which
School	40·7	20
Vocational further education	16·9	9
Higher education	24·7	12

[1] Age as at 31 August 1991.

Jobs

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the percentage of new jobs likely to be created by the end of the decade that will be jobs traditionally carried out by women.

Mr. Stewart: Information in the form requested is not available.

Playgrounds and Playing Fields

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many schools in Scotland have sold playgrounds and playing fields since restrictions were lifted.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information is not recorded centrally on disposals by local authorities of school playgrounds and school playing fields or other land and buildings held for educational purposes. There has been no recent change in the statutory requirements governing the provision to be made for school playgrounds and school playing fields in Scotland set out in the School Premises (General Requirements and Standards) (Scotland) Regulations 1967.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of the income in 1994-95 for each district council in Scotland comes directly from (a) central Government sources, (b) council tax and (c) other sources.

Mr. Stewart: Information about local authority income from "other sources" is not held centrally. The figures for aggregate external finance—AEF—and income from the council tax are given in the table.

	AEF per cent.	Council tax per cent.
Borders	87·2	12·8

Note:

1. AEF support includes Revenue Support Grant, Distributable amount of NDRI and Specific Grants (except Urban Programme specific grant, figures for which are not readily available).

2. Council Tax is inclusive of amounts of Council Tax Benefit met by grant from the Department of Social Security.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much Government grant per head of population was allocated to each district council in Scotland for 1994-95.

Mr. Stewart: The information is in the table.

Notes:

1. AEF support includes revenue support grant and specific grants (except urban programme specific grant, figures for which are not readily available). Non-domestic rate income is not distributed to district councils.
2. AEF per head of population calculated using the register general for Scotland's 1992 mid-year estimates of total population.

Labour Statistics

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of (a) the total work force and (b) working women are in the service sector.

Mr. Stewart: For December 1993, the latest date for which information is available, it is estimated that 73 per cent. of all employees in employment in Scotland worked in the service sector. The percentage of female employees in employment who work in the service sector is estimated to be 85 per cent.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many women workers there were in 1990 and at the latest date available; and how many of these were in part-time employment.

Mr. Stewart: For December 1990, it is estimated that there were 960,900 female employees in employment in Scotland, of whom 419,700 were in part-time employment. For December 1993, the latest date for which information is available, it is estimated that there were 994,500 female employees in employment of whom 447,800 were in part-time employment.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of average male earnings is earned by women (a) manual and (b) non-manual workers in the service sector.

Mr. Stewart: Information from the new earnings survey, at April 1993, shows that the average weekly earnings of full-time non-manual women in the service sector is equivalent to 68 per cent. of the average for non-manual men workers in the service sector. The average weekly earnings of full-time manual women workers in the service sector is equivalent to 67 per cent. of the average for manual men workers. These estimates are based on average gross weekly earnings of full-time employees on adult rates in Scotland whose pay was unaffected by absence—source: Employment Department.

Leisure Activities

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what amount was spent in Scotland in 1992 and 1993 on leisure activities for under-16s and those aged 16 to 21.

Sir Hector Monro: The information requested is not held centrally.

School Meals

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will investigate the nutritional standards of schools meals in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We have no plans to do so. It is for education authorities, which are responsible for the administration of the school meal service, to decide the content and standard of school meals.

Government Grant

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much Government grant was allocated per head of population in each regional and islands council in Scotland in 1994-95.

Mr. Stewart: The information is given in the table.

	Total AEF per head of population £
Borders	928
Central	817
Dumfries and Galloway	911
Fife	821
Grampian	786
Highland	1,029
Lothian	778
Strathclyde	883
Tayside	850
Orkney	1,814
Shetland	2,063
Western Isles	2,254

Note:
1. AEF support includes Revenue Support Grant, Distributable amount of NDRI and Specific Grants (except Urban Programme specific grant, figures for which are not readily available).
2. AEF per head of population calculated using the Register General for Scotland's 1992 mid-year estimates of total population.

Historic Scotland

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the key performance targets he has set for Historic Scotland for 1994-95.

Mr. Lang: I have set Historic Scotland the following key performance targets for 1994-95:

	Target
Protecting the built heritage
i. Number of ancient monuments of national importance to be scheduled.	350
ii. Number of listed building resurvey units to be completed.	150
iii. Number of historic building repair grants accepted	137
iv. Conservation of monuments in care.	reduce maintenance backlog
Promoting and representing the built heritage
i. Number of visitors to monuments incare.	£2·4 million
ii. Total income.	£7·9 million
Management
i. Value for money savings on maintenance of monuments in care.	3·5 per cent.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Criminal Cases

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Attorney-General if he will include in the revised code for the Crown prosecutors and in the statement on the treatment of victims and witnesses by the Crown Prosecution Service a section on notification to or consultation with victims or their families where discontinuance of a serious case is contemplated.

The Attorney-General: In general, it is the responsibility of the police to keep victims or their families informed of decisions by which they are affected. This approach is set out in the victims charter and was supported by the Royal Commission on criminal justice which reported last year. If a case is to be discontinued, the CPS will, wherever practicable, consult the police in advance. The CPS seeks to ensure that the police are clear about the reasons for any proposed discontinuance so that information can be passed on to the victim and their respective interests taken into account when deciding whether proceedings would be in the public interest.

A draft of the revised code for Crown prosecutors is currently being considered by interested parties on the criminal justice system including victim support. The director is hoping to publish in the early summer.

The CPS keeps under review its statement on the treatment of victims and witnesses. There will be an opportunity to consider whether it should contain information about the termination of cases when the statement is next revised. The suggestion put forward by my hon. Friend has been drawn to the attention of the director.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Occupied Territories

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress being made in the Israel-Palestine Liberation Organisation talks in Cairo, with particular reference to settlements, release of prisoners, security forces and the powers of the Palestinian judiciary.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We understand good progress is being made at the talks in Cairo. Settlements are a final status issue. The Israel-PLO declaration of principles makes it clear that it is to be discussed as soon as possible during the interim period of five years leading to final status, but not later than the beginning of the third year. The interim period starts upon Israeli withdrawal from Gaza and Jericho. Israeli negotiators have stated that Israel will release 5,000 of the remaining 8,400 Palestinian prisoners. They have however said that they will not release prisoners who are members of Hamas. Agreement has been reached on a Palestinian police force of 9,000 men for Gaza and Jericho. Judicial issues are still under discussion.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current position of the Israeli Government on withdrawal from the Golan Heights.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Prime Minister Rabin has said that any "significant" withdrawal would be dependent upon a referendum in Israel.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Israel's current position on the removal of settlements on the Golan Heights.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Prime Minister Rabin has stated publicly that he would be prepared to evacuate settlements anywhere in the occupied territories if that were necessary for peace.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Palestinian police are scheduled to enter the Gaza strip and Jericho; and what representations he has been making to the Government of Israel to make this date as early as possible.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Palestinian police are due to assume their duties in Gaza and Jericho once an agreement on Israeli withdrawal is signed. We have emphasised to both sides the importance we attach to rapid conclusion of this agreement.

Lin Qi Qun

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 25 April, Official Report, column 12, with regard to correspondence concerning Lin Qi Qun, if he will investigate the state of affairs in his office which has led him to the statement in his answer that his officials have asked for copies following the faxing of such copies to his office three weeks before; if he will take steps to improve procedures in his office following its loss of the original correspondence last December and several reminders sent following that date; and if he will now reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton without further delay.

Mr. Hurd: I have written to the right hon. Member.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Aid Distribution

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to review the distribution of Government aid to overseas countries and to prevent such aid from being absorbed by officials of recipient countries.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The possibility of diversion of aid for illicit purposes is considered at all stages in the planning and administration of the aid programme. Most procurement is undertaken by ODA's Overseas Appointments and Contract Department or through registered British procurement agents subject to ODA monitoring, with goods and services generally obtained from United Kingdom sources. Implementation of projects and programmes in the recipient country is, where appropriate, supervised by British consultants or technical co-operation officers on contract to the ODA. Progress at all stages is monitored by ODA advisers, often located in regional offices for more direct and frequent access.

These mechanisms and procedures are continually reviewed to ensure that aid continues to achieve its intended objectives.

Sudan

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what part of the further tranche of £15 million provided for in relief aid to the Horn of Africa will be applied to Sudan; and if he will give details of the work it will support.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We expect to spend about £5 million in Sudan, subject to need and our ability to deliver humanitarian assistance. It is available to support the activities of non-governmental organisations and UN agencies including the provision of shelter for the displaced, drugs, water and supplementary feeding.

Nigeria

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Nigerian Government concerning the current situation of the Ogoni people in Nigeria.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have consistently underlined our wish to see good government and respect for human rights for all the people of Nigeria.

HEALTH

Nurses

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her estimate of the current shortfall in national health service nursing staff.

Mr. Sackville: It is for local employers to determine the level of nursing staff they require.

Public Appointments

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the members, occupations and other interests of (a) the National Blood Authority and (b) the NHS Supplies Authority together with the remuneration expenses, travel, pension and any other allowances or benefits relating to the chair or non-executive membership of each.

Mr. Sackville: The information available will be placed in the Library.

Over-65s

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of NHS funds were spent on those over 65 years in the last year for which figures are available; and what proportion of public health care funds was spent on those over 65 years old in each other country of the EC.

Dr. Mawhinney: It is estimated that around 40 per cent. of gross current expenditure on hospital and community health services in England during 1990-91 was attributable to people aged 65 years and over, who represent approximately 16 per cent. of the population. Figures for other European Community countries are not available centrally.

Paracetamol Overdose

Mr. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of admissions to accident and emergency facilities is caused by paracetamol overdose.

Mr. Sackville: The information is not available for accident and emergency attenders. However, the number of hospital in-patients cases associated with poisoning by paracetamol are recorded in a wider category which also includes poisoning by acentanilide and phenacetin. In 1990-91 there were 30,479 finished consultant episodes where poisoning by these substances was shown as the primary diagnosis.

Prescription Charges (Asthmatics)

Mr. Hoon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what monitoring her Department has undertaken of the affordability of prescription charges for asthmatics;

(2) what representations her Department has received about asthmatics' ability to pay prescription charges.

Dr. Mawhinney: No specific monitoring is undertaken. We periodically receive representations about extending the list of medical conditions which confer exemption from prescription charges to include other illnesses, including asthma. Charge remission available under the national health service low income scheme and prescription pre-payment certificates ensure that no one need be deterred for financial reasons from obtaining necessary medication.

Data Protection

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of general practitioners (a) hold computerised records and (b) are registered under the Data Protection Act 1984.

Mr. Sackville: According to a survey conducted on behalf of the Department in 1993 an estimated 79 per cent. of general practices possess a computer to hold practice records, of which 90 per cent. use the computer for recording some clinical information about patients. Information about registration under the Data Protection Act is not available centrally.

Contraceptive Services

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many contraceptive claim forms were submitted by general practitioners in each of the last 10 years and in each month of 1993-94.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information about the number of contraceptive claim forms submitted by general practitioners is not available in the form requested.

Press Conferences

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many press conferences she and each Minister in her Department have held in the last six months.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Health Literature Line

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost of the health literature line, including the cost of producing and sending the leaflets, in each year since 1990-91.

Mr. Sackville: The cost for 1993-94 is £263,346. Information on costs for the years 1990-91 to 1992-93 and on producing and sending the leaflets is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

BCG Vaccinations

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 30 March, Official Report, columns 890-1, if she will list the 31 districts which do not offer Bacille-Calmette-Guérin vaccination to neonates.

Mr. Sackville: No. In 1991 the Public Health Laboratory Service's communicable disease surveillance centre carried out a national survey into the policies and practices of district health authorities for BCG immunisation. The information was collected "in confidence" so as to ensure that the results were as complete as possible. Since 1991 the Department of Health has restated its guidance on BCG immunisation and many health authorities have reviewed their policies.

NHS Property (Disposal)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the redundant NHS hospitals that have been disposed of without planning permission since 1987.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 31 March at column 1038.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list the regional health authorities pre-1 April that were obliged to consult the Valuation Office for professional advice on the disposal of national health service property;

(2) under what circumstances regional health authorities should consult, before 1 April, the Valuation Office even though they are untied.

Mr. Sackville: Regional health authorities which were untied from the district valuer, prior to April 1994, are required to secure the recommendation of the district valuer in respect of acquisitions or disposals where, at the outset, the value appeared to be more than £5 million.

Regional health authorities which were not untied as of April 1994 were as follows:

Mersey RHA
West Midlands RHA
North East Thames RHA
North West Thames RHA
South Western RHA

Prescriptions

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 14 April, Official Report, column 295, when she intends to issue guidance to family health services authorities on private prescriptions.

Dr. Mawhinney: Guidance will be issued shortly.

Departmental Policy

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for City of Chester (Mr. Brandreth) of 18 April, Official Report, column 396, regarding her plans for the work of her Department, how she intends to strengthen the arrangements for controlling communicable diseases and other health hazards;

(2) pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for City of Chester (Mr. Brandreth) of 18 April, Official Report, column 396, regarding her plans for the work of her Department, what new information she will be providing on communicable diseases and other health hazards.

Mr. Sackville: The Government remain committed to preventing communicable diseases and reducing health hazards.

Joint guidance from the Departments of Health and Environment, HSG(93)56 "Public Health Responsibilities of the NHS Roles of Others", was issued on 24 November 1993 to provide firm guidance on communicable disease control arrangements. Copies of the guidance are available in the Library.

A joint Department of Health/Public Health Laboratory Service working group is currently reviewing and extending the guidance issued to the national health service in 1988 about hospital infection control, with the aim of issuing revised guidelines to the NHS in the autumn.

Childhood immunisation uptake rates are now at record levels and the incidence of childhood diseases are at their lowest ever levels. The memorandum "Immunisation against Infectious Disease", which provides guidance on all matters concerning immunisation, is currently being updated and a new edition will be sent to all doctors and other health care professionals involved in immunisation. Details of the plans to introduce the new tetanus/diphtheria booster dose for teenagers will be announced shortly. We recently issued guidance to the health service on "Aids/HIV—Infected Health Care Workers" and "Protecting Health Care Workers and Patients from Hepatitis B Infection". Copies of these publications are available in the Library. We are aware of the concerns about the recent small increase in cases of tuberculosis. We are currently funding a survey by the Public Health Laboratory Service into notification of tuberculosis and recently my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health established an inter-departmental working group to consider all aspects of tuberculosis.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for City of Chester (Mr. Brandreth) of 18 April, Official Report, column 396, regarding her plans for the work of her Department, how she plans to implement the open government code of practice throughout her Department.

Mr. Sackville: Two documents on how the code of practice will operate for the Department of Health have been produced: one is a guide to the public, the other is guidance issued to all staff in the Department. Copies of each will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for City of Chester (Mr. Brandreth) of 18 April, Official Report, column 396, regarding her plans for the work of her Department, what further developments in the internal market she intends to secure.

Dr. Mawhinney: We propose to secure continued improvements in national health service patient care and choice by strengthening purchasing. We are preparing legislation to enable district health authorities and family health services authorities to merge, completing the move to trust status of providers, promoting fundholding so that all general practitioners who are able and wish to can become fundholders and ensuring that the internal market operates to increase competition between providers for the benefit of patients.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for City of Chester (Mr. Brandreth) of 18 April, Official Report, column 396, regarding her plans for the work of her Department, what plans she is making to ensure that amendments are made to the Mental Health Act 1983.

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 2 March at column 264, with regard to supervised discharge and extended leave. We have also announced our intention to amend the provisions of the Mental Health Act 1983 relating to the return of detained patients who go absent without leave, and are now considering the responses to our consultation paper on this subject.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for City of Chester (Mr. Brandreth) of 18 April, Official Report, column 396, regarding her plans for the work of her Department, what timetable she envisages for the establishment of the Medical Devices Directorate as a "next steps" agency.

Mr. Sackville: The matter is currently under consideration. We hope to be able to make an announcement shortly.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for City of Chester (Mr. Brandreth) of 18 April, Official Report, column 396, regarding her plans for the work of her Department, what communication strategies she intends to implement; and what budget she has given this priority.

Mr. Sackville: Communications with national health service staff and with other agencies involved in the planning and provision of health and social services is an important and ongoing part of the work of the NHS executive.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for City of Chester (Mr. Brandreth) of 18 April, Official Report, column 396, regarding her plans for the work of her Department, what steps she is taking to introduce new adoption legislation.

Mr. Bowis: As stated in the White Paper "Adoption: The Future" the Government will bring forward new adoption legislation as soon as the legislative programme allows.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for City of Chester (Mr. Brandreth) of 18 April, Official Report, column, 396, regarding her plans for the work of her Department, what steps she is taking to ensure joint working between health and local authorities.

Mr. Bowis: Health authorities and local authorities have a statutory duty to co-operate to secure and advance the health and welfare of the people of England and Wales. An important aspect of this is the joint commissioning of community care services by health and local authorities. Work is in hand to develop practical guidance to encourage this.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for City of Chester (Mr. Brandreth) of 18 April, Official Report, column 396, regarding her plans for the work of her Department, what new safeguards she will be introducing to ensure that medicines and medical devices sold or in use in the United Kingdom meet standards of safety.

Mr. Sackville: A range of controls to ensure the safety, quality and efficacy of medicines already exists under powers set out in the Medicines Act 1968. These will be developed further with the coming into force of new European Community procedures—"Future Systems"—from 1 January 1995, which provide for high standards of pre- and post-licensing control across the European Community.

With respect to medical devices, from 1 January 1993 a series of three medical devices directives regulating the safety and marketing of medical devices throughout the European Community started to come into effect in the United Kingdom. The directives will eventually cover all medical devices on sale or in use in the United Kingdom. They are designed to ensure safety and performance and to prohibit the marketing of any devices which compromise the health and safety of patients, users, and where appropriate, any other persons.

Lewisham Hospital

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she intends to make with regard to Lewisham hospital if her proposed merger of Guy's and St. Thomas's hospitals goes ahead; what increase she envisages in the number of accident and emergency cases to be dealt with at Lewisham hospital; and how many additional beds Lewisham hospital will require to meet the increase.

Dr. Mawhinney: The South East London health authority is working with Guy's and St. Thomas's hospital trust, King's healthcare national health service trust and Lewisham hospital NHS trust to assess the likely changes in patient flows both in attendances at emergency departments and in-patient admissions as a result of proposed changes in the Guy's and St. Thomas's trust. Proposals will be the subject of public consultation later this year.

Treatment Priorities

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received in relation to the report of the Association of Community Health Councils of England and Wales with respect to the differentiation in levels of priority for treatment other than in relation to clinical need; what consultations she has had with the National Association of Health Authorities and Trusts with respect to the contents of the report; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: We will study the Association of Community Health Councils of England and Wales report carefully. By ensuring value for money, fundholders are making more resources available to the national health service; savings are ploughed back into patient care, waiting lists are reduced, and services are made more accessible, for example through out-patient clinics held in the surgery. We regularly meet the National Association of Health Authorities and Trusts to discuss how we can build on the success of NHS reforms.

Private Finance

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list all those national health service projects worth over £250,000 which have been financed by private sector money since February 1993.

Mr. Sackville: [pursuant to his reply, 14 April 1994, c. 293]: I regret that there was an error in my previous reply. The amended table lists 19 schemes, omitting United Leeds Teaching Hospitals national health service trust which was incorrecly included.

National health service projects using private capital over £1 million approved since February 1993

- Ealing, Hammersmith and Hounslow Health Agency: lease of office accommodation.
- Yorkshire Regional Health Authority: clinical waste incineration.
- Hastings and Rother NHS Trust: Conquest Hospital staff residences.
- West Middlesex Hospital: endoscopy unit.
- North Bedfordshire Health Authority: residential accommodation at Steppingley and Biggleswade.
- Bolton Health Authority: clinical waste incineration.
- New River Health Authority: lease of office accommodation.
- Leicester Mental Health Services: lease of new Trust Headquarters.
- William Harvey Hospital (Ashford): clinical waste incineration.
- Barnet Health Authority: residential accommodation in Hendon.
- Plymouth and Torbay Health Authority: clinical waste incineration.
- Kensington, Chelsea and Westminster Health Authority: staff residences at Carlton Gate.
- East Sussex Health Authority: residential accommodation for continuing care of the elderly.

Brent and Harrow Health Authority: provision of residential accommodation.
Doncaster Healthcare NHS Trust: clinical waste incineration.
Kent and Canterbury Hospitals NHS Trust: staff accommodation.
St. James' NHS Trust, Leeds: combined heat and power plant.
Hertfordshire Health Agency: lease of office accommodation.
Hillingdon Health Agency: lease of office accommodation.

TREASURY

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

Mr. Nelson: The percentage of Asian and black people who took up public appointments made by the Treasury in 1993 are 5·5 per cent. and nil respectively.

The data on the ethnic origin of public appointees are collected in confidence. I am therefore unable to list their names.

Fuel (VAT)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what amounts of advance payments for fuel had been paid by Government Departments as at 31 March.

Sir John Cope: Government Departments were already subject to VAT on their business use of fuel. Hence expenditure on fuel and power by Government Departments was largely unaffected by the extension of VAT to domestic fuel and power.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received from (a) individuals and (b) organisations on the imposition of VAT on domestic energy since the original announcement that it would be levied; and how many in each case were in favour of the increase.

Sir John Cope: I have received a large number of representations on fuel and power, but the records that are kept do not give sufficient information to answer the question in detail.

Fraud (EC Grants)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost to United Kingdom public funds of fraud involving grants from the EC for which investigations have been completed and charges upheld; and what is his estimate of the cost to public funds for cases which are still under investigation.

Sir John Cope: It is not possible to give an estimate of the cost to the United Kingdom of EC budget fraud either in the case of investigations that have been completed or in the case of those that are continuing. The cost depends on a number of factors, including: how much was actually paid from Community funds; how much has been recovered or offset from other expenditure; where the fraud took place—that is, in the United Kingdom, other member state or third country; and whether it involved expenditure from the budget or, for example, evasion of duties depriving the Community of revenue.

What is, however, clear is that fraud against the financial interests of the Community, and therefore of taxpayers in member states, is at an unacceptable level. The United Kingdom is at the forefront of the campaign to reduce fraud and otherwise improve financial management in the Community.

Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what effect he expects the change in the trade deficit consignment on the reassessment of the Intrastat calculations to have on the exchange rate; when he expects the revised figures to be published; and what preparations he is making to safeguard the pound sterling.

Mr. Nelson: With regard to the publication of any necessary adjustments to the estimates of the balance of United Kingdom visible trade, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 18 April 1994, Official Report, column 364.

Sterling's exchange rate is floating and it is not my practice to make predictions about its level. Movements in sterling's exchange rate form part of our continuing assessment of monetary conditions but we do not set target rates.

VAT

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the gross and net yields for value added tax for 1992 and 1993 and the first quarter of 1994.

Sir John Cope: The yields for value added tax gross and net of repayments are as follows:

	1992	1993	[1]1994
Gross	63·5	64·5	17·3
Net	37·7	37·8	10·7

[1] First quarter.

It should be noted that the difference between the gross and net figures given above relates only to actual repayments to traders.

Privatised Companies (Debt)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for the disposal of some or all of the Treasury's holding of debt in privatised companies.

Mr. Dorrell: The Treasury has agreed to the repurchase of debt issued to Her Majesty's Government by Eastern Electricity plc. The debt is:

59	[2]12·365

[1] Due September 1999.
[2] Due September 2008.

Eastern Electricity plc will today pay Her Majesty's Treasury £144·827 million to repurchase these bonds.

As announced on 1 March, the Treasury is planning to dispose in 1994-95 of part of its holding of debt in BT plc and certain of the privatised electricity companies, as part of its strategy for meeting its published proceeds target of £5·5 billion. The Treasury is considering its strategy for this debt disposal.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Live Animals

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, if she will make it her policy to ensure that the transport of live animals will be banned in an effective way from the United Kingdom as soon as possible.

Mr. Soames: A ban on the export of animals would be illegal under the treaty of Rome. The Government are pressing the Community to adopt high standards of protection for all animals during transport.

Primates

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to her answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 750, whether arrangements for approval of establishments as sources of primates under directive 92/65/EEC have now been put in place by agriculture departments in Great Britain.

Mr. Soames: Yes, we have written to such establishments setting out the procedures for approval under directive 92/65.

EMPLOYMENT

Earnings

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the current average weekly, and hourly earnings, exclusive of overtime, for each year since 1989, of full-time employees in the categories (a) male manual, (b) male non-manual, (c) female manual, (d) female non-manual, (e) male and female manual and (f) male and female non-manual in (i) Doncaster, (ii) Barnsley, (iii) Rotherham and (iv) Sheffield; and what are the equivalent national figures.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The available information closest to that requested is for the metropolitan county of South Yorkshire.

Information for South Yorkshire and for Great Britain can be found in the "New Earnings Survey" reports for each of the years requested. Information for manual and non-manual men and women workers separately can be found in tables 108, 109, 111 and 112 of part E and information for manual and non-manual men and women workers combined in table X5 of part A. Copies of these publications can be found in the Library.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many parliamentary questions, in the period November 1992 to March 1993, were answered with the response that the information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost; and how many were referred on to an agency chief executive.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The number of answers given to parliamentary questions from November 1992 to March 1993, recorded on the POLIS database as including a reference to disproportionate cost or to information not held or collected centrally was 32.

During the same period, the number of questions referred for answer to the Employment Service, the only agency in the Department with responsibility for replying to parliamentary questions on operational matters was 67.

This represents 3·2 and 6·8 per cent. respectively of all parliamentary questions replied to by the Department in the same period.

South Thames Training and Enterprise Council

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which organisations in Southwark had contracts with South Thames training and enterprise council in 1993-94 and will have no contract with South Thames training and enterprise council in 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: South Thames training and enterprise council has not renewed contracts in 1994-95 with seven of the training organisations in Southwark that it contracted with in 1993-94. The organisations that did not have their contracts renewed are as follows:

Caribbean Teachers Association
Community Youth Provisions
Euroworld Data Ltd.
Mother Goose Nurseries
South Bank University
Southwark College
Walworth Garden Services Ltd.

TECs are responsible for planning and arranging Government-funded training and enterprise programmes. TECs uses their knowledge of the local labour market to help them determine the range and nature of such training and enterprise initiatives that will best meet the needs of both individuals and businesses in their area. These initiatives are delivered through a wide range of colleges, training providers and enterprise agencies. It is for TECs to decide the most appropriate organisations with which to contract.

European Social Fund

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 14 April, Official Report, column 288, what has been the earliest date in each of the past five years on which any voluntary organisations have been told whether they have had funding for European social fund projects starting on 1 January of that year.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The earliest date on which any voluntary sector project received notification that it had approval for ESF funding is shown was:

in 1990—December 1990;
in 1991—10 May 1991;
in 1992—13 January 1992;
in 1993—19 January 1993.

These figures relate to projects approved in the period 1990-93 under objectives 3 and 4. Before 1990, the European Commission considered projects for approval and the data are not held.

Water Pollution, Worcester

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what role the Health and Safety Executive played in the water pollution incident in Worcester on 15 April; what advice it gave to other public or private bodies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The water pollution incident in Worcester on 15 April is being investigated by the National Rivers Authority and Shropshire county council. The NRA has the primary responsibility for enforcing legislation on water pollution liaising with the Health and Safety Executive as necessary. The HSE has given no advice to public or private bodies but is being kept informed of developments.

Health and Safety

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many investigations undertaken by the Health and Safety Executive into accidents, incidents and dangerous occurrences in the north-west and in each of the standard administrative regions of England concluded that employee fatigue had played a role.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information is not available in the form requested.

Labour Statistics

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give for (a) the Taunton travel-to-work area, (b) Somerset (c) the south-west region and (d) the United Kingdom the total numbers of (i) males and (ii) females unemployed for (1) May 1979, (2) June 1983, (3) August 1986, (4) June 1987, (5) March 1991, (6) March 1992, (7) March 1993 and (8) March 1994.

Miss Widdecombe: Seasonally adjusted claimant unemployment figures are available regionally from April 1974. For travel-to-work areas and counties, only unadjusted unemployment figures are available and these go back to June 1983. All this data can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Youth Training

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many YT recipients in each age group had income below the income support level in (a) the latest available period before 11 April and (b) the period after that date.

Miss Widdecombe: This information is not available.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Coe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is being done to reduce industrial tribunal waiting lists.

Miss Widdecombe: I have asked officials to review the operation of the industrial tribunals with a view to identifying any changes which would help them to cope with an increasing volume and complexity of cases with reduced delays, while containing demands on public expenditure. Meanwhile, additional resources are being allocated to help contain the delays.

Disabled People

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of the unemployment rate of disabled people.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 28 April 1994]: The labour force survey asks people of working age if they currently have a health problem or disability which limits the kind of paid work they can do. Estimates based on answers to this question will include people with short-term health problems and disabilities as well as those registered as disabled.

The latest LFS estimates for summer 1993 show that, in Great Britain, the International Labour Organisation unemployment rate for such people was 22 per cent.

Employment Appeals Tribunal

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many appellants to the employment appeals tribunal had preliminary hearings in each of the months following the retirment of Mr. Justice Wood.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 28 April 1994]: The figures are shown in the table:

	Number
October 1993	28
November 1993	49
December 1993	31
January 1994	39
February 1994	83
March 1994	32

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many appellants to the employment appeals tribunal had preliminary hearings in each of the 24 months prior to the retirement of Mr. Justice Wood.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 28 April 1994]: The figures are shown in the table:

Labour Statistics, Scotland

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many employees in Scotland are in part-time jobs.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 April 1994]: I have been asked to reply. For December 1993, the latest date for which information is available, it is estimated that 542,000 employees in employment in Scotland worked part-time.

EDUCATION

School Transport

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) if he will extend to all local education authorities the dispensation agreed with Strathclyde council education authority in respect of finance of seat belt installation in school minibuses and buses; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make it his policy to apply to local education authorities in England the same rules on school transport as are applied by Strathclyde regional council; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will publish the guidance issued by his Department to local education authorities in respect of the safety of schoolchildren in transit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport has national responsibility for vehicle safety matters.

The Department for Education has already published general advice on school transport to all local education authorities in a circular letter on 21 January 1994. A copy is in the Library. It recommended that seat belts should be worn where fitted, and reminded authorities that home-to-school transport which they provide or arrange must carry pupils in reasonable safety and comfort. It also advised authorities to encourage contractors to observe the school transport safety code to the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents, which was issued with the endorsement of the Secretary of State in 1991. Copies were distributed to all education authorities and schools.

Sex Education

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he is taking to ensure that the skills of those responsible for teaching sex education in schools are co-ordinated with those of health education professionals in the Department of Health.

Mr. Forth: The forthcoming circular on sex education will offer schools advice on liaison with, and the use made of, external sources of help, including health service professionals.

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to set up an inter-departmental working group to share, develop and co-ordinate good practice in the delivery of sex education in schools.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has no such plans. The forthcoming draft circular will give schools comprehensive advice on the discharge of their statutory responsibilities for sex education. Further guidance is already available from a variety of sources.

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to ensure that all schools are able to take advantage of training for delivering sex education, in the period prior to the implementation of the Education Act 1993.

Mr. Forth: The grants for education support and training programme for 1994-95 extends the specific grant already available to support the basic curriculum and assessment to cover teacher in-service training and materials associated with the new arrangements for sex education. Schools are free to use this grant as they judge fit.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. James Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make it his policy that children with special educational needs should be educated as near to their home as possible; and what account is taken of the wishes of children and parents in this matter.

Mr. Forth: The Education Act 1993 requires local education authorities to comply with any preference of parents of a child with a statement of special educational needs regarding the maintained school they want their child to attend. This duty applies unless the school is unsuitable to the child's needs or the child's placement would be incompatible with the interests of other children already in the school or with the efficient use of the LEA's resources.

The draft code of practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs, which we expect to be debated in both Houses shortly, contains extensive guidance on the placement of children with special educational needs, emphasising the importance of parents' views and that, so far as possible, the views of the child are taken into account during the statutory assessment and in the statement.

Mr. James Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what consideration has been given to the use of financial incentives to local education authorities for them to reduce the proportion of children with statements of special educational needs; what link has been made between the amount of money that a local authority receives from Government sources and the reduction of provision in places in special needs schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The draft code of practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs, which we expect to be debated in both Houses shortly, sets criteria aimed at ensuring that statutory assessments and statements are made only when necessary. It also emphasises the role of mainstream schools in making special educational provision for the majority of pupils with special educational needs.

LEAs may receive capital allocations following the approval of statutory proposals involving surplus place reduction in maintained special schools. Any such allocation will depend on the authority's need for capital expenditure to implement the proposals. My right hon. Friend always takes into account value for money and capital costs when determining such proposals.

Mr. James Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he is taking to ensure that provision for special educational needs places is made a consequence of the informed judgment of parents, education psychologists, teachers and social services as to what is the most desirable education that a child with special needs should receive, and to avoid influence by statistical targets for the percentage of children with special needs in the local authority.

Mr. Forth: The draft code of practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs, which we expect to be debated in both Houses shortly, offers guidance designed to help teachers, LEA officers and other professionals work together with parents to ensure that every child receives the educational provision appropriate to his or her individual special educational needs.

Mr. James Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is his policy governing the percentage of children with statements of special educational needs in a local authority in maintained schools; and in what form this policy is conveyed to local authorities.

Mr. Forth: The Government's policy is set out in the Education Act 1993 and the draft code of practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs, which we expect to be debated in both Houses shortly, and which, subject to parliamentary approval, will be distributed to all maintained schools and local education authorities. The policy is that children with statements of special educational needs should, subject to the wishes of their parents, be educated alongside their peers in mainstream schools, so long as this would be compatible with the child receiving the special educational provision he or she needs; the interests of other children already in the school; and the efficient use of resources.

The placement of an individual child is a matter for judgment by the local education authority in the light of a statutory assessment of the child: where appropriate and subject to the views of parents, placement might be made in a school not maintained by the LEA.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many schools in England received (a) more than £1 million and (b) more than £250,000 per annum from his Department under the operation of the assisted places scheme; and if he will list the 50 schools which received most money from his Department under the assisted places scheme, in order, along with the total amounts which they received in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Forth: The information for parts (a) and (b) is as follows: (a) 4; (b) 161. The other information requested is shown in the table:

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many parliamentary questions, in the period November 1992 to March 1993, were answered with the response that the information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost; and how many were referred on to an agency chief executive.

Mr. Boswell: The number of answers given to parliamentary questions by the Department for the period requested recorded in the POLIS database as including a reference to the information being available only at disproportionate cost was 56. The number of questions answered recorded by the POLIS database as including a reference to the question being referred to an agency chief executive was two.

TRANSPORT

Executive Agencies

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what targets he has set for the executive agencies in his Department.

Mr. MacGregor: I have set the following key targets for 1994-95 for the Department of Transport's executive agencies.

The key targets for the Coastguard Agency are to:

Discharge my responsibility for maritime search and rescue (SAR), through the agency's own or dedicated assets, by maintaining a 24 hours SAR co-ordinating capability within, and including the coasts and shoreline of, the United Kingdom search and rescue region (UKSRR) and by maintaining a comprehensive radio reception and transmission coverage of the UKSRR which enables SAR co-ordination action for the duration of incidents without interruption or equipment malfunction;

Determine through the United Kingdom SAR and local SAR Committees the availability, readiness, capability and responsiveness of SAR resources, to seek agreements with the appropriate controlling authorities for improvements as necessary and to report to me, identifying any improvements, by March 1995;

Pursue an SAR prevention strategy through training, patrols, and public relations endeavours, including a safety campaign to be launched by 30 April (costing £25,000) designed to reduce incidents involving sea canoeists;

Maintain a fully operational 24 hours channel navigation information service covering the Dover strait traffic separation scheme, in concert with the appropriate French authorities;

Discharge my responsibility for the prevention of marine pollution by the maintenance of a national contingency plan, and in particular to test the effectiveness of the plan by undertaking a major exercise and to report to me on the outcome by 31 March 1995, and where appropriate to activate the plan within 30 minutes of an incident and commence action at sea to deal with a spill of dispersible oil within four hours of notification of an incident;

Carry out 500 hours of aerial surveillance of the sea area for which the United Kingdom has responsibility, to detect or deter incidents of marine pollution, including illegal discharges from ships;

Make a running costs efficiency gain of 3 per cent.; and;

Investigate, and report to me by December 1994, on a means of measuring awareness of, and satisfaction with, the services provided by the agency.

The key targets for the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency are:

To meet or better an overall efficiency improvement of 4 per cent.;

Deliver 95 per cent. of ordinary driving licence cases to customers within 12 working days of receipt and deliver medical cases within 22 working days of receipt;

Deliver 95 per cent. of vocational driving licence cases within 10 working days of receipt and deliver medical cases within 30 working days of receipt;

Deliver 95 per cent. of first provisional driving licence cases within 11 working days of receipt;

Deliver 95 per cent. of cases involving changes to vehicle registration documents within 13 working days of receipt;

Deliver 95 per cent. of registration documents for new vehicles within 13 working days of receipt;

Answer 80 per cent. of telephone enquiries within 30 seconds;

Deliver answers to 95 per cent. of written enquiries within eight working days of receipt; and Complete successfully 457,000 VED enforcement cases by imposition of penalties and recover through penalties and duty from induced relicensing at least £2·60 for every £1 (full costs) spent by DVLA on VED enforcement.

The targets and key tasks for the Highways Agency are to:

Report, using existing management information systems, on the agency's internal unit costs for the management and supervision of new construction schemes over £3 million in value, compared to costs in the last three years;

Develop an information system for attributing all staff and other costs to the agency's outputs, identifying those attributable to motorways and other trunk roads separately wherever possible, so as to extend the coverage of unit costs beyond the new construction of national schemes, and enable comprehensive targets for reductions in unit costs to be set in future years;

Meet the aims and targets enshrined within The Citizen's Charter, The Road User's Charter and the agency's charter standard statement Your Home and Trunk Road Proposals;

Develop systems for measuring the performance of the network, including quality of service indicators, and introducing targets for 1995-96;

Reach scheme milestones designated with the prioritised roads programme and listed in The National Roads Programme: Summary and Milestones as follows: complete 18 schemes; start works on 22 schemes; and reach 85 per cent. of the other scheme milestones;

State in the agency's Annual Report the average time taken to complete schemes that are completed in 1994-95, compared with the performance in recent years, and the average time between milestones for all those schemes that reach milestones in 1994-95, and compare this with previous years' performance;

Complete all schemes within the approved scheme brief (that is, on time and to budget) and, with the central Department, devise appropriate performance measures;

Monitor, and state in the Annual Report, the benefit-cost ratio for the national roads programme based on the scheme briefs; and agree with the central Department a target level for 1995-96 and following years, below which the average should not fall;

Monitor, and state in the annual report, the unit cost of new construction;

Carry out up to five post-scheme evaluations as agreed with the central Department;

Maintain the trunk road network effectively by planning a programme of capital maintenance to ensure that the target of reducing the percentage of the road network past the critical condition to 7 to 8 per cent. by the year 2000 is achieved and that all bridges on the network are able to carry the full assessment loading for vehicles of 40 tonne maximum gross vehicle weight by the end of 1998, by (in 1994-95): reconstructing 137 nearside lane kilometres (nlks) of trunk road and 40 nlks of motorway; overlaying a further 394 nlks of trunk road and 227 nlks of motorway; assessing the structural capacity of 795 bridges and strengthening 177 bridges; and monitoring, and stating in the annual report, the unit cost of road maintenance;

Contribute to the Government's target of reducing road casualties by one third by the year 2000, compared to the annual average for 1981-85;

Publish, as part of the agency's annual report, a section reporting its activities to promote road safety, including the accident rate on motorways and trunk roads;

Publish as part of the agency's annual report a report on environmental matters; and Produce certified appropriation accounts by August 1995, and unaudited financial statements in an annual report by October 1995.

The key targets for the Marine Safety Agency are to:

Complete by 30 November the calculations for the phase-in criteria for ro ro passenger ferries built before 1990 and implement the first stage of the North West European ro ro passenger stability agreement and the related United Kingdom regulations by 30 November 1994;

Submit to me an interim report by 31 October 1994 reviewing the fishing vessel safety provisions legislation including the progress made, in consultation with the industry, towards a fishing vessel safety code of practice for vessels under 12 metres in length;

Complete by 31 March 1995 technical negotiations within the International Maritime Organisation (IMO) to secure amendments to chapter one (general provisions) and for the introduction of mandatory ships' routing and reporting under chapter V (safety of navigation) of the safety of life at sea convention, including the drafting of any statutory instruments to give effect to the adopted amendments in United Kingdom law;

Provide technical input to the European Community (EC) negotiations on the proposed directives dealing with convergent application of IMO rules and resolutions and specifically on segregated ballast tanks, ship safety equipment, transit and access in EC waters, and standards for vessels not covered by the safety of life at sea convention;

Establish by 31 March 1995 mechanisms to allow the delegation of further survey and certification work to the private sector and the arrangements for its audit; and to audit by 31 March 1995 two organisations already authorised to undertake survey and certification work;

Undertake port state control inspections, including operational aspects, of 30 per cent. of the foreign flagged vessels using United Kingdom ports;

Achieve a running costs efficiency gain of 3 per cent.; and

As part of a two year programme of deregulation, produce proposals by 31 December 1994 for a first round of revocations of regulations.

The key targets for the Transport Research Laboratory are to:

Cover full costs with income from customers while meeting the net control total in the 1994-95 Supply Estimates;

Ensure direct fee-earning costs as a percentage of total operating costs are greater than 57 per cent.;

Achieve average staff utilisation in research resource centres of at least 1300 hours per year on direct fee-earning work; and

Ensure that at least 94 per cent. of completed projects assessed by customers are rated as satisfactory or better

The key targets for the Vehicle Certification Agency are to:

Issue 90 per cent. of whole vehicle and system and component certificates by dates agreed with customers;

Ensure that at least 98 per cent. of certificates issued are free of errors caused by the agency and where errors do occur to issue corrected documents within three working days in 75 per cent. of cases;

Audit at least 50 per cent. of the agency's approved quality procedures and to achieve a satisfactory appraisal report on technical performance from my Department's chief mechanical engineer;

Achieve, or better, a net output unit cost of £71·29;

Achieve a Treasury accounts direction for the agency's 1994-95 accounts;

Implement a new data system for job and product line costing;

Deliver legislation, enforcement and information programmes required by the Department to timetables and within budget; and

Develop a model contract for the provision of testing services by agents and to begin a trial of that contract with at least one agent.

The key targets for the Vehicle Inspectorate trading fund are to:

Achieve an efficiency improvement of 5 per cent. as measured by the agency's aggregate cost efficiency index;

Break even while achieving a 6 per cent. real rate of return on capital employed;

Achieve an HGV/PSV test exemption rate of less than 0·01 per cent.;

Achieve an HGV/PSV test error rate of less than 0·47 per cent.;

Achieve a roadworthiness prohibition error rate of 0·5 per cent.;

Return 95 per cent. of maintenance assessments for "O" licence renewals and variations within six weeks and 99 per cent. within 12 weeks;

Decide 99 per cent. of all MOT statutory appeals against refusal to issue test certificates within five working days;

Produce 95 per cent. of Traffic Commissioners reports within four weeks unless another deadline has been agreed, and to produce 95 per cent. within the agreed deadline;

Examine a minimum of 1·4 million HGV and 145,000 PSV tachograph charts;

Weigh a minimum of 115,000 goods vehicles; and

Have at least 90 per cent. of weighbridge equipment available nationally.

With regard to key targets for the Driving Standards Agency, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my hon. Friend the Minister for Roads and Traffic gave on 12 April 1994 at column 83.

These targets are set out in the agencies' business plans which also include management objectives and performance indicators, where appropriate to the agencies' business. Copies of the business plans of the Coastguard Agency, Highways Agency, Marine Safety Agency and Vehicle Certification Agency have been placed in the Library of the House. The business plans of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency and the vehicle inspectorate will be placed in the Library shortly. The business plan of the Transport Research Laboratory is commercially confidential.

Metropolitan Traffic Area Office

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in which month and year the Metropolitan traffic area office moved to Charles house, London; and in which month and year it closed.

Mr. Key: The Metropolitan traffic area office moved from Bromyard avenue to Charles house between July and September 1988. The Metropolitan traffic area office in Charles house was closed in May 1991 as part of the restructuring of the traffic areas.

Tunnel House, Clayton

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions his Department has had with British Rail about preserving the 1836 Tunnel house at Clayton built over the London-Brighton line; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: None, the future of the Clayton Tunnel house is a matter for Railtrack. I understand however, that Railtrack is currently assessing what repairs if any are required to this grade II listed building.

BR Land (Trepass)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many cases in respect of trespass and endangering safety of persons on railway lines were brought by the British Transport police and the Crown Prosecution Service in each year since 1991.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

	Trespass	Endanger safety
1991	4,149	386
1992	5,150	344

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents of hunts trespassing on British Rail property were recorded in (a) 1991, (b) 1992 and (c) 1993.

Mr. Freeman: There were three recorded incidents of hunts trespassing on British Rail property in 1991, 10 in 1992 and 11 in 1993.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what advice his Department issues to British Rail regarding trespass on BR property.

Mr. Freeman: The Department does not issue advice to BR or Railtrack regarding trespass on their property.

Traffic Area Offices

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Tranpsort, pursuant to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, column 97, how much was spent in the financial year 1993-94 on publishing the traffic area office annual report and the traffic area office customer service guides; and what are the costs of the customer service guides as a percentage of the running costs of traffic area co-ordination division and the traffic area office network.

Mr. Key: The cost of publishing the traffic area annual report and the customer service guides during the financial year 1993-94 was £3,500. The costs of the customer service guides represented less than 0·5 per cent. of running costs of traffic area co-ordination division and the traffic area office network.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) of 28 February, Official Report, column 563, what plans he has to make available information about how to complain about goods or public service vehicles at places other than traffic area offices; and what plans he has to publicise the existence of traffic area offices.

Mr. Key: Complaints about goods vehicles and public service vehicles may be addressed to a number or organisations depending on the nature of the complaint. The two main organisations within my Department are the Vehicle Inspectorate and the local traffic area office. Both these organisations have published or are about to publish codes of practice which will explain how to make complaints.

The code of practice for traffic area offices which came into effect on 1 April 1994 explains the operator licensing and bus registration services they provide their customers. This code will shortly be printed in leaflet form for general distribution and will include a map showing the eight traffic area offices, their areas of responsibility, addresses and telephone numbers. A press notice will be issued to publicise the leaflet.

Goods Vehicles

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 27, for what reasons he does not collect figures for the number of objections received in the renewal of goods vehicle operator licences.

Mr. Key: The Department collects figures for the number of objections to all types of applications and these are held on computer. It would be possible to collate the information for the number of objections to renewals of goods vehicle operator licences received but for 1991-92 and 1992-93 that could be done only at disproportionate cost. This is because a special computer programme would be needed to extract the necessary information.

"Guide to Making Representations"

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in which month and year the last two editions of his "Guide to Making Representations" were printed.

Mr. Key: The goods vehicle operator licensing "Guide to Making Representations" was first published in October 1986. A revised edition of the guide was published in October 1992.

Rail Privatisation

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he is taking to ensure that his target of at least 51 per cent. of British Rail being privatised by April 1996 is met; what assurances he has received from the Franchising Director that this target will be met; and what penalties and measures are available to him to take action if the target is not met.

Mr. Freeman: The Secretary of State has set for the Franchising Director the targets of commencing the competitive process for the first six franchises by the end of 1994, awarding the first six franchises by the end of 1995, and securing that 51 per cent. or more of the railway passenger services currently operated by BR are provided under franchise agreements by 1 April 1996. It will be for the Franchising Director to achieve these targets, and the franchising programme he announced on 21 April indicates how he intends to do so. We have no reason to believe that these targets will not be met. Should a problem arise which would result in the targets not being met we would need to consider with the Franchising Director what action would be appropriate in the particular circumstances of the case.

Prohibition Notices

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 389, if he will provide a breakdown of the reasons for the issue of immediate prohibitions against passenger-carrying vehicles in 1992-93.

Mr. Key: The information is not held in the form requested and could be produced at only disproportionate cost. However, an analysis of all prohibitions by defect type is available for 1992-93 and is as follows.

Public Appointments

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many persons are employed by (a) the British Railways Board, (b) the regulator, (c) the Franchising Director, (d) Railtrack and (e) train operating companies on salaries in excess of £30,000 per annum.

Mr. Freeman: BR employs 1,228 staff with salaries in excess of £30,000 per annum: the regulator, 17; the Franchising Director, 17; and Railtrack, 349. Staff employed in the train operating units are still employees of BR and are included in BR's total.

Red Warning Vehicles Scheme

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what increase in the licensing of vehicles there has been resulting from the national red warning vehicles scheme launched by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency in 1993.

Mr. Key [holding answer 28 April 1994]: The windscreen warning notice scheme started as a pilot in 1992 and was extended throughout England and Wales early in 1993.

We estimate that in 1991-92, before the start of the scheme, some 115,000 evaders or would-be evaders were encouraged to relicense their vehicles as a direct result of vehicle excise duty enforcement activity, realising some £8·4 million in revenue that would otherwise not have been collected. In 1993-94, with the scheme in full operation, an estimated 345,000 motorists were encouraged to relicense, with a revenue recovery of some £27·9 million.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Press Releases

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for York (Mr. Bayley) of 18 April, Official Report, column 365, if he will ensure that all Government news releases are transmitted electronically to POLIS at the same time as they are placed in the Parliamentary Press Gallery.

Mr. Waldegrave: Distribution of news releases is a matter for individual Departments.

DEFENCE

Reserve Forces

Mr. Colvin To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what percentage of the Regular Reserves in 1993 (a) responded to questions as to their suitability for military service and (b) provided full details as to their medical conditions;

(2) how frequently the information which is held centrally by each service on the suitability for military service of members of the Regular reserve is (a) updated and (b) verified with individual reservists.

Mr. Hanley: Information on the suitability for military service of members of the Royal Fleet Reserve and the Regular Army Reserve is provided by personnel completing an annual questionnaire, which includes a section on the individual's medical condition. The Royal Navy introduced a postal reporting system in July 1993 and in the first six months some 1,300 members of the Royal Fleet Reserve were contacted, of whom approximately 50 per cent. replied. The Army's Regular Reserve use a similar system, and at the end of 1993 about 55 per cent. of those contacted had responded.

The Royal Air Force system requires the reservist to inform his management centre only when his or her circumstances change. In 1993, less than 1 per cent. of the reserve strength did so.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the respective roles of the Army Reserve, Army service pensioners with recall liability and the Army's Long-term Reserve.

Mr. Hanley: Ex-Regular Army reservists can be used in the following roles regardless of the category of reserve to which they belong:

a. To provide reinforcements to bring regular and TA units and headquarters up to their war establishment.
b. To provide Battle Casualty Replacements.
c. To form sub-units for Home Defence tasks.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service pensioners have a recall liability.

Mr. Hanley: The numbers of service pensioners excluding officers who had a recall liability at 31 March 1994 are as follows rounded to the nearest 100:

	Number
Royal Navy:	11,300
Royal Marines:	1,000
Army:	32,900
Royal Air Force:	21,900

The liability of ex-Regular officers for recall is not dependent on receipt of a pension, and information in the form requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions, and in what numbers, men of the Army Reserve have been called out for training over the past five years (a) for a period not exceeding 15 days and (b) for a period not exceeding 36 hours.

Mr. Hanley: The number called out once annually for training since 1989 are as follows:

	Number
1989-90	54,719
1990-91	53,559
1991-92	47,278
1992-93	Nil
1993-94	Nil

On all of these occasions the training period did not exceed 36 hours.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the sequence of call-out of all components of the Army Reserves under section 10 of the Reserve Forces Act 1980 when it appears to Her Majesty's Government that national danger is imminent or a great emergency has arisen.

Mr. Hanley: Section 10 of the Reserve Forces Act 1980 applies directly to the Territorial Army and Army Reserve. There is no restriction on the order in which they or any other Army reservists are called out.

The Act also provides that when members of the Army Reserve are called out for permanent service under section 10, Army pensioners may be recalled under section 32(1) and men of the Army Long-term Reserve may be recalled for service under section 34(1).

Call-out of members of the Regular Army Reserve of Officers—RARO—is governed by the Pay Warrant 1964, article 285. It provides that class 1 of RARO, which includes most ex-Regular officers, may be called-out if the call-out of Army reservists has been ordered when national danger is imminent or a great emergency has arisen.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria were used, and what specialist training was required, in respect of those members of the Regular Reserve called out during the Gulf conflict.

Mr. Hanley: Regular Reserves were called out during the Gulf conflict to fill specific posts. The selection process was designed to identify individuals who, because of their experience and qualifications, needed only the minimum of training to achieve operational readiness in those posts.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Territorial Army units are between two thirds and 80 per cent. recruited.

Mr. Hanley: As at 1 April 1994 there were 10 Territorial Army units between two-thirds and 80 per cent. recruited. They are as follows:

Unit	District	Per cent.
102 Battalion Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers	Eastern District	67
77 Engineer Regiment	Eastern District	73
Scots Yeomanry	Scotland	67
32 Signal Regiment	Scotland	77
205 Field Hospital	Scotland	68
2 Wessex	Southern District	80
103 Battalion Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers	Southern District	72
203 Field Hospital	Wales and Western District	74
31 Signal Regiment	London	75
257 Field Hospital	London	70

Imphal Barracks

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what vacant office space there will be at Imphal barracks, York, once the pay and manning function has completed its relocation.

Mr. Hanley: The move of the Infantry and Royal Artillery manning and record offices and the regional pay office will release approximately 32,895 sq ft of office space at Imphal barracks.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the cost of maintaining the office buildings at Imphal barracks during 1994-95.

Mr. Hanley: The estimated cost of maintaining the office buildings at Imphal barracks for financial year 1994-95 is £40,000.

Officer Training Corps

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the established strength and the actual strength as at 1 January of the Officer Training Corps.

Mr. Hanley: As at 1 January 1994 the established strength of the Officer Training Corps was 4,884 and the actual strength was 5,579. The higher number in actual strength results from permitted overbearing during the recruitment process between October and April of each year. Numbers are planned to reduce to the established strength by 1 April each year.

Air Vice Marshal Colville

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will state the salary and financial value of other benefits paid to Air Vice Marshal Colville as Air Officer Commanding as at 31 March; and what will be his payments from 1 April as chief executive of the Training Group Defence Agency.

Mr. Hanley: The rate of salary and range of allowances to which Air Vice Marshal Colville is entitled as a two-star officer filling a command appointment are unaffected by his appointment as chief executive of the Training Group Defence Agency.

The salary of two-star officers on 31 March 1994 was £56,710-05. On 1 April 1994, it was increased to £59,794-30 on payment of the 1994-95 pay award and the final stage of the 1992 pay award for senior military personnel.

In respect of his current appointment, Air Vice Marshal Colville is entitled to an entertainment allowance of £8-73 per day. In common with all service personnel, he is entitled to claim various allowances appropriate to his domestic and personal circumstances.

Clothing and Textiles Directorate

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will take into account when determining the location of the clothing and textiles directorate the loss of civilian jobs in York and surrounding areas caused by the relocation of Ministry of Defence functions.

Mr. Hanley: Full account is being taken of civilian job losses at all Ministry of Defence establishments where the reduction of a task or a closure has given rise to surplus accommodation which could be considered for an alternative defence requirement. This includes the sites at Imphal barracks and Strensall barracks in York and MOD sites in Harrogate.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the criteria being applied by consultants in identifying a suitable site for the clothing and textiles directorate.

Mr. Hanley: The criteria being applied to identify a site or sites for the directorate of clothing and textiles authority are that it should be located to the best advantage to the authority while offering the best value for money.

Civilian Employees

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by region the number of Ministry of Defence civilian employees in the United Kingdom in each of the last five years.

Mr. Hanley: Civilian employees include scientists, engineers, security and medical staff and many other disciplines, as well as administrators. The overall numbers are as follows:

Economic planning region	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994

Ammunition

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 19 April, Official Report, column 501, what was the total cost of (a) the L15 rounds and (b) the M107 rounds referred to and the present item cost of each round.

Mr. Hanley: The total cost of the F15 rounds was about £55,000,000 and that of the M107 rounds about £70,000,000. It is not the practice of my Department to disclose current prices as they are commercially confidential.

PINDAR Bunker

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many crisis and contingency plans exist for the use of PINDAR bunker; what is the staffing level for each of these; how many exercises have so far been held in the PINDAR bunker; and how many are planned;

(2) if he will make a statement on the role and function of the PINDAR bunker; and when PINDAR was first declared to have its full operational capability;

(3) which categories of persons have spaces allocated for them in PINDAR; and how many spaces are allocated in the PINDAR bunker for each job function.

Mr. Hanley: The purpose of the PINDAR joint operations centre is to provide the Government with a protected crisis management facility. It became operational on 7 December 1992. A number of crisis and contingency plans exist for the use of PINDAR and the centre is manned by a permanent staff, which is augmented as necessary in times of crisis. There are a number of categories of personnel allocated space in PINDAR, including Ministers, senior military and civilian personnel, plus service and civilian operational and support staff. It would not be appropriate to give any more detailed information than this as it would relate to operational capability.

There have been two major exercises and a number of small ones held there to date, and it is planned to hold one major and a varying number of minor exercises each year.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many toilet (a) cubicles and (b) urinals are installed in the PINDAR bunker; and how long the toilet facilities in the PINDAR bunker are planned to last if it was sealed from the outside world.

Mr. Hanley: There are sufficient toilet facilities provided for the full complement of the site. These facilities are usable as long as power within the site is maintained for pumping waste.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provisions have been made for the occupants to escape the PINDAR bunker in the event that the building above it has collapsed on top of it.

Mr. Hanley: A variety of routes exist which would enable the occupants to escape from the facility in the event that the building above it had collapsed.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the location of the PINDAR bunker; how many square metres of space it comprises; and on how many levels.

Mr. Hanley: The PINDAR facility is located beneath the Ministry of Defence main building in Whitehall. Details of its size and layout are of an operational nature and it is not our practice to reveal such information.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will place plans of the PINDAR bunker in the Library;

(2) at what depth below the surface is (a) the highest and (b) the lowest level of the PINDAR bunker.

Mr. Hanley: It is not our practice to reveal information of this kind as it relates to operational capability.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) lifts and (b) staircases connect the PINDAR bunker with the surface level; and what transport systems connect the PINDAR bunker to other sites.

Mr. Hanley: There are sufficient means of access and egress from the PINDAR facility.

The facility is not connected to any transport system.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the total cost of the PINDAR bunker from conception to operational status; and from which subheads of which votes the funds for PINDAR were taken.

Mr. Hanley: The total cost of the PINDAR facility has been £126,300,000 of which £66,300,000 was spent on the civil works programme. All costs since 1989 have been charged against vote subheads 2L2 and 2M5. Prior to this date civil works costs were charged against vote 4.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many beds are contained in the PINDAR bunker.

Mr. Hanley: There are sufficient bunks within the PINDAR facility for the full complement when working a three-shift system.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long the catering facilities in the PINDAR bunker are planned to last if sealed from the outside world.

Mr. Hanley: Catering facilities within the PINDAR facility are designed to support operations for as long as is considered operationally necessary.

Diver Mist

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement about Exercise Diver Mist;

(2) which parts of the final exercise evaluation report of Exercise Diver Mist will be made public.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 25 April, Official Report, columns 84-85.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total financial cost to Her Majesty's Government of Exercise Diver Mist; and from which subheads of which votes these costs were taken.

Mr. Hanley: The costs attributable to exercise Diver Mist are not separately identified within departmental budgets and the information requested could therefore only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) British and (b) United States personnel were involved in Exercise Diver Mist.

Mr. Hanley: Approximately 700 British and 800 United States personnel were involved in Exercise Diver Mist at the site at Barnham in Suffolk.

Costs Study

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the defence costs study; when the defence costs study started; and when it is expected to be completed.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) on 7 December 1993 at column 176. The defence costs study was formally launched on 1 December 1993. We hope to be in a position to make an announcement about its outcome before the summer recess.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 15 April, Official Report, column 348, which of the reports from the defence costs study he has received are final reports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Ministers have now seen final reports from 31 of the 33 individual defence costs studies.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 23 March, Official Report, column 337, which of the defence costs study team are producing reports which will be relevant to decisions relating to spares; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: One of the defence costs study teams was specifically concerned with the examination of repair, spares, storage and distribution within the MOD services. A number of other defence costs study teams scrutinised areas of support activity in which the storage, handling and use of spares play a part.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all of the non-MOD organisations and individuals that have been consulted in the course of the defence costs study; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Defence costs study teams were encouraged to consult widely, but a record of all the organisations and individuals consulted is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the non-civil service participants in the defence costs study; and under what scale of remuneration the non-civil service participants in the defence costs study are being paid.

Mr. Hanley: Non-civil service participants in the defence costs study have included Ministers, service personnel and a number of consultants and advisers from outside MOD. External participation has taken a variety of forms. The following individuals have participated as external members of study teams:

Sir R. Barratt
Mr. R. Benton
Sir J. Blelloch
Lieutenant General (Rtd.) Sir D. Boorman
Mr. C. Brendish
Mr. M. Dow
Mr. D. Dugdale
Professor M. Earl
Mr. F. Everard
Mr. B. Greedy
Mr. N. Hale
Mr. D. Hart
Mr. B. King
Mr. C. Littmoden
Mr. A. Mallin
Mr. I. McNeil
Mr. J. Montgomery
Mr. I. Robertson
Professor I. Shanks
Mr. K. Simpson
Major General (Rtd.) G. Sinclair

A team from Price Waterhouse, which was already providing consultancy advice in a related area, also participated in one of the studies.

Not all those listed are receiving payment for their services. Remuneration arrangements for individuals acting as external advisers or consultants are matters of confidence between the Department and the persons concerned.

Armed Forces Pay Review Body

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the pay rises for senior defence officers arising from the Armed Forces Pay Review Body's recommendations.

Mr. Hanley: The Armed Forces Pay Review Body recommended in February an increase of 4·4 per cent. for brigadiers and equivalents—the most senior rank on whose pay it makes recommendations. The Government accepted this recommendation in full but, in line with all other service ranks whose pay is recommended by the AFPRB, the award for brigadiers and equivalents was staged. The first 2·7 per cent. of the award will be paid from 1 April 1994 with the balance being paid from 1 January 1995.

Officers on whose pay the Government receive recommendations from the Senior Salaries Review Body will receive an increase of 2·75 per cent. from 1 April 1994, together with the third stage of their 1992 award. Additionally, the Government are considering a recommendation by the SSRB that a differential of 10 per cent. should be established between the pay of brigadiers and equivalents and major generals and equivalents.

Underground Property

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the bunkers and other underground property owned, operated or leased by his Department.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Bosnia

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent Greek military leaders are party to any NATO decisions on action on Bosnia; and what assessment he has made as to the security considerations of this involvement.

Mr. Hanley: Greece is a full party to all NATO decisions on Bosnia.

Nuclear Testing

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his policy on nuclear testing.

Mr. Hanley: I have nothing to add to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, on 22 March, Official Report, column 139.

War Disablement Pensions

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to deal with the backlog of claims for war disablement pensions following the closure of the Ministry of Defence records centre at Hayes.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Govan (Mr. Davidson) on 21 April, Official Report, column 624.

Greek War Medals

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list of those ex-soldiers who are entitled to accept the Greek War Medal and the War Star from the Greek Government for their part in the 1940-41 campaign.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Front Line Capabilities

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the extent to which decisions emerging from the defence costs study will have an effect upon front-line capabilities.

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has not yet taken any decisions on the defence costs study. Furthermore, no decisions will be taken on the recommendations arising from this work which will reduce our operational capability.

Estimates Statement

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the mistakes and misprints that have been made in the 1994 "Statement on the Defence Estimates"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: As far as I am aware, the only misprint of any material nature is in annex E. The upper part of the bar for the USA should be shaded blue to denote nuclear-powered submarines rather than yellow.

"Soldier" Magazine

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information the new parliamentary column in "Soldier" magazine will include; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The parliamentary column, which was introduced in the 7 March 1994 issue of "Soldier" magazine, contains a brief digest of Defence matters, published in Hansard, which "Soldier's" editor considers will be of interest to his readership. The column will reflect information which affects Army personnel, their dependants, and the ex-service community.

Capital Works

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 25 April, Official Report, column 86, if he will give details of the design developments for the Minley/Chatham, Dishforth and Tidworth capital works projects.

Mr. Hanley: An element of refinement will nearly always occur between the inception of a project and its final completion, largely as a result of detailed work by professional design staff. There were, however, no significant changes to the original scope of work envisaged to meet the requirements of the three projects in question. The main reason for the reductions in costs was due to the competitive market conditions prevailing at the time.

Homosexuality Regulations

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 22 April, Official Report, column 711, what effect the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill, if enacted, would have on the new homosexuality regulations.

Mr. Hanley: The provisions of the new tri-service guidelines on homosexuality are consistent with the current provisions of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 3 May 1994

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many civil servants in his Department applied in each year since 1986, through the business appointments system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) with a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

Mr. John M. Taylor: For staff below grade 5 the Department has received one application through the business appointments system. The application was made in 1994 under (c) other employment, and was not referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments. Information on staff at grade 5 and above could not be collected in the time available.

Justices' Clerks

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list all the judicial functions of justices' clerks.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Although justices' clerks are not judges, they do, however, perform certain functions of justices which have been devolved to them by virtue of section 28(1) of the Justices of the Peace Act 1979. These functions are contained in the Justices' Clerks Rules 1970, as amended, the Magistrates' Courts (Attachment of Earnings) Rules 1971, the Family Proceedings Courts (Children Act 1989) Rules 1991, and the Family Proceedings Courts (Matrimonial Proceedings etc.) Rules 1991.

Court Cases

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will publish a table showing the number of (a) civil actions and (b) criminal prosecutions using the powers of (i) the Insolvency Acts, (ii) the Theft Acts and (iii) the Banking Acts in each of the last four years.

Mr. John M. Taylor: (a) civil actions. This information is not available for the Insolvency Acts and Theft Acts and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The number of civil actions carried out by the Bank of England using the powers of the Banking Acts were as follows:

Year to end of February

	Civil actions
1991	7
1992	5
1994	1

(b) criminal prosecutions: Defendants proceeded against under the Insolvency Acts and Theft Acts will be prosecuted under the indictable offence categories of robbery, burglary, theft and handling stolen goods and fraud and forgery and the summary offence categories of stealing and unauthorised takings. Information on the number of prosecutions by type of offence is published annually in the Home Office publication "Criminal Statistics England and Wales Supplementary tables, Volume 1 Proceedings in Magistrates' Courts". Copies of the publication for 1989 to 1992—latest available—are held in the Library.

The number of criminal prosecutions carried out by the Bank of England using the powers of the Banking Acts were as follows:

Year to end of February

	Criminal prosecutions

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Terrace (Journalists' Access)

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee when the minutes of the proceedings of his Committee dealing with access of journalists to the Terrace will be available.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The minutes of proceedings of the Administration Committee are produced periodically. The volume containing the decision taken up to the Easter recess is expected to be available on 9 May—HC 374-i to ix.

Upper Waiting Hall (Exhibitions)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee in what circumstances applications of right hon. and hon. Members to use the Upper Waiting Hall for exhibitions are not decided by ballot: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: Applications for exhibitions of a parliamentary nature to be exempted from the ballot are considered individually by the Administration Committee.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Civil Servant (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many civil servants in his Department applied in each year since 1986 through the business appointments system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) with a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

Mr. Howard: The following table sets out the information requested.

Prisons Ombudsman

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the total cost involved in appointing the prisons ombudsman since the post was readvertised in November 1993; and how this sum is broken down;

(2) how prisoners will be informed of their rights to complain to the prisons ombudsman and of the procedures involved;

(3) what will be the procedure to be followed by prisoners wishing to make complaints to the prisons ombudsman; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what budget is to be allocated to the office of the prisons ombudsman for the year 1994-95; and how this is broken down;

(5) How many (a) men and (b) women applied for the post of prisons ombudsman, following its readvertisement in November 1993; how many (i) men and (ii) women were shortlisted; and how many (1) men and (2) women were interviewed for the post.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The total cost of appointing the prisons ombudsman since the post was readvertised in November 1993 was £55,200. This sum consists of a £20,332 fee for the services of an executive search agency, £20,086 for the Civil Service Commission's Recruitment and Assessment Services and £14,781 for advertisements placed in the national press.

Prisoners will be informed of their rights to complain to the prisons ombudsman through a revised Prison Service leaflet on requests and complaints, the next reissue of the prisoners' information pack and any means the prisons ombudsman may decide appropriate. The procedures to be followed by prisoners are set out in the document "The Prisons Ombudsman : A Note on Arrangements", a copy of which is available in the Library.

For 1994-95 the allocated budgets are £462,000 for salaries, £15,000 for travel and subsistence, and £400,000 for the costs of establishing and operating the office.

There were 352 male and 50 female applicants for the post of prison ombudsman. Six candidates, all male, were shortlisted and interviewed.

Leon Paterson

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has received a report from the Police Complaints Authority concerning the death of Leon Paterson in Stockport police station.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No. Any report is entirely a matter for the Crown Prosecution Service, the chief constable and the Police Complaints Authority.

ANZAC Day

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the change in the arrangements this year for the use of Whitehall by vehicular traffic during the ANZAC day ceremony.

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration was given to closing Whitehall to vehicular traffic during the ANZAC day ceremony on 25 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes were made in the arrangements for vehicular traffic in Whitehall during the Cenotaph ceremony on ANZAC day, 25 April, as compared with previous years; what consultations there were about the changes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave to a question from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) on 28 April, at column 244-45.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many parliamentary questions, in the period November 1992 to March 1993, were answered with the response that the information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost; and how many were referred on to an agency chief executive.

Mr. Howard: The number of answers given to questions to my Department in the period November 1992 to March 1993 which the POLIS database has been able to identify as fitting the hon. Member's criteria is 72. During the same period, the POLIS database has been able to identify seven questions to my Department where agency chief executives were asked to arrange for replies to be given.

Prisons (Drug Abuse)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many different types of drugs have been found in each Her Majesty's prison, Her Majesty's remand centre and Her Majesty's detention centre in (a) South Yorkshire, (b) North Yorkshire, (c) West Yorkshire and (d) Humberside in each year since 1989;

(2) how many visitors have been found in possession of illegal drugs at each Her Majesty's prison, Her Majesty's remand centre and Her Majesty's detention centre in (a) South Yorkshire, (b) North Yorkshire, (c) West Yorkshire, and (d) Humberside in each year since 1989; and what subsequent action was taken against them;

(3) if he will list by Her Majesty's prison and Her Majesty's remand or detention centre in (a) South Yorkshire, (b) North Yorkshire, (c) West Yorkshire and (d) Humberside, how many incidents of drug abuse were discovered in each year since 1989 to date.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 3 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about the number of different types of drugs found; the number of visitors who have been found in possession of illegal drugs and the number of incidents of drug abuse in each prison, remand centre and detention centre in (a) South Yorkshire, (b) North Yorkshire, (c) West Yorkshire and (d) Humberside in each year since 1989;

Information about these incidents is readily available since 25 September 1990 only.

The tables attached provide information on drug finds including drugs finds on visitors.

Apart from the information given in the attached table and adjudications statistics, information about the number of incidents of drug abuse is not recorded centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

All cases were reported to the local police.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to allocate sniffer dogs to each prison to help combat the problem of illegal drugs; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what plans he has to ensure sniffer dogs inspect all prisons on a regular basis throughout the year to help combat the problem of illegal drugs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 3 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about allocating sniffer dogs to each prison and ensuring sniffer dogs inspect prisons on a regular basis to help combat the problem of illegal drugs.

There are no plans to allocate dogs trained to search out drugs to each prison. At present, 68 dogs (almost all of which are also guard dogs) in the Prison Service have been trained to detect illegal drugs. This figure will rise to 76 by mid-May when the current training course is completed. These dogs can be used at any prison where a Governor wants a drug search undertaken. It is for individual Governors to determine the extent to which drug trained dogs are used in their establishments. In the nine months from April to December establishments. In the nine months from April to December 1993, 459 drug searches were undertaken by the Prison Service drug dogs.

In addition to these dogs, we have started to train other dogs for allocation to prisons that do not routinely have guard dogs. These dogs will work solely on drug searching and will be allocated to prisons where Governors have requested them.

Humberside Police

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will refer back to the Local Government Commission proposals to split Humberside police with an instruction to consult the police, the police authority and the public.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I have nothing to add to the answers I gave to the hon. Member and to the hon. Member for Warwickshire, North (Mr. O'Brien) on 21 April, at columns 1021-22.

Incident (Shaftesbury Avenue)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement in respect of the operation in which armed Metropolitan police officers were at the scene of an incident on 16 April at approximately 1015 hours, at the northern end of Shaftesbury avenue, London.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I understand from the Commissioner that the Metropolitan police have no record of any incident or police operation in Shaftesbury avenue on 16 April, and that no authority for the issue of firearms in the Metropolitan police district was given on that day.

Operation Barnard

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what considerations led to the title Operation Barnard; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I understand from the Commissioner of the Metropolitan police that "Operation Barnard" was a name chosen by the local divisional commander.

Passport Office

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to expand the network of United Kingdom passport offices, with particular reference to Scotland.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the United Kingdom Passport Agency. I have asked the chief executive to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from John Hayzelden to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 29 April 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about expanding the network of United Kingdom Passport Offices.

As you may know, the UK Passport Agency has offices at Belfast, Glasgow, Liverpool, London, Newport and Peterborough. We plan to conduct a review of the number and location of Passport Offices later this year. In this review we shall give careful consideration to the position in Scotland.

TREASURY

Taxation (Relief and Allowances)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated cost of the relief and allowances against (a) inheritance tax and (b) capital gains tax in the current financial year.

Mr. Nelson: The cost of the inheritance tax nil rate band for transfers not exceeding £150,000 in 1994-95 is estimated to be £4·4 billion. This figure is particularly tentative and subject to a wide margin of error.

Estimates of the costs of other reliefs and allowances against capital gains tax and inheritance tax for 1994-95 could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, estimates for 1993-94 were published in table 1·6 and in appendix B of an Inland Revenue publication "Inland Revenue Statistics 1993". A copy of this was placed in the Library. Updated figures for 1994-95 will be published later in the year.

Nationalised Industries

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were (a) the tax revenues received from, (b) the subsidy provided to and (c) the net cost or revenue of the nationalised industries in each of the five years to 1979.

Mr. Dorrell: The information is not available in the format requested. However, the total external financing provided for the nationalised industries in the years 1975-76 through to 1978-79 was as follows:

Total external financing

1975-76	4,756
1976-77	3,275
1977-78	1,822
1978-79	2,367

[1] 1980 survey prices.

Taken as a whole, there was no net revenue from the nationalised industries in these years.

Privatisation

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total profit made by formerly publicly-owned companies in the five years prior to their privatisation; and if he will provide a breakdown of this sum by company.

Mr. Dorrell: The table shows the profits made, or estimated to have been made, by privatised companies in the five years prior to privatisation where this information is held centrally and can be obtained without disproportionate cost.

NHS Estate

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much each valuation office received from the relevant regional health authorities for valuation of surplus NHS properties for each year since 1987.

Mr. Nelson: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Valuation List

Ms Eagle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average length of time between the receipt of a proposal to alter the valuation list and the decision on the proposal for each district valuation officer.

Mr. Nelson: This information is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Council Tax

Mr. Burden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many council tax cases were awaiting inspection and discussion at the Valuation Office at 1 April.

Mr. Nelson: The number of appeals received during the initial banding period in England and Wales and outstanding as at 31 March 1994 was 614,000. The number awaiting inspection and discussion could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Tax Relief

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what he estimates to be the total cost in 1994-95 of relief from inheritance tax for (a) agricultural property, (b) business property, (c) heritage property and maintenance funds and (d) exemption of transfers to charities on death.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 28 April 1994]: Provisional estimates for the total cost of reliefs and exemptions from inheritance tax for 1994-95 are:

	£ million
Relief for agricultural property	80
Relief for business property	60
Relief for heritage property and maintenance funds	90[1,2]
Exemption of transfers to charities on death	220[2]

[2] These figures are particularly tentative and subject to a wide margin of error.

Executive Share Option Schemes

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Inland Revenue approved executive share option schemes currently exist; what proportion are linked to approved savings-related share option schemes; and what are the respective values of both schemes.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 29 April 1994]: Up to 31 March 1994, 5,680 discretionary—executive—share option schemes had been approved by the Inland Revenue; 3,981 of these schemes are believed to be currently in operation. In 1991-93, the latest year for which relevant figures are available, some 2 per cent. of discretionary schemes were granted options at a discount, under the linkage provisions introduced in the Finance Act 1991, because they also had an approved savings-related share option scheme. The total initial value of shares over which options were granted in 1992-93 under approved discretionary share option schemes was £1·6 billion; the corresponding figure for approved savings-related share option schemes is £1·88 billion.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the effect on corporation tax receipts in 1994-95 and 1995-96 of the introduction of pay and file.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 29 April 1994]: The introduction of pay and file is not expected to have a significant effect on total receipts of corporation tax in 1994-95 and 1995-96.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Attorney-General how many civil servants in his Departments applied in each year since 1986 through the business appointments system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) in a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

The Attorney-General: Since 1986 two applications have been received by the Crown Prosecution Service under the business appointments rules, one in 1990 and one in 1992. Neither related to an appointment as a consultant or with a firm of consultants. One of the applications required and obtained the approval of the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments. The other application was approved by the Department. There have been no such applications in the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, the Treasury Solicitor's Department or the Serious Fraud Office.

PRIME MINISTER

Libya

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had with the UN about sanctions against Libya.

The Prime Minister: Ministers and officials are in regular contact on the question of the Lockerbie bombing and sanctions against Libya, both with the United Nations secretariat and other members of the Security Council. I last discussed this matter with the United Nations Secretary-General during his visit to London in July 1992.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 3 May.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 3 May.

The Prime Minister: This morning, I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Sir Tim Bell

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Prime Minister if the contract to Sir Tim Bell to advise on the celebrations and commemorations of the D-day landings was awarded by means of a competitive tender.

The Prime Minister: Yes.

Public Bodies

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Prime Minister what changes there have been since 28 November 1991 in the definition of executive duties carried out by chairmen or vice-chairmen of a political party which would disqualify that person from holding a similar role or office in any public body; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: None.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Expo '92

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 389, what were the final costs of his Department's contribution to Expo '92, including the costs of settlement with Joanna Bickerton Associates.

Mr. Needham: The final costs have yet to be settled. I will write to the hon. Member when they are.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the names of consultants employed in reviews of structure and organisation for each of his Department's laboratories and agencies since April 1992, the periods of the appointments and the date of their reports; and whether the reports have been placed in the Library, together with the total sums expended on the reviews of such laboratories and agencies in the financial years 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. Heseltine: The position on the use of consultants in connection with the reviews of the DTI laboratories and other agencies is as follows:

DTI Laboratories

A study by KPMG of the National Physical Laboratory, the National Engineering Laboratory, the Laboratory of the Government Chemist, the National Weights and Measures Laboratory and the Warren Spring Laboratory[1] was commissioned in May 1993. KPMG's report was presented to the Department in December 1993. A summary of the Report was placed in the Libraries of both Houses on 14 April 1994.

[1]Warren Spring Laboratory was subsequently removed from the KPMG study. PA Consulting were then appointed to conduct a short review of the planned relocation of WSL from Stevenage to new premises at Welwyn Garden City. PA's report was presented to the Department in June 1993. A copy of the Report was placed in the Libraries of both Houses on 7 July 1993.

Other Agencies

Accounts Services Agency

A study by PA Consulting was commissioned in October 1993. The study was completed by January 1994 and an announcement in the form of Written Answer was made to the House on 11 February 1994, Official Report, column 505.

PA's report has not been placed in the House as it contains commercially sensitive information, the publication of which could be damaging to the Agency.

Companies House

A study by SRU was commissioned in October 1992. The study was completed in August 1993.

SRU's report has not been placed in the House as the future of Companies House remains under consideration.

Insolvency Service

Stoy Hayward were appointed in August 1993 to conduct a pre-feasibility study into the potential for making more use of the private sector in the work of the Official Receiver. Stoy Hayward's report was presented to the Department in October 1993. A summary of the Report was placed in the Libraries of both Houses on 7 February 1994.

Following the pre-feasibility study, a further more detailed feasibility study was commissioned from Stoy Hayward in March 1994. Stoy Hayward are due to complete this "second phase" study by the end of July 1994.

Patent Office

A study by Price Waterhouse was commissioned in July 1993. Price Waterhouse have completed the bulk of their work and a final report is due in the near future.

Radiocommunications Agency

As announced in a Written Answer on 22 March 1994, Official Report, column 216 the possibility of a greater role for the private sector in planning the radio spectrum and assigning frequencies, and the redefinition of the future role of the Radiocommunications Agency are matters on which comments are sought in the recently pulished consultative document, "The Future Management of the Radio Spectrum". Accordingly, consultants have not so far been employed to review the structure or organisation of the Agency.

The consultative document has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Costs

The sums expended on work by consultants in connection with the reviews of the laboratories and agencies in the last two complete financial years total £101,041 (including VAT) for 1992/93 and £935,359 (including VAT) for 1993/94.

Export Licences

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many individual export licences were awarded to cover the £6,000 million of defence exports in 1993, to which preference is made at paragraph 442 of the statement of the Defence Estimates 1944, Cm 2550.

Mr. Heseltine: The sum of £6,000 million refers to the value of contracts placed with the United Kingdom in 1993 and not to the value of exports.

In 1993 there were issued 10,635 individual export licences in respect of all goods prefixed "ML"—munitions list—in the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1992, as amended. Not all these licences relate to exports in 1993 as licences are valid for two years. The issue of a licence does not necessarily lead to an export being made.

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answers to the hon. Members for Blaenau Gwent on 8 March, Official Report, column 204 and for Edinburgh, Central (Mr. Darling), of 31 March, Official Report, column 1012, if he will now make it his policy to organise the central record keeping of public interest immunity certificates.

Mr. Heseltine: I have now made arrangements for a separate record to be kept in the Solicitor's Office of all public interest immunity certificates signed by or on behalf of myself or any of the other Ministers in the Department.

Pirate Radio Stations

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information he has concerning the number of pirate radio stations which currently broadcast on a regular basis in the United Kingdom; and what assessment he has made of the impact of those illegal broadcasts on the future development of community radio.

Mr. McLoughlin: There is no regular pattern to pirate radio broadcasts, but the Department's Radiocommunications Agency made 611 raids on pirate stations in 1993. The agency will sustain its efforts against pirates so as to prevent radio interference and maintain fair competition for all legal broadcasters.

Music Recording Industry

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the contribution of the music recording industry to the United Kingdom economy.

Mr. Sainsbury: The United Kingdom has a large and internationally important recorded music industry which makes a substantial contribution to the economy through both product sales and royalty earnings.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Fortress Study Group

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what help and assistance his Department is giving to the fortress study group in its "Defence of Britain" survey; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: My Department is currently considering an application from the Council for British Archaeology, on behalf of the fortress study group, for a contribution towards funding this project.

Community Radio

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what information he has concerning those FM frequencies which are to be reserved by the Radio Authority to provide for the future development of community radio.

Mr. Brooke: It is for the Radio Authority to determine how to use the new FM frequencies, in the band 105-108 MHz, which become available from the end of 1995. I understand no decisions have yet been taken.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what plans he has to encourage the development of community radio; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement about the extent to which the Radio Authority is seeking to encourage franchise bids from community radio broadcasters.

Mr. Brooke: The priorities and procedures for developing the independent radio sector, including community radio, are determined by the Radio Authority; the Government do not seek to influence the authority's judgment.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what recent representations he has received concerning community radio; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Following the publication of the Radio Authority's consultation document on the "Future Use of 105-108MHz", I have received a number of letters from both hon. Members and members of the public in support of community radio and other forms of radio services. I have explained that it is for the Radio Authority to determine how best to use the new frequencies for the development of independent radio.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he last met the Community Radio Association to discuss the future of community radio; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I have not met the association, but officials keep in touch with its representatives.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement setting out his policies for the future management of the radio spectrum; and if he will indicate specifically which elements of the spectrum will be utilised to facilitate the development of community radio.

Mr. Brooke: The Government's policy is to increase diversity and choice for listeners and to promote competition in the provision of services.

The Government are allocating further FM spectrum, from 105 MHz to 108 MHz, to the Radio Authority from the end of 1995, or earlier if possible. It is for the Radio Authority to decide the use of this spectrum and it has issued a consultation document to seek views on this.

The Government are also preparing for the introduction of digital audio broadcasting. The National DAB Forum brings together interested parties, including the Community Radio Association.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what information he has concerning the number of (a) hospital radio stations, (b) community radio groups, (c) student radio stations and (d) radio stations catering for the inmates of institutions for young offenders which currently broadcast in the United Kingdom; and what projections he has made of the growth of broadcasters in each of those categories over the next 10 years;

(2) what information he has concerning the number of restricted service licences which have been awarded since 1990 by the Radio Authority for experimental broadcasts by community groups; and how many of those licensees have subsequently been granted full franchises to broadcast as community radio stations.

Mr. Brooke: I suggest the hon. Member asks the Radio Authority for this information, since it is responsible for licensing services.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) whether the proposal for the nationwide introduction of community radio contained in the 1987 Green Paper "Radio: Choices and Opportunities", Cm 92, remains the policy of Her Majesty's Government; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether the indication in the Green Paper on "Radio: Choices and Opportunities", Cm 92, on the possible number of community radio stations remains the policy of his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The Green Paper was a consultative document. In the subsequent White Paper, and during the passage of the Broadcasting Act 1990, the Government took the view that community radio did not need to be distinguished from other independent radio services. It is for the Radio Authority to determine its priorities and procedures for developing the independent radio sector in accordance with requirements of the Broadcasting Act.

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many civil servants in his Department have applied through the business appointments system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) in a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many have been referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

Mr. Sproat: The Department of National Heritage has been in existence only since April 1992. To date no civil servants in the Department have applied through the business appointments system to take up appointments outside the Department.

Museums and Galleries (Attendance)

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 18 April, Official Report, column 388, what changes have been made in the timetable for the availability of figures for the actual attendance at national museums and galleries since April 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sproat: I provided provisional attendance figures for 1993-94 in my reply of 14 February at column 578. The actual attendance figures are now being collected on a financial year basis and we hope to make them available in July.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Narmada Dam

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received about the recent functioning of the Narmada dam in India and the consequences for international funding and the local people.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have seen reports about the recent closure of the sluice gates, but we are not aware of any consequences for international funding. We understand that the Indian authorities are examining the resettlement aspects connected with this action.

Consultancies

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 29 March, Official Report, column 615, what have been (a) the number and (b) the value of management consultancies awarded under the aid programme.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 29 April 1994]: The number of contracts awarded to management consultants under the aid programme for 1992-93 was 38 and the total value £10,602,735. The consultants concerned have been engaged at the request of overseas Governments to provide a wide range of advice and expertise which cannot be funded from their own resources.

Commonwealth Development Corporation

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role of the Commonwealth Development Corporation.

Mr. Hurd: The Government's response to the report on the Commonwealth Development Corporation by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission was reported to the House on 25 March 1993, Official Report, columns 653-54. A quinquennial review of CDC has also been completed. Copies of the review report have been placed in the Library of the House. The Government have endorsed its conclusions and recommendations.

CDC makes an important and distinctive contribution to Britain's overseas development programme. Its primary role is to promote productive investment in the private sector and to support privatisation programmes. It will continue to concentrate its new investments on the poorest countries, where financial markets are undeveloped and private sector capital is still scarce. Its strong asset base and returns from previous investments now allow it to finance future growth in new investments at a lower cost to the British aid programme. In 1993, CDC's investments and commitments increased to over £1·6 billion; £217 million of gross new investments were made, an increase of 24 per cent. on 1992. Over the next five years, a rising level of internally generated resources, and a limited programme of other borrowing on concessional terms, starting with a £25 million loan approved by the European Investment bank on 22 March 1994; is expected to allow further increases in the annual level of investment.

As previously announced, the Government have decided to retain CDC in the public sector. As a consequence, no fundamental changes are proposed in CDC's capital structure at present. However, to allow for the planned expansion of activities the Government intend, subject to parliamentary time, to legislate to increase the ceiling on CDC's outstanding borrowing power. It is also proposed that new legislation should include powers to enable the Government to waive interest payable by CDC on aid programme loans. As an interim measure from 1 April 1994 the Government have reduced the interest rate on these loans to 0·75 per cent.

The Government have agreed new targets with CDC. At least 70 per cent. of board approvals for new investments each year will be in the poorest countries. CDC will focus on countries which are important to Britain, and at least 80 per cent. of board approvals for new investments each year should be for private sector projects. CDC will aim to invest the remainder only in support of privatisation strategy. This continues the significant shift in emphasis from public to private sector investment which CDC has been pursuing for some years. The Government also intend to consider with CDC how best to associate its work more closely with other aspects of the British aid programme.

By 1996, 25 per cent. of approvals should be in the form of equity or quasi-equity; and CDC's catalytic role in attracting additional private foreign investment and local capital should be enhanced.

The target rate of return on capital employed will be 8 per cent. nominal for the next two to three years and will be reviewed thereafter. CDC's administrative efficiency, which is praised by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, will continue to be further improved. For 1994, the ratio of gross operating costs to year end investments and commitments will be 1·15 per cent. A review of this target for later years is to be completed before the end of 1994.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the annual total of maintenance payments resulting from assessments made by the Child Support Agency in the financial year 1993-94.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Donald Dewar, dated 29 April 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the latest estimate for the annual total of maintenance payments resulting from assessments made by the Child Support Agency in the financial year 1993-94.

End year figures will be available in due course on the total amount of assessed maintenance. The Agency is unable to make an estimate in the light of recent policy changes.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will breakdown the building schemes included in the sums to be spent by the Child Support Agency in 1994-95 on minor new works on furniture and fittings as listed in the estimates, class XIII, vote 4, section F3(1) and (3);

(2) if he will break down the sum spent on minor new works furniture and fittings, and £602,000 on major new works by the Child Support Agency in 1993-94 as listed in the estimates, class XIII, vote 4, section F3;

(3) if he will list and give details of the expenditure by the Child Support Agency on (a) computer equipment, (b) telecommunications and (c) office machinery in the years 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. George Mudie, dated 29 April 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the costs of works and equipment in the Child Support Agency (CSA).

You have asked for a breakdown of the building schemes to be included in the estimates for the year 1994-95. These are shown in the attached annex. Additionally, in 1992-93, the CSA spent £368,000 on office machinery.

Details of the CSA's expenditure on furniture and fittings, office machinery, and major and minor works carried out in the year 1993-94 are in the course of preparation.

You have also asked for the expenditure on computer equipment and telecommunications. The CSA obtains computer services, including the provision of telecommunications equipment, via the Information Technology Services Agency (ITSA), another Agency of the DSS.

As much of the information technology equipment, and many of the systems, are shared by the various Agencies of the Department, it is not possible to separately identify that which applies to the CSA. New charging arrangements throughout the Department will make this possible in future.

In respect of the 1992-93 financial year, the planned capital expenditure by ITSA to provide the required services for CSA was £17·61 million on computers and £3·18 million on telecommunications. The planned capital expenditure by the ITSA in respect of CSA for 1993-94 was £3·85 million on computers and £1·2 million on telecommunications.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Annex

Project	Projected cost (£)
Additional expenditure to create space in child support agency centres (CSACs)	831,000
Accommodation expenditure arising from increasing CSA activity	1,595,000
Maintenance of the estate	850,000
Maintenance of CSA HQ	106,000
Further adaptation of CSACs	171,000
Ongoing furniture requirements	181,000

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total expenditure of the CSA in (a) 1992-93, when it was operating as a shadow agency and (b) 1993-94; and what is the estimated total expenditure in 1994-95.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. George Mudie, dated 29 April 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the expenditure of the Child Support Agency.

During the year of the shadow Agency in 1992-93, the total expenditure was £146 million.

For 1993-94, total expenditure has been estimated at £117 million.

For 1994-95, total expenditure is estimated at £154 million.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the CSA business plan for the current year will be printed and made available to hon. Members.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. George Mudie, dated 29 April 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Business Plan of the Child Support Agency for 1994.

The Agency aims to publish the Business Plan by the end of June 1994. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House and distributed to all Members of Parliament.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects the CSA to complete all straightforward assessments within the original target times of between six to 12 weeks.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. George Mudie, dated 29 April 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking when the Child Support Agency will be able to complete all straightforward assessments within 6 to 12 weeks.

The aim of clearing such cases in 6 to 12 weeks was first expressed before the Agency had experience to live operation. In practice, the assessment process has turned out to be more complex and clearance times longer than was originally expected.

At this stage it is still too early to predict what clearance times will be achieved in the longer term, although the Agency is working hard to ensure that all applications for maintenance are cleared as quickly as possible.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the Child Support Agency's target for benefit savings for 1994-95; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if the Child Support Agency achieved its target for benefit savings for 1993-94; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: Targets for 1994-95, including the benefit savings target, are still being finalised, drawing on the experience of the first year of live running.

The final figure for 1993-94 is not yet available, but it is not expected that the Child Support Agency will have achieved its benefit savings target.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security at what age children are no longer eligible for child support from the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Burt: Child support legislation applies to all children aged under 16. It also applies to those aged 16, 17 or 18 who are receiving full-time education up to GCE A-level or equivalent standard or are registered for work or youth training, providing they are not entitled to claim income support and have never married.

Unemployment Benefit

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out for each year since 1991 for (a) Cleveland and (b) Great Britain (i) how many women aged over 60 years (1) claimed and (2) received unemployment benefit, (ii) how many women received the equivalent to the standard retirement pension, (iii) what was their average weekly award and (iv) how many men between the ages of 60 and 65 years (A) claimed and (B) received unemployment benefit.

Mr. Hague: The only information available on unemployed claimants aged over 60 and in receipt of unemployment benefit is in relation to Great Britain and is included in issues of the "Half Yearly Analysis of Unemployed Claimants", copies of which are in the Library.

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many civil servants in his Department applied in each year since July 1988 through the business appointments system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) with a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

Mr. Hague: Twenty-three applications have been made under the business appointment rules since 1988. The details are in the table:

Year	Applications	Independent consultant	Firm of consultants	Other	Referred to Committee
1988	10	1	2	7	9
1989	7	0	2	5	3
1990	3	0	2	1	1
1994	1	0	0	1	0

Note: No applications failed but restrictions were placed on activities in two cases.

War Widows

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he or any of his ministerial colleagues have had from the War Widows' Association of Great Britain in regard to pensions paid to the widows of New Zealand service men; what reply was given; what action he will be taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: On 12 April, my noble Friend Lord Astor met a deputation from the War Widows Association of Great Britain. One of the subjects discussed was the level of war widows pension paid by the New Zealand Government to the widows of New Zealand service men. The association is seeking supplementation of the New Zealand pension to bring it up to the preferential level of pension awarded to United Kingdom war widows. The matter is under consideration.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out in pound sterling terms the pensions paid to war widows in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Australia, (c) Canada, (d) Japan, (e) France and (f) Germany.

Mr. Hague: Comparisons of war widows pensions are complicated as the total pension may depend on factors such as the age of the widow, the rank of the deceased ex-service man, his level of disablement or earnings potential and whether means-testing applies.

A summary of the information available is as follows —in the main, 1993 rates apply. Rates have been converted into sterling taking account of cost-of-living differences:—

Country	Weekly pension
United Kingdom	The basic weekly pension is £72·90. In addition most widows receive an age addition, and a special payment of £47·84 a week from the Ministry of Defence. A war widow aged 70 would receive a tax free weekly war widows pension totalling £136·84.
Australia	The weekly pension is £79·27. In addition a domestic allowance of £5·66 is payable. The total weekly pension is £84·93.
Canada	The maximum weekly pension is £138·43 (a lower pension would be received if the late husband's disability was assessed as less than 48 per cent.)
Japan	The basic weekly pension is £118·97.
France	The basic weekly pension is £67·99.
Germany	The weekly pension is £43·45. In addition, allowances may be received in respect of loss of earnings (maximum 1992 rate was £82·29), standard of living (maximum 1992 rate was £46·58 week) and for attendance (maximum 1992 rate was £19·26 week). The first two allowances are means-tested.

Pensions

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will review the percentage which old age pension levels bear to average earnings and restore the link between the two.

Mr. Hague: We have no plans to do so.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the old age pensioners' organisations from which he has recently received representations regarding the present levels of pensions.

Mr. Hague: Since January this year, I have received representations on the level of pensions from the Craigmillar Heart to Heart Self Support Group; the Bedford Community Retirement Group; the Mid-Devon Tenants' Group Cullompton Area Committee; the Pensioners' Rights Campaign and United Pensioners.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consultations he has had with pensioners' groups regarding present levels of old age pensions.

Mr. Hague: I have had no such consultations recently.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will review the relationship between pensions and the cost of living; and what assessment he has made of the operation of the linkage between the two in 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. Hague: I have no plans for a review of this sort. Retirement pension has maintained its value against increases in the cost of living throughout this Government's term of office. This April, the retirement pension uprating included an additional element, above the increase in the retail prices index, for extra help with the cost of VAT on fuel.

Pensioners (Water Charges)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will bring forward proposals for further compensation for pensioners for the increases in water charges and value added tax.

Mr. Hague: The exceptional package of measures to help pensioners and others with VAT on domestic fuel will include further help from April 1995. Variations in the cost of other items in the household budget will be reflected in the indices on which the annual uprating of benefits is based.

Disabled Living Allowance

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims for disabled living allowance were referred to disability appeal tribunals in the year to 31 March; and how many have been allowed.

Mr. Scott: In the period specified, 32,427 disability living allowance claims were submitted to disability appeal tribunals. Of the 19,260 appeals decided during the year, 7,240 were allowed.

Source: Disability Living Allowance management information system—100 per cent. count of cases.

Benefits Agency

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the cost of expanding the Benefits Agency medical service following the introduction of the incapacity for work benefit.

Mr. Scott: Information is not available in the form requested. We estimate that the changes announced in the Social Security (Incapacity for Work) Bill will add some £40 million per year to the Department's administrative costs for 1995-96 and 1996-97 and £10 million per year from 1997-98.

Incapacity for Work Benefit

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the members of the committee of 80 experts involved in drawing up the scoring system to be used in the assessment of claims for incapacity for work benefit.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Manchester, Withington (Mr. Bradley) on 20 January at column 802.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many civil servants in his Department applied in each year since 1986 through the business employment system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) with a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

Mr. Goodlad: The information requested by the hon. Member is as follows:

1986: (a) 0; (b) 0; (c) 18.
Six applications were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments and all were granted.
1987: (a) 0; (b) 0; (c) 15.
11 applications were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments and all were granted.
1988: (a) 1; (b) 0; (c) 21.
18 applications were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments and all were granted.
1989: (a) 2; (b) 0; (c) 19.
15 applications were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments and all were granted.
1990: (a) 1; (b) 1; (c) 0.
Two applications were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments and both were granted.
1991: (a) 2; (b) 0; (c) 28.
25 applications were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments and all were granted.
1992: (a) 2; (b) 0; (c) 20.
15 applications were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments and all were granted.
1993: (a) 0; (b) 0; (c) 34.
22 applications were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments and all were granted.
1994: (a) 0; (b) 0; (c) 2.
Two applications were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments and both have been granted.

Bosnia

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what limitations the Greek Government have placed on the involvement of their land, sea and air forces in NATO activity in Bosnia.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There are no NATO land operations in Bosnia. Greek ships participate in NATO operations in the Adriatic, except those in Serbian/Montenegran territorial waters. The Greeks have withdrawn permission for the use of Prevlaka air base for AWACS operations over the former Yugoslavia, and have withdrawn their crews from these operations.

Serif Avsar

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information his Department has received regarding the arrest of Serif Avsar by Turkish security forces on 22 April in Diyarbakir; what representations he has made to the Turkish Government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We are aware of reports of the detention of Serif Avsar. Our embassy in Ankara has asked the Turkish authorities for further information.

Mozambique

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made with disarmament and demobilisation in Mozambique.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [pursuant to his reply, 26 April 1994, c. 122]: Our latest information is that 75 per cent of the Government forces have assembled in UN-monitored cantonment areas.

EMPLOYMENT

European Social Fund

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 15 April, Official Report, column 342, if he will supply the information about ESF funding and its inter-relationship with the funding of youth training and training for work schemes in the form that is available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms Short) on 3 December 1993, Official Report, column 822.

European Funding

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what agreement has been reached between his Department and the European Commission with regard to an objective 4 plan for the United Kingdom in the period 1994 to 1999.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Following the EC Commission's announcement on 19 January 1994 that the Great Britain allocation under European social fund objectives 3 and 4 for 1994 to 1999 would be 3,377 million ecu, the Government decided that the entire allocation should be used for the foreseeable future on objective 3 to help the unemployed, as it had been agreed by Council and Commission that member states would be free to decide on the allocation of funding between the two objectives. The decision was announced on 25 January 1994 in a response to my hon. Friend the Member for Hertfordshire, North (Mr. Heald), Official Report, column 223. There is, therefore, no need for a plan for objective 4 for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the obstacles in the negotiations with the European Commission in the finalisation of the United Kingdom's objective 3 budget and operation for 1994 to 1999; and when he expects those difficulties to be overcome.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The United Kingdom objective 3 plan was submitted in early November 1993. The European Commission opened formal negotiations on 27 April 1994. It is too early to say what obstacles will emerge, or how soon the negotiations can be concluded, although the United Kingdom has consistently pressed for speedy progress and will continue to do so.

Job Clubs

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the workings of the payment by results contract for job clubs.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. John Spellar, dated 3 May 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about Jobclub payment by results contracts.

The payment by results approach to Jobclub contracting has shown that it represents good value for money. It encourages our contractors to think more about the results to be achieved and to improve their effectiveness at helping members to find jobs.

Payment by results contracts are divided into two parts. There is a fixed payment element which usually represents 75% of the total contract price. The bonus element, which represents the remaining 25% of the contract price, is divided between the number of job placings agreed in the contract. Payment of both the fixed and bonus element of the contract is made monthly in arrears.

It is explained to contractors that a bonus payment will only be made where a member has left to take up work and we have satisfactory written confirmation of their placing. Payments can be made in cases where a member leaves the Jobclub to take up temporary work. However, we will not pay a bonus for the same person more than twice during their membership. Part of our role in monitoring the programme is to check a percentage of all claims for bonus payments to ensure there is no abuse of the system.

At the end of 1993/94 there were 782 payment by results Jobclub contracts in operation. This represents 54% of the total number of Jobclubs. Payment by results contracts are one way of making our programme contracting as efficient and effective as possible. We plan to introduce further measures into our programmes with the aim of ensuring the unemployed people who join them receive the best possible help.

I hope this is helpful.

Urban Policy Initiatives

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list every urban policy initiative that has been instituted or operated since 1979, the date that each scheme began operating, where appropriate the date that the scheme ceased operating and the funds available on an annual basis under each scheme.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Employment Department assistance has since 1979 been targeted on unemployed people—especially long-term unemployed people—wherever they are. However, in 1989 inner-city compacts were established—an initiative which is now part of the single regeneration budget. Details are shown in the following table:

Inner city compacts—England

	Expenditure £ million	Number of compacts
Outturn
1989-90	3·0	25
1990-91	5·5	38
1991-92	5·5	48
1992-93[1]	4·85	50
Estimated outturn
1993-94[1]	4·7	50

[1] Figures exclude Compacts which were set up from 1992-93 outside inner cities.

In addition, since the creation of the Employment Service as an executive agency in 1990 its annual performance agreement has included a target for a percentage of placings to be of unemployed inner city residents. To help meet this target the ES allocates additional staff resources —inner-city officers.

WALES

Disabled People (Employment)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table indicating for each local authority in Wales (a) the number of registered disabled people whom it employs, (b) the percentage this represents of its work force and (c) how many disabled people each authority should have employed to meet the quota established under the Disabled Persons (Employment) Acts of 1944 and 1958.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information about the quota position of individual employers is treated as confidential and is not disclosed without the agreement of the employers concerned. Local authorities in Wales are among a wide range of public sector employers who have agreed to specific information about their employment of registered disabled people being published in the Employment Gazette. The information which is published in accordance with this agreement is the number of registered disabled people employed and the percentage that this represents of the employer's total work force. The latest information, which relates to 1 June 1992, was published in the April 1993 Employment Gazette, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Information relating to 1 June 1993 will be published as soon as possible.

Air Pollution Monitors

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what considerations underlay the siting of environmental air pollution monitors in the pedestrianised area of Frederick street, Cardiff, to register kerb-side emission of diesel and lead from vehicles; what estimate he has made as to the suitability of this site; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The monitoring station at Frederick street, Cardiff is part of the Government's enhanced urban air quality monitoring network. This was established to provide information on levels of urban air pollution to which large numbers of people are exposed and, hence, does not necessarily involve kerbside monitoring.

A copy of the siting criteria for the network, and which the Cardiff station meets, has been placed in the Library of the House.

Blood

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales to what extent Wales has been self-sufficient in blood supplies in each of the past five years; and how any surplus has been used or any deficit been met, indicating in his answer the blood groups concerned.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information for the area covered by the Welsh National Blood Transfusion Service—south and mid Wales only—is set out in the following tables.

Training

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many training weeks were undertaken by each training and enterprise council in Wales in 1990-91.

Mr. Redwood: The information requested is provided in the table.

Training weeks provided by TECs in Wales 1990-91

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has in respect of trunk road agencies and passenger transport authorities after local government reorganisation.

Mr. Redwood: I propose to appoint a maximum of eight agents on a geographical basis to manage the maintenance of the trunk road and motorway network. I would like transition committees to agree by 31 December 1994 which new unitary authority in each geographical area should be appointed. The geographical areas should be similar to but not necessarily the same as existing highway authority boundaries and should relate to boundaries of the new unitary authorities. I would consider proposals for fewer than eight agencies were they to be presented to me.

In any area where it is not possible for agreement to be reached, I will decide which authority should be appointed, taking account of any representations I have received.

On reorganisation each unitary authority would become responsible for the delivery of socially necessary public transport services and local transport planning. These duties include the need to consult neighbouring authorities about policy and service delivery.

I believe there is considerable scope for co-operation between authorities and that benefits are greatest when things are done on a voluntary basis. I do not see a need for the extra bureaucracy which statutory passenger transport authorities would create.

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many civil servants in his Department applied in each year since 1986, through the business appointments system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) with a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

Mr. Redwood: The following statistics are available:

Number of civil servants applying to take up outside appointments

Year	Independent consultants	Consultancy firms	Other
1990	—	2	2
1993 (to April)	—	1	—

None of these were referred to the Advisory Committee.

Information covering the years 1986 to 1989 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Transitional Committees

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether his office took legal advice before writing to local authorities on 14 April regarding the composition of transitional committees; if he will now withdraw the letter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The letter of 14 April set out my Department's understanding of the effect of clause 46 of the Local Government (Wales) Bill as it would apply to the composition of transition committees. It was issued in response to requests for clarification from authorities and, in accordance with the usual practice, was based on legal advice. The Standing Committee considering the Local Government (Wales) Bill will have the opportunity shortly to debate all issues relating to transition committees.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will now make it his policy to reinstate to levels prior to the recent cuts the hill livestock compensatory allowances in the less-favoured areas in Wales; what account he has taken of the effect on farmers' income of the recent adverse weather conditions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 29 April 1994]: The rates of hill livestock compensatory allowances are reviewed annually during the course of the autumn review of economic conditions in the hills and uplands. Any effects on farm incomes caused by the weather will be taken into account in the review later this year.

Lamb Losses

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to issue immediately the final instalment of the annual ewe premium to those sheep producers in Wales who have been affected by exceptional losses of lambs due to extreme weather during the 1994 lambing season; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 29 April 1994]: I am arranging for payments of the final instalment to be made as soon as possible.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from the Association of Community Health Councils with respect to the availability of services to the patients of general practitioner fundholders, including the availability of hospital consultants for out-patient appointments at health centres and general practitioners' surgeries, what consultations he has had in relation to the clinical evaluation of such services; what proposals he has to extend the availability of any such services as are deemed clinically worthwhile to the patients of non-fundholding general practitioners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 29 April 1994]: I have not yet seen the paper prepared by the Association of Community Health Councils. When I have, I will consider what it has to say.

It is for health authorities and GP fundholders to evaluate the costs and benefits of the services they secure for patients, including the initiatives that some of them have taken to improve access by arranging for a number of consultant clinics to be held in local health centres and GP surgeries.

Inward Investment

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Torfaen (Mr. Murphy) of 25 April, Official Report, column 4, what proportion of the 400 jobs corresponding to the £10 million new investment at TRW Steering Systems will be (a) new and (b) safeguarded.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 29 April 1994]: The TRW steering systems project will safeguard 414 jobs in Resolven Neath. The investment itself will be a boost for local employers who supply and service the company.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Castle Point (Dr. Spink) of 25 April, Official Report, column 4, (1) what proportion of the 14,000 jobs generated by inward investment arise from firms that are new to Wales; and how many are (a) new or (b) safeguarded;

(2) if he will break down the totals for inward investment from (a) the rest of the United Kingdom, (b) northern America, (c) the far east and (d) rest of Europe as to (i) new and (ii) safeguarded jobs.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 29 April 1994]: The information requested is as follows:

	New Jobs	Safeguarded Jobs
United Kingdom	4,207	3,348
North America	560	1,610
Far East	2,342	241
Rest of Europe	972	657
Total	8,081	5,856

Information on whether companies are new to Wales is not collected centrally. However, of the total jobs recorded in 1993-94, 27 per cent. related to new projects as opposed to expansions, acquisitions and joint ventures.

The figures are based on information given by the relevant companies at the time of their decision to invest and take no account of subsequent developments.

Wheelchair Repairs

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 26 April, Official Report, column 139, on what date the wheelchair repair contract eventually won by SERCO was advertised in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the supplement to the Official Journal of the European Union; and what details it gave in relation to the provision of (i) direct services of repair and (ii) general facilities management.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 29 April 1994]: The Welsh Health Common Services Authority advertised the wheelchair repair and maintenance contract in the United Kingdom on 8 July 1993 and in the European Journal on 6 July 1993.

The advertisement invited interest from organisations to bid for the contract to repair and maintain wheelchairs with delivery into 37,000 users' homes in Wales. Firms which expressed an interest were sent a more detailed specification. I will write and send a copy to the hon. Member.

Press Releases

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to introduce electronic mail or multi-fax for despatch at press releases, including the despatch of press releases to the Library simultaneously with their despatch to the press.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 29 April 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 25 April, at column 58. Distribution by both electronic mail and multi-fax is kept under review.

ENVIRONMENT

Air Monitoring

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he ensures responsibility for co-ordinating air monitoring in respect of European directive EC 85/203 and World Health Organisation air safety levels; and at what cost, including equipment and staffing costs.

Mr. Atkins: The monitoring of nitrogen dioxide for the purposes of European directive EC 85/203 is undertaken by the National Environment Technology Centre on behalf of the Government, and the results are reported to the Commission. The results of monitoring at all Department of the Environment automatic air pollution monitoring sites, including the nitrogen dioxide directive sites, are published annually by the National Environment Technology Centre. The annual reports include an analysis of exceedences of European Community and World Health Organisation guidelines and standards.

The annual running cost of a nitrogen dioxide directive monitoring site, which may include measurements of other pollutants, is in the order of £25,000. The capital cost of establishing an automatic nitrogen dioxide monitoring site is about £30,000.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he co-ordinates air monitoring with local authorities.

Mr. Atkins: My Department has a successful history of co-operation with local authorities on air pollution monitoring. For example, smoke and sulphur dioxide, using non-automatic techniques, are monitored at some 250 sites by 151 local authorities, with central Government providing the central co-ordination and quality assurance and quality control. The national nitrogen dioxide diffusion tube survey established in 1993, in which nitrogen dioxide is being monitored at more than 1,200 sites by some 300 local authorities, is run on similar lines.

In order to build on this co-operation the Government recently published a consultation paper, "The Future of Air Quality Monitoring Networks in the United Kingdom", in which proposals were made to develop a framework which draws local and national automatic air quality monitoring together into a coherent quality assured network. The Government are currently considering responses to the proposals in that paper.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has made to the report of the Parliamentary Office of Science and Technology entitled "Breathing in our Cities"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The Government are fully aware of the growing links between air pollution and health, not least from its own advisory group. We have made clear our intention to publish proposals later this year for a strategy to improve the quality of air in the United Kingdom, after widespread consultation. To this end, the Government have issued a discussion paper entitled "Improving Air Quality" which discusses the options available and invites comment from all interested organisations and individuals. Copies of this paper have been placed in the Library.

Vacant Housing

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the latest estimates of housing property remaining vacant; how much of this is owned by (a) local authorities, (b) the private sector and (c) Government Departments for each local authority in England; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Local authorities in England report the numbers of their own dwellings that are vacant at 1 April on their annual HIP1 return. Details for individual local authorities are available from the "1993 HIP1 All Items Print", a copy of which is in the Library; columns A71 and A76 gives figures for vacant dwellings inside and outside the authority's area, respectively.

Housing associations report the numbers of their own dwellings vacant at 31 March on their annual HAR10/1 return. I have today placed in the Library a table giving the reported numbers of vacant housing association dwellings in each local authority area. The figures are incomplete as there are around 900 vacant dwellings—3 per cent. of vacant dwellings—for which an analysis by district is not available.

In addition to providing information on those of their own dwellings that are vacant, local authorities are also asked to provide estimates of the number of private sector and other public sector vacant dwellings in their area on their annual housing investment programme returns. The reported information for each local authority is given in columns A74 and A73 respectively of the "1993 HIP1 All Items Print".

There are doubts about the quality of some of the estimates provided by authorities. Information from the 1991 English house condition survey suggests that the England total for the private sector may be an over-estimate, and data from central Government Departments on their own vacant dwellings, for which no geographical breakdown is readily available, indicate that there is under-reporting of public sector vacant dwellings.

House Building

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans his Department has to revitalise the construction industry to ensure an increase in the permanent dwellings started in 1994 in (a) council housing, (b) housing association and (c) the private sector; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: The construction industry will continue to benefit from the range of Government policies which are leading to a sustained economic recovery. These have brought about substantial falls in interest rates leading to more affordable home ownership. The industry also benefits from our approach of bringing in private sector resources to increase the output from our social housing programmes.

My Department's public expenditure plans for housing are contained in its 1994 annual report—Cm 2507.

Aluminium Recycling Industry

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the effect of imports on the aluminium recycling industry.

Mr. Atkins: United Kingdom imports of primary aluminium in 1992 and 1993 increased from 341,700 tonnes to 581,300 tonnes respectively. At the same time, the United Kingdom aluminium recycling industry increased its production from 251,800 to 274,400 tonnes. It is encouraging to note that increased imports of primary aluminium have not prevented an increase in the level of aluminium recycling in the United Kingdom.

Latham Report

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the Latham report to be published.

Sir George Young: Sir Michael Latham's final report of the joint Government/industry review of procurement and contracting arrangements in the United Kingdom construction industry will be published on Monday 18 July this year. Copies of the report will be placed in the House Library. Publication of the report will be followed by a conference organised by the industry groups involved in the review on Monday 25 July 1994 at the Queen Elizabeth II conference centre.

Regional Office Staff

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many of the staff in each of the integrated regional offices are (a) black people, (b) Asian and (c) female; and what percentages these are of the total.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 26 April 1994]: The information requested is as follows.

Total numbers of Black, Asian and female staff in the Government offices for the regions

Region	Total staff	Female	Percentage	Black	Percentage	Asian	Percentage
NE	310·0	211	58	0	0	*	less than 5

Total	2,751·2	1,358	49	74	approx. 24	49	approx. 18

General notes:
All figures calculated on a headcount basis.
Figures exclude casual and industrial staff.
Black and Asian staff figures include only those who responded to a voluntary survey and do not include other ethnic minorities.
DOE, ED and DOT figures for Asian and Black staff are as at 1 October 1993.
DTI figures for Black and Asian staff are as at January 1994.
All figures for female staff are as at April 1994.
Total staff figures are based on those of 1 October 1993.
Following the code of practice on ethnic origin of individuals, where the totals are 5 or less, actual figures have been replaced by an asterisk.

DTI notes:
Figures for London region are included in those for the South East region.
Merseyside figures are included in those for the North West.

Employment Department notes:
Merseyside figures are included in those for the North West.
Due to reorganisation, figures for Merseyside are still being finalised. Gender breakdown of the 30 staff involved is not yet known.
This breakdown by ethnicity and grade is a new retrieval for the ED system. This has reduced the ethnic origin figure by 3 staff who identified themselves as black.

Homelessness

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people who have previously been housed by local authorities as homeless applicants are currently homeless.

Sir George Young: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many families rehoused last year by London boroughs had lost their homes as a result of repossessions by lenders;

(2) what percentage of families who were made homeless last year through repossessions are currently living in temporary accommodation.

Sir George Young: Data provided by local authorities on the numbers of homeless households for which they accept responsibility to secure permanent accommodation include information on the reason for the loss of their last settled home. Some 1,730 households were accepted in London, and 8 per cent. of acceptances in England, in 1993 as a result of mortgage arrears; cases where the mortgage arrears led to repossession are not separately identified.

These data do not provide information on the number of accepted households who were subsequently placed in temporary accommodation, or on the point when households are permanently rehoused.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the level of support provided to the long-term homeless after they are housed.

Sir George Young: Long-term homeless people who are rehoused under the homelessness legislation—part III of the Housing Act 1985—are entitled to the same social security benefits as other comparable members of the population.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many families subsequently rehoused in housing association accommodation in the last available year had previously lost their houses as a result of repossession by lenders.

Sir George Young: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of families accepted as homeless in each year since 1990 have had members of their families subsequently taken into care.

Sir George Young: The information requested is not available in the Department.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the economic causes of homelessness.

Sir George Young: During the 12 months ending 31 December 1993, only about 10 per cent. of households accepted by English local authorities for rehousing under the homelessness legislation had lost their previous home for reasons of mortgage or rent arrears.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has concerning the ages of those currently living rough in London.

Sir George Young: Counts of people sleeping rough in central London are undertaken periodically by voluntary sector agencies and co-ordinated by Homeless Network. The latest count, on 18 November 1993, found 287 people sleeping rough. The breakdown by age is shown in the table:

Age range	Per cent.
Under 18	1
18 – 25	16
26 – 49	49
50 – 59	22
Over 60	12
Total	100

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average cost of keeping a family of four in bed-and-breakfast accommodation in London for one year; and what is the comparable cost of housing a homeless family in a council-owned dwelling.

Sir George Young: The information requested is not available.

London Docklands Development Corporation

Mr. Simon Huges: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much land set aside for public housing has been developed by the London Docklands development corporation in each of the last 10 years; and what amount was set aside for commercial development over the same period.

Sir George Young: The London Docklands development corporation does not set aside land for particular uses. Disposals of land over the last 10 years are as follows:

Year	Public housing (acres)	Commercial (acres)
1984	3·1	8·7
1985	2·9	21·7
1986	9·5	160·1
1987	6·8	64·5
1988	3·8	19·3
1989	17·0	20·5
1990	26·1	11·2
1991	13·4	19·1
1992	5·0	32·9
1993	12·9	4·6
Total	100·5	362·6

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many new units of housing in London docklands have been (a) given planning permission and (b) built, since the LDDC was formed; and how many people accepted by the London boroughs of Newham, Southwark and Tower Hamlets as homeless have been housed in these developments.

Sir George Young: (a) the number of new units given planning permission is 22,874; (b) the number of new units built since 1981 is 17,460.

Nominations to new dwellings built within London docklands are subject to arrangements agreed between housing associations, local authorities and the Housing Corporation. The LDDC does not have access to information as to whether the lettings are to households accepted as homeless by the boroughs.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much LDDC land remains undeveloped; and what percentage of this undeveloped land is set aside for public housing in (a) Newham, (b) Southwark and (c) Tower Hamlets.

Sir George Young: A total of 465 acres of land remain undeveloped at 1 April 1994.

It has not been the LDDC's practice to distinguish between land for public or private housing in setting aside land for residential purposes.

Boat Dwellers

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many registered boat dwellers there are in the United Kingdom (a) currently and (b) 10 years ago; and whether this figure is expected to increase.

Sir George Young: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to bring forward legislation to provide boat dwellers with long-term security of tenure.

Sir George Young: We have no plans to introduce legislation providing statutory security of tenure for houseboat dwellers. Their rights will depend on the terms of any agreement with the landlord of the mooring.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to extend the tenants charter to boat dwellers.

Sir George Young: The tenants charter applies only to those resident in council-owned property. While we would encourage the development of good practice, it is for the owners and operators of moorings to consider whether to follow the Government's citizens charter route in developng their service standards for boat dwellers.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with his ministerial counterpart in Norway concerning THORP; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: No such discussions have taken place.

Fire Precautions (Government Departments)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what were the results of the cost-benefit analysis his Department has carried out to assess the relative costs and benefits of central provision of advice and training to all Government Departments on fire precautions compared with employing consultants to provide comparable advice and training;

(2) if it is his intention to end his Department's provision of free advice and training to other Departments on fire precautions and standards;

(3) what consultation process was followed between his Department and other Government Departments over the intention to withdraw from them the advice and training at present provided by the Department of Environment fire branch.

Mr. Baldry: My Department will continue to provide central guidance on fire protection standards for Government buildings and on procedures for the management of fire safety. But individual Departments are responsible for protecting the buildings which they occupy against fire hazards. They are best placed to decide on the most cost-effective means of obtaining advice about measures to be adopted in particular buildings and about training, whether from in-house staff or consultants. It is therefore appropriate that they should in future take on these responsibilities. Departments were advised on 25 April of the proposed changes; and invited to contribute their views to a review to be carried out on how best to provide my Department's continuing services.

Water Pollution, Worcester

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to co-ordinate the investigation and eventual reports into the pollution of water supplies in the Worcester area, now being conducted by the drinking water inspectorate, the National Rivers Authority, Severn-Trent Water plc, the West Midlands regional health authority and Worcester and district health authority.

Mr. Atkins: We shall ensure that, taking into account the investigations that the various bodies concerned have in hand, the incident is fully and thoroughly investigated.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the pollutants which reached consumers' water supplies in the Worcester area on 15 April.

Mr. Atkins: On 29 April, Severn Trent Water Ltd. in a communication to the drinking water inspectorate, reported the contaminants as 2-ethyl-4-methyl-1, 3-dioxolane and 2-ethyl-5, 5-dimethyl-1, 3-dioxane.

The drinking water inspectorate, as part of its investigation, is requiring Severn Trent Water Ltd. to provide full data from its analysis of samples of drinking water supplies taken in association with the incident. The inspectorate will be checking the validity of the methods of analysis used.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the role of the Director General of the Office of Water Supplies in relation to the water pollution incident at Worcester on 15 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The director general has no role in the immediate investigation of the incident. He may, however, consider in conjunction with the customer service committee, whether the company responded adequately to the needs of its customers, particularly the elderly and the disabled, during the incident and whether appropriate levels of compensation have been offered.

Vitalscheme Ltd

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the licensing procedures followed by Shropshire county council when they authorised the operation of Vitalscheme Ltd. in Wem, Shropshire.

Mr. Atkins: Shropshire county council granted a waste disposal licence under part I of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 to Vitalscheme Ltd. on 28 February 1994. That Act and regulations made under it prescribe the procedures to be followed in granting such licences. Further information on the licence may be obtained from Shropshire county council.

Drinking Water

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to reduce the chlorine levels present in drinking water.

Mr. Atkins: Chlorine is used to disinfect drinking water, and to provide continuing protection in water distribution. There is no evidence that levels used by water companies in England and Wales are excessive, and my right hon. Friend has no plans to require reduced levels to be used.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration is given to quality and technical competence when contracts are being considered for former sections of the Property Services Agency.

Mr. Curry: Client departments are responsible for considering quality and technical competence standards when selecting contractors for tender lists in relation to any contract they let, whether or not one of the privatised PSAS businesses is involved.

Local Government Commission

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many final reviews have been issued by his Local Government Commission to date; how many initial reports have been issued; how many are in course of preparation.

Mr. Curry: The Local Government Commission has published final reports on 10 shire counties, but has been asked to conduct further reviews of three of them. The commission will be publishing draft reports on these and the other 29 shire counties under review during the summer. Final reports on all areas are due to be with the Secretary of State by the end of 1994.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to implement the final reports of the Local Government Commission he has received so far; and if he will make a statement on the powers to be employed with particular reference to the extent to which proposals for different areas will be dealt with together.

Mr. Curry: Changes to local government structure will be implemented by statutory order, subject to affirmative resolution in both Houses. We have made an order establishing a unitary structure on the Isle of Wight from 1 April 1995. We expect that orders for other areas where there is to be change will be laid by summer 1995 and reorganisation will be completed by 1 April 1997. Orders may be laid and debated together, depending on progress; we shall decide on handling at the time, taking into account the pressure of parliamentary business.

Housing (Green Paper)

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many responses were received by his Department to the Green Paper on access to local authority and housing association tenancies; which representations have not been included in this total and for what reasons; and what was the previous highest number of responses to one of his Department's Green Papers.

Sir George Young: The total of all responses received is now over 9,500. As I said in my answer to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) on 12 April, Official Report, column 133, the Department has on occasion received substantially more representations on other matters of widespread interest.

Water Charges

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue a direction to the Director General of Water Services that he should invite views from national, regional and local consumers' organisations and from hon. Members in the course of the current review of water charging limits for water companies in England and Wales.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 28 April 1994]: The Secretary of State does not intend to issue such a direction.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the bodies and individuals whose views have been formally invited in the course of the current review of water charging limits for water companies in England and Wales.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 28 April 1994]: The Director General of Water Services, Mr. Ian Byatt, is responsible for the current periodic review of water charge limits. He began the process of consultation in July 1991 by publishing a consultation paper on the "Cost of Capital". Since then, Mr. Byatt has published a series of further papers in connection with the review, on which a wide range of bodies and individuals, including consumers' organisations and hon. Members, have been invited to express their views. The director general also asked all water companies to consult their customers widely through the publication of market plans.

Birds

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he has had with the Countryside Councils for Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland and English Nature with respect to an agreed management plan United Kingdom-wide for the protection of the habitats of the redshank and dunlin; and if he will supply such a plan to the Environment Commissioner of the European Union.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 29 April 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 25 April, Official Report, column 39.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 25 April, Official Report, columns 40-1, if he will list those organisations which favoured the changes to the bird registration system he has now proposed.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 29 April 1994]: The following organisations fully or partly supported the proposed changes:

Avian Incubation Research
The Game Conservancy Trust
Brent Lodge Bird and Wildlife Trust
Hertfordshire Environmental Records Centre
Birmingham City Council
Wold Austringers' and Falconry Centre
BCM Environmental Services Ltd
The Hawk Board
TRAFFIC International
British Federation of Bird Importers
New Forest Falconry Club
Hawk and Owl Trust
Bird Aid and Wildlife Rescue
Association of Chief Police Officers
National Association of Private Animal Keepers Raptor Breeders Association
London Borough of Croydon
Royal County of Berkshire
London Borough of Hounslow
The Borough of Oswestry
International Wild Waterfowl Association
Kilmarnock and Loudon District Council
Reading Borough Council

In earlier consultations, the following organisations had also supported the deregistration proposals:

British School of Falconry
National Council for Aviculture
British Waterfowl Association

Council Tax

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy that council tax at the full rate be levied on all holiday homes.

Mr. Curry: No.

Water Quality

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to impose a requirement on water companies to improve water quality.

Mr. Atkins: Drinking water in the United Kingdom is of a very high quality. My right hon. Friend has no immediate plans to change the quality standards, which the water companies are required to achieve in advance of the forthcoming revision of the EC drinking water directive.

Correspondence

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will reply to the letter of 13 April from the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East and previous correspondence on the exemption of severely mentally impaired people from liability for payment of council tax; and if he will make a statement regarding the present position.

Mr. Baldry: I wrote to the hon. Member on 27 April informing him that this matter was still under discussion.

City Challenge

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much has been spent by each city challenge committee on administration and other non-regenerative expenses in each year since 1992.

Mr. Baldry: Administrative costs defrayed by each round 1 city challenge partnership in 1992-93 and 1993-94 and each round 2 partnership in 1993-94 are as follows:

Administrative costs

(£000s)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was (a) the total budget that central Government have made available and (b) the amount that has been spent by the city challenge committee on regeneration projects for each city challenge area in each year since 1992.

Mr. Baldry: City challenge partnerships have received a total funding allocation of £7·5 million per annum for five years. Partnerships' expenditure limits were revised as appropriate in order to offset predicted underspends, as they became known, against opportunities to expedite spend elsewhere. These in-year changes do not affect the overall sum allocated to each partnership, which remains at £37·5 million for the five years.

Final expenditure limits and outturn, inclusive of administrative costs, against expenditure limits for each round 1 city challenge partnership in 1992-93 and 1993-94 and each round 2 partnership in 1993-94 are as follows:

HEALTH

Patient Costs

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the average daily cost per patient for all specialties in directly managed units and national health service trusts for each year since 1988-89;

(2) what was the average daily cost per patient for surgical specialties in directly managed units and national health service trusts in each year since 1988-89.

Mr. Sackville: Information for the financial years 1991-92 and 1992-93 is shown in the table. The first wave of national health service trusts was established in April 1991. Comparable data for previous years are not available.

	1991-92	1992-93
	Surgical Specialties
NHS Trusts	£227·64	£226·76
DMUs	£228·34	£246·74

DMUs	£155·61	£167·80

Source: Annual financial returns of regional, district and special health authorities and NHS trusts (1991-92 and 1992-93).

Notes:

1. Surgical specialties include general surgery, urology, trauma and orthopaedics, ENT, ophthalmology, gynaecology, dental specialties, neurosurgery, plastic surgery, cardiothoracic surgery and paediatric surgery.
2. Figures are based on in-patients and day cases.
3. Figures include overheads and capital charges.

Ms Storrs

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the NHS executive has received legal advice in the matter of the £78,000 paid to Ms Storrs by the Wessex regional health authority; and what steps are being taken to recover this payment.

Dr. Mawhinney: Legal advice has been obtained by the regional health authority and we are discussing with them whether recovery action would be cost-effective.

Health Literature Line

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the titles of leaflets sent out by the health literature line since April 1993 and the numbers of each distributed.

Mr. Sackville: Information on leaflet titles and numbers ordered have been placed in the Library. Copies of the publications that are currently available will be placed in the Library.

Computer Reimbursement

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what amount was spent in primary care on computer reimbursement in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table based on quarterly returns from family health services authorities. The amount reimbursed in 1990-91, when the scheme was introduced, includes claims for the years 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Year	£ million
1990-91	17·5
1991-92	34·0
1992-93	40·2
1993-94	[1]36·5

Data Protection

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who holds the copyright on data in primary care (a) in written notes and (b) on computers; and what statute, regulations or guidance govern this matter.

Mr. Sackville: The physical records on which data about patients is recorded by general practitioners are owned by the family health services authority. The equitable copyright of that data is also vested in the FHSA under common law because the author of the record compiles it pursuant to an obligation to maintain records, his remuneration in part is based on his doing so and he does so in circumstances whereby he owes a duty of good faith and fidelity to the FHSA. The principles apply equally to manual and computerised records.

Advertising

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what television advertisements her Department has paid for to promote Her Majesty's Government's health policy over the last two years; if she will consider running advertisements to educate the public about not calling out general practitioners unnecessarily at night; if she will examine the results of similar campaigns in Canada; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Television advertising campaigns for drug and solvent misuse and for organ donation have been carried out in each of the last two years at a total estimated cost of £5,509,156.

We are, jointly with the medical profession, working on an extension of the "Help Us to Help You" campaign to inform patients about making best, and appropriate, use of general practitioner out-of-hours services. We have no plans to use television advertising in this campaign.

Sex Education

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans she has to ensure that health professionals receive training in good educational practice for the delivery of sex education in schools;

(2) what plans she has to ensure that health professionals will be fully cognisant of their legal responsibilities in the delivery of sex education in schools;

(3) what steps she is taking to ensure that the skills of health education professionals in her Department are co-ordinated with those of Department for Education professionals teaching sex education in schools.

Mr. Sackville: Arrangements to meet any sex education training needs of health professionals are a matter for local determination by health authorities.

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to set up an inter-departmental working group to share, develop and co-ordinate good practice in the delivery of sex education in schools.

Mr. Sackville: None. The Department for Education's forthcoming circular on the provision of sex education in schools will give advice to education authorities on links with health authorities and the role of health professionals in providing sex education.

Family Health Centres (North of England)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many family health centres per 1,000 population there are in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Sheffield.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is shown in the table.

Family Health Services Authority	Number of Health Centres	Population in thousands	Health Centres per 1,000
Doncaster	12	293	0·04
Barnsley	16	225	0·07
Rotherham	11	255	0·04
Sheffield	10	531	0·02

Notes:
The number of Health Centres is as at 1 October 1993.
The Population data for family health services authorities comes from Office of Population Censuses and Surveys mid 1992 estimates from the 1991 Census.

Child Mortality Rate

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the national child mortality rate; and what are the rates in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Sheffield.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table:

Child mortality[1] rates in England and Wales, Doncaster, Barnsley, Rotherham and Sheffield County Districts for the combined years of 1990-1992.

	1990-1992 rate[2]
	Male	Female
England and Wales	83	64
Doncaster	90	64
Barnsley	90	67
Rotherham	92	62
Sheffield	85	78

[1] 0-14 years of age
[2] Rate per 100,000 population
Note:
The combined years of 1990-92 have been used to overcome the random fluctuations due to the small number of events in these areas.

Good Hope Hospital, Birmingham

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will call for a report on the availability of the speech and language therapy facility at Good Hope hospital in Birmingham between 31 March and 1 July and explanations for the deficiencies in provision;

(2) if she will call for a report on the procedures adopted for allocating the contract for speech and language therapy at Good Hope hospital up to 31 March.

Mr. Sackville: The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Doug Ellis, chairman of the trust, for details.

DNase

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with which regional health authorities her Department has had discussions relating to the use of the drug DNase; if she has recommended its use to regional health authorities; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Department has been contacted by Bristol and District health authority about DNase, initially via the South West regional health authority. The Department advises health authorities to purchase health care on the basis of the best available information about the effectiveness and cost-effectiveness of interventions: it has issued no specific advice about DNase.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what dates and where she has held discussions with officers of community health councils in the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: Health Ministers have had a number of discussions with individual community health councils and their representative organisations. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met the chief officer and vice chair of West Surrey and North East Hampshire CHC in January of last year. My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville) and I spoke at the Association of Community Health Councils for England and Wales annual conferences in 1992 and 1993 respectively.

Infant Mortality

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the level of infant mortality in each of the past 10 years in each district health authority in Birmingham.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Bioethics

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how she proposes to respond to the report of the Nuffield Council on Bioethics "Genetic Screening: Ethical Issues", and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) on 22 February, Official Report, column 203.

NHS Estate

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she has taken to implement the Audit Commission report on NHS estate management and property maintenance; what further action she proposes to take to implement the report; and what additional funds have been allocated for property maintenance.

Mr. Sackville: The Audit Commission's report, which was published in 1991, has stimulated the following activities:

(a) all provider units are required to produce estate management and development strategies including projections for auditors in backlog maintenance.
(b) plans for the five year period to March 1997 indicate an intention to reduce backlog maintenance by 37 per cent. or £1·43 billion.
(c) revised guidance on estate maintenance and property utilisation was issued to the National Health Service in October 1993.

No separate funds are allocated for property maintenance. These are treated as normal revenue costs which provider units include in their prices.

Asthma

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research is being conducted into the rate of increase in the incidence of asthma; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) on 14 February, Official Report, column 627, and my hon. Friend the Member for Chislehurst (Mr. Sims) on 29 March, Official Report, column 684.

Brighton Health Trust

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will ensure the dismissal of the chairman and chief executive of the Brighton health trust in relation to their policy statement on the treatment of people above a certain age.

Dr. Mawhinney: No.

Security

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the use of private detective agencies and security companies by her Department.

Mr. Sackville: The Department does not use private detective agencies but does use security companies to guard official premises where this provides best value for money.

NHS Estates Agency

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the plans for 1994-95 for the NHS Estates executive agency.

Mr. Sackville: I am pleased to report that the national health services estates management and health building agency—NHS Estates—has had a successful year as an executive agency of this Department. I have agreed the agency's 1994-95 annual business plan, and have placed in the Library copies of its key tasks and targets for 1994-95.

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many civil servants in her Department and its predecessor department applied in each year since 1986 through the business opportunities system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) with a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

Mr. Sackville: The available information from 1989 is shown in the table.

Department of Health—Business appointment applications

	1989	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994
Number of applicants	11	11	10	6	13	5
Independent consultants	1	2	3	1	5	0
Unconditional approval	0	1	1	1	5	0
Conditional approval	1	1	2	0	0	0
Other	10	9	7	5	8	4
Unconditional approval	9	9	6	5	8	4
Conditional approval	1	0	1	0	0	0
Number referred to advisory committee	0	1	0	0	1	0
Granted	0	1	0	0	1	0

NHS Trusts (Employees)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance her Department has issued to NHS trust employees about part-time employment as consultants in companies which might bid for contracts with NHS trusts; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Guidance is contained in HSG (93)5, copies of which are available in the Library.

Allergies

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list by region the national health service centres for treatments (a) for allergies in general and (b) for allergic reactions to steroid treatments;

(2) what research her Department has commissioned into the links between serious allergic reactions and steroid treatments; and if she will publish the conclusions of the research.

Mr. Sackville: A list of national health service allergy clinics is published by the British Society for Allergy and Clinical Immunology, copies of which will be placed in the Library.

The Department has no plans to carry out research into allergic reactions to steroid treatment. Allergic reactions to steroid treatment are extremely rare, and most frequently affect the skin, in which case treatment would be obtained in the dermatology clinic in the district hospital.

Residential Care and Nursing Homes

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what proposals she has for amendments to legislation concerning the regulation and inspection of residential care and nursing homes; when such proposals will be published; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what proposals she has to issue new guidance or amend existing regulations concerning the regulation and inspection of residential care and nursing homes; when the proposals will be published; and if she will make a statement;

Mr. Bowis: The Department is discussing those matters with regulatory and provider interests. We will consult more widely if, in due course, we have specific proposals for improving regulation and inspection processes while retaining safeguards for vulnerable residents.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps will be taken to ensure the suitability of the lay assessors proposed for the monitoring of residential care.

Mr. Bowis: The recruitment and selection of lay assessors, and the terms on which they are engaged, are matters in which authorities are free to use their discretion. However, the Department's policy guidance emphasises the need for authorities to satisfy themselves about the suitability of the people they engage. Copies of the guidance, LAC(94)16, will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what independent research has been undertaken into the operation of the Registered Homes Act 1984, as amended; and in what way this is being taken into account during her review of this Act.

Mr. Bowis: We are not aware of any such research.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken to monitor and evaluate the cost of inspection and regulation of residential care and nursing homes.

Mr. Bowis: Local authorities and health authorities provide information annually on their costs in registering and inspecting residential care homes and nursing homes respectively. Those costs are kept under review by the Department.

"Home Life" Manual

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are currently being taken to review the provisions of her Department's "Home Life" manual.

Mr. Bowis: We are considering with respresentatives of the local authorities associations and other interested parties the need for a review of "Home Life".

Orthopaedic Implants

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date the replacement of the "Guide to Good Manufacturing Practice for Orthopaedic Implants" by the "Quality Systems for Orthopaedic Implants-Good Manufacturing Practice" became effective; who was responsible for the replacement; what consultations she undertook in relation to the replacement of the former by the latter; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The "Guide to Good Manufacturing Practice for Orthopaedic Implants" was replaced with the "Quality Systems Document for Orthopaedic Implants" by the supplies technology division of the Department of Health with effect from 1 May 1991. The main reason for the change was to bring departmental standards in line with international standards for quality assurance, BS 5750 Part 1 1987 equivalent to ISO 9001. Relevant medical device trade associations were consulted in the drawing up of the revised document.

Patients Over 70

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance is issued in the NHS on whether patients aged 70 years and over admitted to hospitals with suspected heart attacks should be placed in coronary care units rather than general wards.

Mr. Sackville: Decisions about the most appropriate admission and treatment are based upon the needs of the individual patient and should be taken by the clinicians in charge of the patient.

Out-of-hours Work (Doctors)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will publish the report by KPMG Peat Marwick about out-of-hours work by doctors.

Dr. Mawhinney: Ministers are currently considering the report.

NHS (Private Finance)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 14 April, Official Report, column 293, if she will provide details of the value of private sector capital for each of the 20 schemes which have been approved centrally since February 1993 and the private sector companies involved.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

NHS projects using private capital over £1 million approved since February 1993

Urban Policies

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list every urban policy that has been instituted or operated from 1979, the date that each scheme began operating, where appropriate when they ceased operating and the funds available on an annual basis at current prices.

Mr. Baldry: Economic, social and physical regeneration is supported through main programmes by several Government Departments and by targeted initiatives. My reply of 25 April 1994 to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) Official Report, columns 36-37, contained detailed information about the latter programmes, including spending from 1981-82. For the urban programme, which began in 1979, the additional figures sought are £83 million for 1979-80 and £112 million for 1980-81 in cash terms. All the programmes listed in the earlier reply have now been combined within the single regeneration Budget from 1 April 1994.

While not included in the earlier reply, enterprise zones, also a targeted urban initiative were launched in 1981. They offer a range of incentives to industrial and commercial firms in designated areas. These have not involved any direct expenditure, but an estimated £1·7 billion has been forgone in rates and taxes.

EDUCATION

Thamesmead Primary Schools

5. Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to meet parents and staff of primary schools in Thamesmead.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has no such plans.

Vandalism

14. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what special help is available for schools suffering especially severe problems of vandalism.

Mr. Boswell: Detailed security measures appropriate for a school suffering vandalism problems are best determined by the school governing body in consultation with the local police crime prevention officers.

The Department has published comprehensive guidance for schools on measures commensurate with the risk they are facing.

Liverpool Schools

15. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he is taking to make resources available to refurbish older and pre-war schools in Liverpool.

Mr. Forth: Capital support for maintained schools in the area of Liverpool local education authority, including voluntary aided and special agreement schools, amounts to over £7 million in 1994-95.

Ethnic Minority Pupils

16. Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he next plans to meet the Home Secretary to discuss the effect of the cuts to the section 11 budget on equal access for pupils with an ethnic minority background to the curriculum in schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Grant-maintained Schools

17. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many schools have voted to opt out of local education authority control under the Government's present scheme; and what is the average revenue grant given by the Government to such schools in the first year of their direct grant-aided status.

Mr. Robin Squire: To date parents at more than 1,100 schools in England have voted in favour of grant-maintained status.

In addition to the recurrent grants which grant-maintained schools are eligible to receive each year, schools new to the sector receive a grant to help meet transitional costs in the first year. In 1994-95, schools with less than two years' experience of managing a delegated budget will be eligible to receive a grant equivalent to £30,000 plus £30 per pupil. Other schools will be eligible to receive £20,000 plus £15 per pupil.

19. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement about the number of primary schools opting for grant-maintained status.

Mr. Robin Squire: To date, 445 primary schools have voted for grant-maintained status. The number of self-governing primary schools has more than trebled in the past year.

20. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what guidelines he has issued to local education authorities as to what would be a reasonable percentage deduction for the provision of central support services prior to the allocation of funds to grant-maintained schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: None.

22. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many parental ballots have taken place on the issue of grant-maintained status since September 1993; what were the results; and what were the figures for the previous 12 months.

Mr. Robin Squire: Since 1 September 1993, 217 ballots on grant-maintained status have closed, 137 of which resulted in votes in favour of self-government, and 80 in votes against. In the preceding 12 months, there were 703 ballots, 544 of which resulted in a yes vote and 159 in a no vote.

Education Expenditure

21. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what are his proposals for future spending on education in England.

Mr. Forth: Planned spending by central Government, subject to review in the public expenditure survey, rises from £10·4 billion in 1994-95 to £11·3 billion in 1996-97. The 1994-95 grant settlement allows for LEAs in England to spend £17·1 billion on education; the 1995-96 settlement will be announced later in the year.

Further Education Colleges

24. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement on the implementation of new contracts in further education colleges.

Mr. Boswell: In order to implement our policy to encourage flexibility by holdback, the Further Education Funding Council will be asking colleges to sign a declaration shortly about the introduction of new contracts. I understand that most colleges have introduced a new contract for newly appointed staff.

Student Loans

25. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what correspondence he has received from students on the question of student loans in the last month.

Mr. Boswell: During March 1994, the Department received about 270 letters about student support issues. It is not possible to separate letters about student loans from letters on the other student support matters.

School Leaving Age

26. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to raise the school leaving age.

Mr. Forth: None.

Special Educational Needs

27. Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to provide suitable training for special educational needs co-ordinators in schools.

Mr. Forth: The draft code of practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs confirms the importance of training for special educational needs co-ordinators. Over £5·5 million is newly available to schools this year to help them develop special educational needs policies and train co-ordinators. This is on top of the support of nearly £10 million for training in special educational needs more generally. In addition, the Department is planning measures to disseminate the messages of the code of practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs, subject to parliamentary approval of the draft, to special educational needs co-ordinators and others.

National Tests

28. Sir David Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what further discussions he is planning with the education services concerning national tests this year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: We have not received any further requests to discuss the 1994 national tests, and we have no plans to do so.

Educational Exports

29. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he is taking to encourage the growth in the export of British educational services.

Mr. Boswell: I refer my right hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans).

Bolton Institute of Higher Education

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he expects to reach a decision on Bolton Institute of Higher Education's application for research degree availability powers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

The institute's application for research degree-awarding powers is currently under consideration and a decision will be reached as soon as possible.

Specialist Subjects

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment he has made of the effect of local government reform on the work of local education authorities in relation to the provision of teaching in specialist subjects.

Mr. Robin Squire: Any changes resulting from the review of local government will not affect schools' responsibilities for delivering the national curriculum. The Local Government Commission is required to consider the implications of reorganisation for all local authority services including education.

Nursery Education

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proposals he has further to extend nursery education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms Short), Official Report, 29 March, column 738.

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the total amount of money allocated in the education budget for nursery and early year training and initiatives in 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: The 1994-95 local authority grant settlement allows for local authorities in England to spend £17,087 million on education. It is for individual local authorities and schools to decide how much to spend on nursery and early years education, including staff training, in the light of their own particular circumstances.

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what advice is given by his Department to schools on the provision of resources for the training of nursery teachers and nursery nurses in 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: No such advice has been given. The allocation of their resources for the training of staff is a matter for schools themselves.

Single-sex Education

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make an official visit to the London borough of Havering to assess the adequacy of the provision of single-sex education in the area.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend sees no need for such a visit.

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many civil servants in his Department applied in each year since 1986 through the business appointments system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) in a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

Mr. Boswell: Detailed records of outside appointments taken up under the business appointments system have been maintained by the Department since 1990. The information required is given in the table.

The great majority of applications in 1990 and 1991 came from former members of Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools.

	Number of applications	Number granted	With whom	Number referred to Advisory Committee on Business Appointments
1990	23	23	4 – Independent consultants 2 – Consultants 17 – Other employment	2
1991	16	16	5 – Independent consultants 11 – Other employment	None
1992	No applications recorded
1993	6	6	2 – Independent consultants 1 – Consultants 3 – Other employment	2
1994	To date one application has been submitted which has been referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments. Awaiting a decision.

Education Support and Training

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received on the matter of reduction in grants for education support and training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: In responding to the Department's letters indicating allocations for 1994-95, a number of local educational authorities have indicated that they would have preferred larger sums. The national reduction from £320 million in 1993-94 to £270 million in 1994-95 reflected the growing number of self-governing schools and overall pressures on public expenditure.

Urban Policy Initiatives

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list every urban policy initiative that has been instituted or operated since 1979, the date that each scheme began operating, where appropriate the date that the scheme ceased operating and the funds available on an annual basis under each scheme.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department has provided grant support over three years—1992 to 1995—for projects to raise standards in inner city schools through activity 19 of grants for education support and training. Total supported expenditure for each of the three years is given in the table.

	£ million
1992-93	6·6
1993-94	10·3
1994-95	8·0

Local Management of Schools

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he expects all primary and secondary schools to have fully delegated powers under local management of schools.

Mr. Forth: All primary and secondary schools now have delegated budgets, except in a very small number of cases where deregulation has been withdrawn by LEAs.

Security

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement on the use of private detective agencies and security companies by his Department.

Mr. Boswell: The Department makes no use of private detective agencies. In so far as security companies are concerned, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Walsall, South (Mr. George) on 22 April 1994, Official Report, column 677.

City Technology Colleges

23. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list his responsibilities in relation to the organisation of city technology colleges.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend's responsibilities are laid down in section 105 of the Education Reform Act 1988 and in the funding agreements drawn up under that section for each city technology college. Copies of the Act and the model funding agreement are available in the Library. CTCs are independent schools given the maximum discretion to manage their own affairs.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will place in the Library a copy of the management plan of each of the 13 schools listed in his announcement of 26 April.

Mr. Robin Squire: No. Applications under the technology colleges initiative were prepared by individual schools and their sponsors for submission to the Department. Management plans were not necessarily prepared with any expectation that they would become public documents.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list for each of the 13 schools listed in his announcement of 26 April, the date when it will become a technology college, its current pupil roll and character, whether he has received an application for approval to a change in its admissions arrangements, how many sponsor governors are being appointed, what is the term of office of each sponsor governor and which of the sponsors are represented by a sponsor governor.

Mr. Robin Squire: The 13 schools announced on 26 April each plan to operate as technology colleges from 1 September 1994. None of the schools has applied to make a change in its admission arrangements constituting a change of character within the meaning of the Education Act 1993. Each school has confirmed its intention formally to apply to take on between one and four sponsor governors before September 1994. Which of the sponsors are represented by sponsor governors will be determined at that stage. The term of office for sponsor governors is required under the Education Act 1993 to be between five and seven years, with the exact term being specified in the instrument of government. The current pupil roll and character of each school is summarised in the table.

School	[1] Pupil number	Age range and character
Applemore Technology School	764	11–16 non-selective mixed
Bacup and Rawtenstall Grammar School	925	11–18 selective mixed
Denefield School	1,071	11–18 non-selective mixed
John Kelly Boys Community School	511	11–18 non-selective boys
John Kelly Girls Community School	739	11–18 non-selective girls
Lancaster Royal Grammar School	876	11–18 selective boys
Mill Hill County High School	1,199	11–18 non-selective mixed

TRANSPORT

Overseas Consultancies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the overseas consultancies undertaken by the Transport Research Laboratory during the last five years, the value of each contract and the country it was dealing with.

Mr. Key: As the information requested by the hon. Member relates to operational matters of the Transport Research Laboratory I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from J. Wotton to Mr. Michael Meacher, dated 29 April 1994:

PQ2035/93/94

The Minister for Roads and Traffic has asked me to reply to your Question about the overseas consultancies undertaken by the Transport Research Laboratory (TRL).

I enclose a list of consultancies undertaken over the last five years. The list gives details of the nature of each consultancy, the total value of each contract and the country in which the consultancy work was carried out.

Vehicle Journeys

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the average daily numbers of (a) commercial transport vehicle journeys and (b) the number of private motor car journeys undertaken in each English region in each year since 1979.

Mr. Key: The information requested is not available. However, figures of the average daily flows of traffic, classified by vehicle type, in English regions, for 1991 and 1992, are published in "Road Traffic Statistics Great Britain" 1992 and 1993 respectively. Copies of these publications are available in the House of Commons Library.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will define the role of Dewe Rogerson on behalf of his Department in relation to rail privatisation; and how much it has been paid to date.

Mr. Freeman: Dewe Rogerson were appointed in March 1993 as advisers on the appropriate marketing strategy for ensuring the successful implementation of the Government's rail privatisation policy.

To date, Dewe Rogerson have been paid £520,000 excluding VAT for this advice.

Trunk Roads Review

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what fresh advice or representations he received on the strategic importance of the proposed improvements to the A64, the A19 and the A1237 during his recent review of trunk roads in England.

Mr. Key: During the recent review of trunk roads, schemes in the existing programme were prioritised on the basis of route importance, economic benefits, and environmental constraints. The case for the improvement of the A64 between York and Seamer has been accepted, but construction will be deferred until a later date. Similar considerations apply to the A19 Thormanby bypass and the Shipton by Beningborough bypass. The A1237 York northern bypass improvement has been withdrawn because of local opposition on traffic and environmental grounds.

Strensham Services

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will arrange to amend the notice north of junction 15 on the M40 to show the correct distance to Strensham services on the M5.

Mr. Key: This is a matter for the Highways Agency and the chief executive will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Peter Luff, dated 29 April 1994:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Transport, in a written PQ, if he would arrange to amend the notice north of junction 15 on the M40 to show the correct distance to Strensham Services on the M5. As this is the responsibility of the Highways Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply.

The sign north of M40 junction 15 was recently amended as part of the West Midlands motorway box resigning. Unfortunately the distance to the Strensham Services on the M5 south had been incorrectly given as 17 miles instead of 45 miles. A cover plate giving the correct distance has now been made and you will be pleased to know that the sign was amended on 26 April.

BR Land (Trespass)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria are used in making a decision as to whether or not to prosecute for trespass on BR land, including railway lines.

Mr. Freeman: Decisions on prosecutions are made in accordance with the Attorney-General's guidelines.

Mr. Robert Horton

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 15 April, Official Report, column 333, on which three weekdays Mr. Robert Horton is expected to work for Railtrack; what hours are stipulated; and what are his holiday entitlements and principal fringe benefits.

Mr. Freeman: Mr. Horton works on the days of the week which meet the requirements of Railtrack. His holidays and benefits are negotiated between him and the company.

Cherished Number Transfers

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 21 February, Official Report, column 82, on which visits the chief executive met administrative assistants or administrative officers.

Mr. Key: During his visits to the agency's local offices the chief executive tries to meet as many staff as possible of all grades.

Departmental Transfers

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn) of 4 February, Official Report, column 1004, if he will make a statement regarding the various departmental transfers; what they were; and how much cost was involved.

Mr. Norris: The various interdepartmental transfers were:

(i) £500,000 from the Department of National Heritage to cover the cost of archaeology surveys and excavations;
(ii) £30,000 from the Department of the Environment, £473,000 from Property Holdings and £247,000 from Defence Research Agency for hard charged repayment services; and
(iii) £1,376,000 refunded from the Department of the Environment in respect of the discontinuance of the scheme to improve Lower Road, Southwark.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 21 February, Official Report, column 81, if he will state, against each date listed, the purpose of the visit by the DVLA chief executive to his Department's headquarters.

Mr. Key: These visits all involved discussions with Ministers or senior officials on matters concerning the management of the agency.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on when the trail of automated first registration and licensing by DVLA began; where the trial is being conducted; and what are its terms of reference, objectives, the evaluation process of the trial, the definition of what will be a successful trial and details of the implementation timetable.

Mr. Key: The automated first registration and licensing project will speed up the registration process for new cars, make significant cost savings for the motor trade and improve the quality of the DVLA vehicle record, which is vital to the police in the fight against crime. A total of 6,500 car dealers and 16 motor manufacturers are expected progressively to take advantage of the new facility from later this year onwards.

A two-stage pilot scheme has been developed to test two different methods of computer linkage between motor dealers and the DVLA system—direct connection and connection via the manufacturer's management system. The first phase will start on 23 May involving certain dealers in the Bristol area with the second scheduled for October.

The terms of reference for the pilot are to prove the technical integrity of the new system and to ensure that it delivers the required benefits to the motoring public, dealers, manufacturers, and other interests. Live operations will be carefully monitored to ensure that the systems and procedures can be implemented without compromising security or existing procedures.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 7 March, Official Report, column 4, if he will make a statement on how the senior management in DVLA was revised; how this had improved management of the agency; what advice and assistance was given by the consultants Price Waterhouse; and at what cost.

Mr. Key: Following a review of its management structure and operations DVLA revised its organisation into more focused executive groups, plus other changes. This has helped sharpen decision-making and reduced costs. Price Waterhouse provided expertise and advice to the agency's management, drawing on its experience of other organisations in both the public and private sectors. Its fees and expenses totalled some £72,000.

Receipts (Shortfall)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn) of 4 February, Official Report, column 1004, if he will make a statement regarding the shortfall of receipts from the recovery of administrative costs and various repayment services; how large the shortfall was; what the receipts were; what administrative costs were involved; and if he will list all the repayment services involved in the shortfall.

Mr. Norris: The shortfall in receipts on class VI, vote 2, was £4·2 million. It relates principally to payments made to the central Department for services provided to the Department's agencies. The agencies have been encouraged, in line with "next steps" principles, to assume direct responsibility for services such as personnel, finance and accounting, previously provided by the central Department. The lower receipts reflect their reduced demand for central services.

Expenditure Increases

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn) of 4 February, Official Report, column 1004, if he will make a statement regarding the increases in expenditure; and what is the amount of the increased expenditure and its purposes.

Mr. Norris: The increases in expenditure are:

(i) £3,513,000 for Eurocontrol arising from increased activity by Eurocontrol subsequent to the initial agreement on and preparation of 1993-94 provision;

(ii) £1,750,000 in connection with the privatisation of the DVOIT; and

(iii) £1,729,000 for capital expenditure mainly in connection with my Department's headquarters accommodation.

School Transport

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Education concerning the introduction of a requirement to provide a seat for each school child travelling on school journeys using minibuses, buses or coaches, and a seat belt for every seat; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport and I have consulted my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education as part of our review of the technical and cost implications of fitting seat belts to all seats in all minibuses and coaches.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the European directives which apply to the design and construction of minibus, bus and coach regulations; and what action he intends to take to enable future harmonisation for the installation of seat belts in school minibuses, buses and coaches.

Mr. Key: A proposal for a draft directive on bus, coach and minibus construction is currently being discussed in a European Commission experts group. Other directives applying to these vehicles are set out in annex IV of directive 92/53/EEC, amending directive 70/156/EEC.

The European Commission announced in February its strategy for improving bus and coach safety: their objective is to agree the technical requirements for fitting seat belts to all seats in vehicles which do not carry standing passengers.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish details of the research he has commissioned relating to future installation of seat belts in school minibuses, buses and coaches used to transport school children; and what further research he intends to commission.

Mr. Key: The Department has conducted a good deal of research into the fitment of seat belts mainly in relation to cars. Much of this research has been published and can be used to inform policy on the fitment of seat belts in other vehicles. Further research projects into various aspects of bus and coach safety are planned for the near future, but contracts have not yet been let.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the current regulations which exist to regulate the driving of public service vehicles, including their drivers, and from which buses, minibuses or coaches transporting school children, could be exempt.

Mr. Key: The driving licence arrangements for passenger-carrying vehicles are contained in the Motor Vehicle (Driving Licences) (Large Goods and Passenger-Carrying) Vehicles) Regulations 1990 SI 1990 No. 2612.

Drivers of buses, minibuses or coaches transporting school children are only exempt from PCV licensing if they drive under the terms of permits granted under regulations made under section 19 of the Transport Act 1985. These are the Minibus and Other Section 19 Permit Buses Regulations 1987 SI 1987 No. 1230, the section 19 Minibus (Designated Bodies) Order 1987 SI 1987 No. 1229, and the Section 19 Minibus (Designated Bodies) (Amendment) Order 1990 SI 1990 No. 1708. But, in practice, most drivers of vehicles transporting school children do not make use of these permits as they are contracted-in from bus operators whose drivers hold full PCV entitlement.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will visit Strathclyde to discuss with Strathclyde council its reasons for banning the practice of seating three school children to a two-seater seat on buses and coaches used for school journeys.

Mr. Key: No. The Carrying Capacity Regulations permit three seated children under the age of 14 to share a double seat and count as two passengers. This is a concession and authorities and operators may take advantage of it as they think fit.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish details of the research he has commissioned in respect of the retrospective fitting of seat belts to minibuses, buses and coaches used to transport school children.

Mr. Key: The diversity of vehicle types used for school transport and the way in which they are constructed are such that research of this kind could not be undertaken economically.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning the installation and enforcement of the wearing of seat belts in minibuses, buses and coaches used as school buses.

Mr. Key: I have received a great many representations on this subject.

We are currently reviewing the full technical and cost implications of fitting seat belts to all seats in all minibuses and coaches, not just those used as school buses.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will meet the Belt Up School Kids organisation to discuss seat belt safety in buses, coaches and minibuses used for school journeys.

Mr. Key: Yes. I have agreed to meet representatives of the originating BUSK group.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what records he maintains of school buses checked and found not roadworthy; and if he will publish the results of such adverse tests (a) by local education authority area and (b) for each year since 1985.

Mr. Key [holding answer 28 April 1994]: There are no special arrangements for testing vehicles contracted to carry children to and from school. Like all coaches, buses and minibuses with more than eight passenger seats they must be tested one year after first being registered and annually thereafter. The arrangements for annual testing have not changed since 1985.

In addition VI staff also conduct roadside spot checks on all vehicle types. In 1992-93, the last full year for which figures are available, the vehicle inspectorate carried out almost 25,000 roadside spot checks on public service vehicles and issued immediate prohibitions, for dangerous defects, in 5·2 per cent. of cases. About one third of the PSV fleet is checked in this way annually and there are no plans to change that figure.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how frequently his Department's inspectorate carries out tests on vehicles contracted to transport children to and from school; what changes have been made to the arrangements for such tests since 1985; what reports of adverse results from spot checks he has received in 1994; what changes he plans; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key [holding answer 28 April 1994]: This information is unavailable. School buses are not a separate class of vehicle. Consequently the vehicle inspectorate, which is responsible for roadworthiness enforcement, does not maintain a separate record on the roadworthiness of these vehicles.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to bring the United Kingdom into line with other EC member states in regulations relating to drivers' records and tachographs in relation to school buses and minibuses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key [holding answer 29 April 1994]: The United Kingdom applies the EC regulations on drivers' hours and tachographs in respect of school buses and minibuses. I have no plans to change the present position.

Public Service Vehicles

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library details of the recent investigations undertaken by the traffic commissioners on the extent to which current public service vehicle regulations are being met.

Mr. Key: The annual reports of the traffic commissioners include commentary on investigations concerning public service vehicle operations. The latest set of reports covering the 1992-93 period were placed in the Library when published on 2 August last year.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with Eurotunnel regarding the delay in opening the channel tunnel; and what are the reasons for the delay.

Mr. Freeman: Opening of the tunnel for commercial services is a matter for Eurotunnel subject to authorisation by the Intergovernmental Commission under the terms of the concession agreement. I understand from the IGC that Eurotunnel has yet to complete some testing and commissioning work before a service can be authorised.

Lighthouses

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of personnel employed by (a) the Northern Lighthouse Board and (b) Trinity House on 1 January in (i) 1985, (ii) 1989, (iii) 1993 and (iv) 1994; and if he will indicate the distribution of employees between (1) headquarters administration, (2) lighthouse keeping and (3) providing logistical support for manned and automatic lighthouses, including service on lighthouse board vessels.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 27 April 1994]: The numbers are:

	Headquarters administration	Lighthouse keepers (including light vessel personnel)	Logistical support
Northern Lighthouse Board
1 January 1985	58	231	225
1 January 1989	51	202	207

DEFENCE

AWE, Aldermaston

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the fires which occurred at the atomic weapons establishment, Aldermaston on 10 and 20 October 1993, listed as incident numbers 13390 and 14095 by Berkshire fire and rescue service.

Mr. Aitken: AWE does not hold a record of the incident numbers used by the Berkshire fire and rescue service, but, on 10 October 1993, a glove in contact with a laboratory hot plate smouldered causing activation of an automatic fire detection system. On 20 October 1993, a small high voltage electrical unit split resulting in an oil fire. Both incidents were quickly dealt with by the AWE fire service. Berkshire fire and rescue service was informed as a matter of routine.

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress being made in negotiations with Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution regarding the cleaning up of the north area ponds at AWE Aldermaston; and if he will place in the Library copies of the reports detailing the extent of contamination of these ponds.

Mr. Aitken: AWE holds regular discussions with Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution on a range of environmental issues. The development of engineering options for water management, as well as cleaning up the contamination in the North Ponds, form part of these discussions. AWE safety division has undertaken a detailed radiological survey of the ponds which details the nature and the extent of the contamination, which is not of radiological concern and exists only in an access-controlled location. This survey is one of many that AWE undertakes for its own management purposes. It is not appropriate to place a copy of this report in the Library.

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the policy of the AWE Aldermaston fire service towards providing reports of all fires that have occurred at the site to Berkshire fire and rescue service.

Mr. Aitken: The policy of the AWE Aldermaston fire service is to notify Berkshire fire and rescue service of all calls it receives. In addition to fires this will include automatic detection equipment false alarms and mistaken call-outs. Reports are provided to the Berkshire fire and rescue service where appropriate.

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who is responsible for carrying out and paying for all decommissioning works carried out at AWE Aldermaston; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: The MoD is responsible for the costs of decommissioning works carried out at AWE Aldermaston. Management of the decommissioning task is performed by Hunting-BRAE plc on behalf of the MoD, and decommissioning activities may be undertaken either by Hunting-BRAE directly or by suitable sub-contractors.

Mutual Defence Agreement

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next expects to conduct negotiations to amend or renew the agreement between Her Majesty's Government and the United States of America for co-operation on the uses of atomic energy for mutual defence purposes, originally agreed on 3 July 1958, treaty series No. 41 (1958), Command 537; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: Discussions over an amendment to extend the validity of those articles of the agreement which expire on 31 December 1994 are currently taking place between officials.

Press Office, Plymouth

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the circumstances that led to the suspension from duty of Steven Wilmott and David Harris from his Department's press office in Plymouth.

Mr. Aitken: Messrs. Wilmott and Harris have been suspended on full pay following allegations and are now the subject of an internal departmental investigation.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the salary received and expenses claimed in 1992-93 and 1993-94 by Steven Wilmott and David Harris from his Department's press office in Plymouth.

Mr. Aitken: It is not my Department's practice to reveal details of payments made to individuals.

RAF Pilots (Leather Jackets)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement about the military value to RAF pilots of wearing leather jackets;

(2) how many leather jackets have been provided for RAF pilots and aircrew in the past two years; and at what cost;

(3) whether leather jackets are part of the uniform for RAF pilots and aircrew.

Mr. Hanley: Leather jackets are an optional item of dress and are of no direct military value to RAF pilots. They are not therefore provided at public expense.

Detective Agencies

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department has spent on contracts with private detective agencies since 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: I am not aware of any expenditure by my Department on contracts with private detective agencies. I am aware, however, that the Treasury Solicitor's Department does sometimes employ inquiry agents when pursuing debtors of the MOD and other Government Departments. While such services are not paid for directly by my Department, they will be included in the final costs submitted by the Treasury Solicitor's Department.

Commonwealth War Graves Commission

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will take steps to make better known the work undertaken by the Commonwealth War Graves Commission in maintaining the records, memorials and war graves of allied service people killed in two world wars.

Mr. Hanley: The Commonwealth War Graves Commission is responsible for arranging its own publicity. The MOD does, however, make a major financial contribution to the Commission's budget on behalf of Her Britannic Majesty's Government, which includes funds for publicity.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the British Government's contribution to the Commonwealth War Graves Commission in 1993-94; and what he proposes it will be in 1994-95;

(2) if he will set out the factors which led him to reduce the United Kingdom contribution to the funding of the Commonwealth War Graves Commission; and if he will now restore the money as part of the D-day commemoration.

Mr. Hanley: The United Kingdom's contribution to the Commonwealth War Graves Commission takes the form of a grant-in-aid, which is discussed annually between my Department and the CWGC. In 1993-94 the grant-in-aid to the CWGC was £21,390,295. Financial provision for 1994-95, which has been agreed with the commission, is £20,532,368. This will be supplemented by a substantial surplus of around £1,700,000 carried forward from the previous year.

The commission's budget, and our contributions to it, have increased by 50 per cent. in cash terms over the last five years. We believe that the level of funding is realistic in the light of the commission's future requirements. The commission has confirmed that it has no plans to cut any projects or commitments as a result.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what countries are now represented on the Commonwealth War Graves Commission; and what consultation he had with the Governments concerned before announcing to the commission his decision to cut its funding.

Mr. Hanley: The countries represented on the Commonwealth War Graves Commission are: the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, India, New Zealand and South Africa. As well as being represented on the commission, all member countries are represented on its finance committee which discusses funding.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the countries which contain Commonwealth war graves and memorials which are maintained by the Commonwealth War Graves Commission.

Mr. Hanley: The Ministry of Defence does not keep records of the nature requested, responsibility for which rests with the Commonwealth War Graves Commission. I will arrange for the Director-General of the commission to write to the hon. Member.

Colonels in Chief

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what authority appointments of colonels in chief of Army regiments are made; what are the administrative arrangements for these appointments; what is the total cost of all aspects of the work of colonels in chief; what are the equivalent arrangements for the RAF and Royal Navy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Appointments of colonels in chief of Army regiments and corps are made by Her Majesty the Queen from recommendations submitted by the Army Board. The appointments are not salaried and involve only minimal costs incurred when visiting units. Such costs are borne by the Army, but are not separately identified and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Similar arrangements apply in both the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force.

Airlines (Military Transport)

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the Government's policy in respect of the criteria to be used in determining which airline should carry military personnel abroad.

Mr. Hanley: Wherever possible, military personnel are carried on Royal Air Force transport aircraft.

Where RAF aircraft are not available, or their use is not considered to be cost effective, movement may be carried out by commercial airlines. This can either take place under charter arrangements, as in the case of large numbers of passengers moving to a specific destination, such as Germany, or by use of specially negotiated fares with British, European and other airlines which are regularly monitored and renegotiated.

In determining which airline to use, it is my Department's practice to engage in competitive tendering and best value-for-money negotiations, taking full account of Department of Transport guidelines and EC services directives, as appropriate.

Friendly Fire

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what procedures were enforced after the friendly fire incident in the Gulf war, in which a British Warrior armoured car was hit, to prevent a repetition of such errors; and whether these were in place when two American helicopters were shot down recently by friendy fire in northern Iraq.

Mr. Hanley: Following the friendly fire incident in the Gulf conflict we have been working independently as well as in close consultation with the United States and our other NATO allies, on improvements to the management of combat indentification and the development of more advanced technology in support of this. The incident in northern Iraq on 14 April is the subject of a full United States inquiry in which the United Kingdom and other coalition partners are represented. The results of this inquiry will be reported to Parliament as soon as possible, and it is therefore inapopropriate at this point to attempt to draw parallels between the two incidents.

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civil servants in his Department applied in each year since 1986 through the business appointments system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) in a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

Mr. Aitken: Business appointment records are not maintained in a format which enables applications to join firms of consultants to be identified separately. Such applications are included under "Other Employment".

	Number of applications	Independent consultants	Other Employment	Referred to ACBA	Approved by ACBA
1986	357	32	325	1	1
1987	228	6	222	8	8
1988	256	10	246	1	1
1989	320	5	315	2	2
1990	181	45	136	7	7
1991	134	36	98	7	7
1992	219	113	106	2	2
1993	160	109	51	3	3

Note: Only applications from officers at Grades 1 and 2 are referred to the Advisory Panel on Business Appointments, chaired by Lord Carlisle.

Sentries

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is his policy relating to the deployment of service personnel on sentry duty who are under investigation regarding (a) possible crimes of violence and (b) possible drugs-related offences; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is his policy relating to the provision of weapons for service personnel on sentry duty who are under investigation regarding (a) possible crimes of violence and (b) possible drugs-related offences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Decisions on the deployment of service personnel on day-to-day duties, including sentry duty, are a matter for the commanding officer of the individual concerned. Where an individual is under investigation regarding crimes of violence or drug-related offences, the seriousness of the alleged offence will be taken into account when deciding whether the individual should continue to undertake sentry duty or other duties, armed or otherwise. It would be normal practice, however, for personnel under investigation for serious offences to be held under close arrest. Where a less serious offence is concerned it might be considered appropriate for an individual to continue normal duties, but under supervision.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Community Care Grants

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people made an application in respect of community care grants and loans from the social fund system at each of the social security offices between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1994; of these how many were accepted; how much was paid out; how many were refused; and what were the reasons for refusal.

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. Wylie to Mr. Eddie McGrady, dated 28 April 1994:

I have been asked o reply to your recent Parliamentary Question relating to Social Fund statistics.

I am sorry I am unable to provide information in the form you have requested as:

information is not readily available in the period 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1990 and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost; details for each Social Security Office can only be given for the 1990-91 year. As the Social Fund has been managed on a District basis from April 1991 information has been supplied accordingly; an individual can make more than one application to the Social Fund the figures shown therefore refer to the number of applications received rather than number of people making application; information on the number of refusals is only held as a percentage of decisions made;

information is not held on the reasons for refusal of applications. The available information is set out in the tables, which are too long to be printed in the Official Report and arrangements will be made for a copy to be deposited in the Library. Statistics on Social Fund applications is also available in the Library under "Social Fund Data" and these figures are updated on a monthly basis.

I hope that you will find this information helpful.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is (a) the average time and (b) the range of times taken to process a review case for disability living allowance.

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. Wylie to Mr. Eddie McGrady, dated 28 April 1994:

I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question on the average and range of times taken to process a review case for Disability Living Allowance.

I am sorry that information on the processing of Disability Living Allowance review cases is not held in the format that you have requested. The procedure is that each year I set targets for the time taken to clear review cases. For the 1993-94 year these were:

60% of cases to be cleared in 55 days and 80% to be cleared in 75 days.

Unfortunately the Agency has been unable to meet these targets. By the end of the 1993-94 year 22% of cases had been cleared within 55 days and 32% within 75 days. The reason for the failure to achieve the targets is that the number of requests for review far exceeded expectations and, by September 1993, there was a backlog of about 8,000 cases awaiting decision. Extra staff were recruited to deal with this and with the use of extensive overtime most of the outstanding cases were cleared by February 1994.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many civil servants in his Department applied in each year since 1986 through the business appointments system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) in a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

Sir John Wheeler: Civil servants applied to take up outside appointments in the following years:

Year	Independent consultant	Firm of consultants	Other employment
1986	1	—	—
1988	—	1	1
1989	—	1	1
1991	1	—	2

Three of the above applications were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments. All of the above applications were granted.

Energy Co-operation

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met Ministers from (a) Scotland and (b) the Republic of Ireland to discuss co-operation in the provision and distribution of energy; and if he will make a statement about energy co-operation between Northern Ireland and both Scotland and the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Tim Smith: Regular discussions take place with Scottish Ministers on a wide range of issues including energy. Energy matters, particularly electricity, have been discussed with Ministers from the Republic of Ireland from time to time. I continue to support any co-operation in energy matters which may bring benefit to Northern Ireland.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food (Expenditure)

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the net disposable income per person in pounds sterling; what was the expenditure on food (a) as a percentage of net disposable income and (b) in pounds sterling in (i) each European Union country, (ii) Sweden, (iii) Norway, (iv) Austria, (v) Finland, (vi) the United States of America and (vii) Japan in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Jack: The information is given in the table.

The following comparable information is available for 1991:

Colorado Beetle

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent reports she received of Colorado beetle (a) unsolicited and (b) in response to requests for information; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: We have received 25 reports so far this year of Colorado beetle in England, of which nine were as a result of inspections undertaken by the plant health and seeds inspectorate. This brings the total number of beetles found to 44.

The United Kingdom is a protected zone under the EC single market arrangements for plant health, and Colorado beetle is accordingly a notifiable quarantine pest in the United Kingdom under the Plant Health (Great Britain) Order 1993. Each year we launch a publicity campaign to heighten public awareness about the pest. This has led to a good response from processors, traders and members of the public in notifying findings.

No breeding colony has been found in the United Kindom since one in 1976. The colony was successfully eradicated.

Halal Meat Company, Birmingham

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) dead and (b) recumbent animals have been delivered to the Halal Meat Company in Birmingham in each of the last 12 months; what was the country of origin of those animals; and how many prosecutions are being brought in respect of those animals which were deemed unfit for transit.

Mr. Soames: The information requested is set out in the table. The figures are indicative of the problems of handling this category of sheep. Prosecutions are a matter for the local authorities concerned; I understand that none is pending in respect of animals which were deemed unfit for transport.

1. Total annual throughput approximately 36,000 sheep.
2. 'Dead in Transit' includes some that arrived alive but died overnight in lairage.
3. 'Recumbent' includes some which walked off the lorry but collapsed overnight.

Fisheries

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if the protection against special access to the North sea in the accession arrangements extend to non-pressure stocks;

(2) whether Spanish and Portuguese fishing vessels will be allowed to fish in the North sea under article VII of the treaty of Rome after 1 January 1996;

(3) to what extent the Spanish and Portuguese will be integrated into the common fisheries policy by 1 January 1996; and whether they will be able to fish in all European Union waters.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if she will give details of proposals of fisheries management agreed or tabled at the April European Union Council of Fisheries Ministers relating to (a) the possible replacement of the Irish box and (b) the restricted list of 300 Spanish fishing vessels; and if she will make a statement;

(2) if she will detail proposals agreed or tabled at the April European Union Council of Fisheries Ministers relating to access by Spanish fishing vessels into (a) the Irish sensitive zone, (b) west of Scotland fishing grounds, (c) International Council for the Exploration of the Seas area VII, (d) the North sea pressure stocks fishery and (e) the North sea non-pressure stocks fishery; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Members to the reply given to my hon. Friend, the Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison) on 13 April 1994, Official Report, columns 183-84.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assurance she gave in Strasbourg to the British fishing industry about Spanish fishing rights in (a) the North sea and (b) the Irish box after January 1996.

Mr. Jack: Neither the Minister nor I have visited Strasbourg recently.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the United Kingdom vote in relation to granting a full concession of fishing rights to Spain under the common fisheries policy at the last Fisheries Council.

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes) on 25 April 1994, Official Report, column 79.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received from fishing industry representatives regarding the possibilities of a permit system for the Irish sensitive zone.

Mr. Jack: Officials are to meet representatives of the fishing industry shortly to discuss proposals which the Commission has made for a general system of fishing permits.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the declared policy position of each other European Union member state with regard to fisheries effort control in the Irish sensitive zone.

Mr. Jack: The Commission is to make proposals for the zone, inter alia, by 1 June 1994. Consequently, the position of other member states is not yet known.

Sheep and Lamb Exports

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what tonnage of domestically reared lamb and sheep was exported for each year since 1979; to which countries; and in what form.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 27 April 1994]: Export data specifically referring to domestically reared lamb and sheep are not available. Total exports of lamb and sheep from the United Kingdom, by destination and form, for years 1979 to 1993, are shown in the following table.

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many civil servants in her Department applied each year since 1986 through the business appointments system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant (b) in a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

Mr. Jack: The following is a table of statistics showing the number of civil servants in the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who have applied in each year since 1986 through the business appointments scheme to take up an outside appointment.

There have not been any applications which have required referral to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments during the period 1986 to the present date.

Animal Diseases

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which European countries presently have cases of (a) foot and mouth disease, (b) African swine fever, (c) classical swine fever, (d) swine vesicular disease and (e) Aujeszky's disease; when she last met and what consultations she has had with the east Yorkshire and national NFU over preventing these diseases from entering Britain; what measures she is taking to prevent these diseases entering the country; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: The information requested is set out in the table.

My right hon. Friend keeps in close touch with the President of the NFU and its regions about all matters of current interest, including measures to help prevent the introduction and spread of disease by imported farm livestock. A number of such measures are set out in my reply to the hon. and learned Member for Burton (Sir I. Lawrence) on 1 December 1993, Official Report, column 590. Similar measures apply to pigs, including checking all imported pigs to keep out the threat of Aujeszky's disease. These measures are kept under constant review and the number of checks is intensified in the light of perceived disease risks.

Note:

Aujeszky's disease is not compulsorily notifiable in all EC Member States and information on its prevalence is not readily available. However, within the EC only Denmark, Great Britain and certain Departments in France are recognised as being free of Aujeszky's disease.

Beef

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence she has for her statement that a promotion of Scotch whisky in a German chain of food shops was cancelled as a result of the stance of the German Government towards British beef.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 29 April 1994]: I have been informed by Food From Britain's overseas division in Germany that concerns over bovine spongiform encephalopathy have created general difficulties in arranging promotions of British products.

EC Surplus Foods

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many (a) independent and (b) grant-maintained schools have received free surplus food products from the EC since April 1989 and what was its market value;

(2) how many (a) independent and (b) grant-maintained schools have received free surplus stewing steak from the European Community since April 1993; and what was the total market value of the surplus stewing steak provided.

Mr. Jack: Independent and grant-maintained schools are not eligible for produce distributed under the EC surplus food scheme.

Fisheries Management

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultations (a) have taken place and (b) are proposed with fishing industry representatives regarding a fisheries management regime for the Irish sensitive zone; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: I have maintained close contact with representatives of the fishing industry about all aspects of the review of Spanish and Portuguese accession arrangements and will continue to do so.

Food Labelling

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action she is taking to improve the accuracy of the labelling of foods with particular reference to the list of contents.

Mr. Soames: Rules on ingredient listing on food labels are harmonised in the European Community. The United Kingdom has pressed for a review of the current exemptions and the Commission is considering this.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will require the labelling of meat which has already been thawed and then refrozen and ensure that the consumer is warned not to refreeze.

Mr. Soames: Such labelling is currently required. We are consulting interested parties about a proposal to amend this requirement, since the warning cannot be justified on safety grounds.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the United Kingdom Ecolabelling Board's timetable for the comprehensive labelling of food produce.

Mr. Atkins: I have been asked to reply.

The United Kingdom Ecolabelling Board was established under the European Communities Act to administer and promote the EC ecolabelling scheme in the United Kingdom. The scheme does not apply to food and, therefore, the United Kingdom Ecolabelling Board has no plans for labelling food produce.

SCOTLAND

Public Bodies

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in respect of which non-elected bodies whose membership in whole or in part is appointed by him in each case (a) meetings are open to the public, (b) there is scrutiny of financial procedures by independently appointed audit and (c) there are rules governing the declaration of interests.

Mr. Lang: Non-departmental public bodies are not required to hold meetings in public and do not normally do so. The Comptroller and Auditor General either audits the accounts of, or has inspection rights to, all executive non-departmental public bodies for which I am responsible and which receive Government funding. Where he is not the auditor, the accounts of the body are audited in accordance with the statutory requirements of its constitution. I take into account the question of the interests of possible chairmen and members of the boards of executive NDPBs when I am considering appointments to a body. Arrangements for the declaration of interest of members on specific items under consideration by the body are normal practice; detailed arrangements vary depending on the body.

The meetings of Scottish health boards and NHS trusts are open to the public. The Health Education Board for Scotland and the National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting for Scotland also hold public meetings. They are subject to audit by either the Scottish Office audit unit or external auditors appointed by the Secretary of State for Scotland. The Comptroller and Auditor General has a statutory requirement to examine, certify and report on summarised accounts of these bodies and can examine the accounts of individual bodies and any records relating to them. NHS authorities and trusts have rules governing the declaration of interests.

Police Officers (Illness)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many days work have been lost by police officers due to illness in Scotland in each of the last five years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 April 1994]: The information is set out in the table.

Year	Number of days lost due to illness
1989	175,409
1990	297,431
1991	172,501

Prison Vandalism

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost of repairing damage resulting from vandalism by prisoners in each Scottish prison for each of the past five years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 April 1994]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Scottish Prison Service under the chief executive, Mr. E. W. Prizzell. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. John McFall, dated 3 May 1994:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the cost of repairing damage resulting from vandalism by prisoners in each Scottish prison.

Vandalism by prisoners ranges from minor incidents such as breaking light bulbs to serious riot damage. Damage of a minor nature caused by vandalism would normally be repaired as part of the on-going maintenance programme and the cost would not therefore be separately identified.

The cost of prisoner damage from major incidents which have occurred in each of the past 5 years is set out in the table below.

Prisoners (Home Leave)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prisoners in Scotland have been granted home leave in each of the past five years; and how many prisoners have absconded or committed crimes while on home leave from Scottish prisons.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 April 1994]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Scottish Prison Service under its chief executive Mr. E. W. Prizzell. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. John McFall, dated 3 May 1994:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of prisoners in Scotland who have been granted home leave in each of the last 5 years; and how many prisoners have absconded or committed crimes whilst on home leave from Scottish Prisons.

The information requested on the number of prisoners who have absconded while on home leave is published in the Scottish Prison Service Annual Report and is as follows:

Year	Prisoners	Young offenders
1989-90	29	12
1990-91	49	20
1991-92	52	14
1992-93	54	34
1993-94	40	30

The other information requested is not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Death Certificates

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the current cost of a death certificate in each hospital; and what guidelines have been issued on the amount charged;

(2) by how much the charge for a death certificate has risen since April 1992;

(3) what was the income to hospitals in 1993 from charges for death certificates;

(4) what is the normal administrative cost of providing a death certificate.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 April 1994]: Hospitals make no charge for providing a certificate of the cause of death. If a body is to be cremated, there is a statutory requirement for the cause of death to be certified by two independent doctors in order to guard against the possibility of concealment of crime. The completion of cremation certificates does not fall within the scope of services required from doctors under the National Health Service Acts and they are therefore entitled to charge a fee. Doctors are guided on the level of such fees by the British Medical Association. The recommended fee is currently £32 per certificate; the recommended fee in April 1992 was £30.

Children (Principal Carers)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate how many children are the principal carers for sick or disabled parents or close relatives.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 April 1994]: The information requested is not held centrally.

Nursery Places

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of children under five-years-old have a place in a local authority-provided facility.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 April 1994]: It is estimated that 57,600 children under five years had places in local authority education or day care establishments at 31 March 1992. This represents approximately 18 per cent. of children under five. Such places however are used mostly by three and four-year-olds. Many children under five have places in private or voluntary facilities.

Homeless Children

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children were taken into care in Scotland because of homelessness, in each of the 10 years preceeding the implementation of the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 29 April 1994]: The Homeless Person's Act came into force on 1 April 1978. The available information about the numbers of children taken into care because of homelessness between 1969 —the earliest year for which information is available—and 1974 are as follows. Following reorganisation, the available figures for the years 1976-78 relate to children in care on census day who were admitted to care due to family homelessness.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet Endell Laird, the editor in chief of the Scottish Daily Record and Sunday Mail, to discuss the provisions of a Scottish children's hospice; what is his policy on such a meeting; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 29 April 1994]: My right hon. Friend welcomes the support which the Daily Record has provided for the establishment of a children's hospice in Scotland, but has no plans at present to discuss this with Mr. Laird. I understand that the plans of the Children's Hospice Association Scotland for the establishment of a hospice serving the whole of Scotland are well advanced.

Voluntary Organisation Grants

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which voluntary organisations for deaf people have been awarded grants by his Department in each year since 1990; what commitments he has made for the financial year 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 29 April 1994]: The following voluntary organisations have been awarded grants over the period 1990-91 to 1994-95.

For 1994-95 I was particularly pleased to be able to offer funding to the Scottish Association of Sign Language Interpreters and the Scottish Association for the Deaf on a three-year basis; to offer an additional grant to Sense Scotland towards the establishment of a day centre at Overbridge centre for children and young adults with multiple handicaps and to offer the Royal National Institute for Deaf People a three-year grant towards the development of a network of communication support units in Scotland. In addition to the organisations listed, funding is also provided to a wide range of voluntary organisations for people with physical disabilities which also have regard to the needs of deaf people.

Voluntary organisations for deaf people receiving grant

1990-91
Scottish Association of Sign Language Interpreters
The Scottish Association for the Deaf
Sense Scotland
Donaldson's College for the Deaf

1991-92

Donaldson's College for the Deaf
The Royal National Institute for Deaf People

General Practitioners

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what current NHS rules and practice enable the age of the patient to be taken into account by a general practitioner or a general practitioner practice, when determining whether to accept a new patient on to their lists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 29 April 1994]: None. Guidance issued by the General Medical Council in May 1992 makes it clear to general practitioners that it is unacceptable to discriminate against groups of patients on grounds of their age, sex, sexual orientation, race, colour, religious belief, perceived economic worth or the amount of work they are likely to generate by virtue of their clinical condition.

Sheltered Housing

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to provide additional resources for the construction and development of sheltered housing in Paisley, Johnstone and Elderslie.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 29 April 1994]: Renfrew district council has received substantial capital allocations of £18·5 million for investment in public sector housing in 1994-95. Scottish Homes plans to invest a further £20 million in Renfrew district. It is for the local authority and Scottish Homes to determine the amount of these resources to be spent on providing sheltered housing in accordance with their assessment of local needs.

Royal Alexandra Hospital

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he has visited the Royal Alexandra hospital in Paisley since its construction; when he next plans to visit it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 29 April 1994]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland has not visited the Royal Alexandra hospital, and has no plans to do so.

Aids to Sleep

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what restrictions are in place on advertising drugs available without prescription which are designed to aid sleep; what checks are carried out to ensure that addictive or potentially harmful drugs are not advertised for mass consumption; what health warnings should be given in such advertisements; in what ways regulations or guidelines on the advertisement of such drugs have been amended or relaxed within the past five years; what plans he has to introduce new legislation, statutory orders or guidelines to regulate the promotion of aids to sleep which are available without prescription; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 29 April 1994]: Licensed medicines may be advertised only under the stringent controls of the Medicines Act 1968 and supporting regulations. These ensure that the advertising is in accordance with the product licence and is not misleading. Products which are available without prescription may be advertised to the public, in compliance with the Medicines (Labelling and Advertising to the Public) Regulations 1978. These regulations prohibit the advertising of a treatment for sleeplessness or insomnia; advertising for the relief of temporary sleeplessness is not prohibited.

Medicines which we consider to be addictive or potentially harmful when used without medical supervision are available only on prescription and may not be advertised to the public. Proposed legislation to amend the 1978 regulations in order to implement Council directive 92/28/EEC is currently under consideration.

Hospitals (Administration)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total cost of administration in hospitals in 1991, 1992 and 1993; and what is the forecast for 1994.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 29 April 1994]: In 1991-92 and 1992-93 hospital services administration costs were £173,769,000 and £204,885,000 respectively. The figures for 1993-94 are not yet available. It is not possible to forecast the figures for 1993-94 or 1994-95 as no data are held centrally.

Two factors have largely contributed to the increase shown. As part of the NHS reforms, Scottish health boards have devolved many of their functions to directly managed units and NHS trusts. The figures also include an increasing number of senior nurses and clinicians who have transferred to the general/senior managers' pay scales.

Formaldehyde

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when checks were last carried out on the level of emission of formaldehyde from Strathclyde chemical works in Johnstone; how the checks compared to the current maximum legal levels; what assessment he has made of whether the current emission levels from the factory pose no short-term or long-term threat to the health and wellbeing of neighbours; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 29 April 1994]: Strathclyde Chemical Company Limited is registered with Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate in respect of the manufacture of formaldehyde at its premises in Johnstone. As the operator of a registerable process, the company is required to use the best practicable means for preventing the emission of formaldehyde and for rendering harmless and inoffensive any formaldehyde which may be emitted. In pursuance of that duty the company makes regular weekly measurements of formaldehyde emissions and such measurements are subject to scrutiny by the inspectorate. The results confirm that the quantities of formaldehyde emitted are small and of no significance in public health terms.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the current regulations relating to the emission levels of formaldehyde; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 29 April 1994]: Processes involving the manufacture or use of formaldehyde are prescribed processes in terms of the Environmental Protection (Prescribed Processes and Substances) Regulations 1991 and are subject to the integrated pollution control provisions of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Some existing processes which have not yet been brought within integrated pollution control remain subject to section 5 of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 as regards emissions into the atmosphere. Guidance on the emission limits for processes involving formaldehyde has been provided in the chief inspector's guidance note, IPR 4/3 —"Processes for the Production or Use of Acetylene, Aldehydes etc"—copies of which are available from HMSO.

Prisoners

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children had to be cared for other than in their own home following their mother's imprisonment, in the latest year for which information is available.

Mr. Stewart: The information in respect of children whose mothers were imprisoned is not available centrally. During 1991, the latest full year for which information is available, 39 children were taken into the care of local authorities following the imprisonment of one or both of their parents.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of prisoners had dependent children living with them just before imprisonment; and of these what number and percentage are mothers.

Mr. Stewart: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number and percentage of prisoners and 17 to 20-year-old offenders who had been in care before they were 16 years.

Mr. Stewart: Information is not available centrally on which a reliable estimate of the number and percentage requested could be based.

Mental Health (Children)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the number of children in Scotland with mental health problems.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not available. However, research studies conducted elsewhere in the United Kingdom suggest that up to 10 per cent. of children suffer from a significant degree of emotional or behavioural disturbance during their childhood.

Children

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of children in Scotland who go hungry every day.

Mr. Stewart: Such information about children in families is not available centrally. However, it is Government policy to target income support and other DSS benefits at those who are most in need, including low income families.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the percentage of children in Scotland who are overweight.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not available.

Speech and Language Therapists

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many vacancies currently exist for speech and language therapists in the national health service in Scotland; what was the average length of time taken, over the past 12 months, to fill vacancies; and what assessment he has made of whether these vacancies are the result of a shortfall of appropriately qualified personnel.

Mr. Stewart: The information requested is not available from records held centrally.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what has been the annual turnover rate for (a) male and (b) female speech and language therapists in each health board in each year since 1980;

(2) how many (a) male and (b) female speech and language therapists have been appointed by each health board for each year since 1980.

Mr. Stewart: The information requested could be made available only at disproportionate cost. Figures relating to males plus females for some of the years sought are published in "Health Briefing No. 92/01/spth", a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Hoax Calls

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prosecutions resulted from hoax calls to the fire services in Scotland for each of the past five years: and what percentage they constituted of the total number of call outs.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Relevant information for the four years 1989 to 1992 is as follows:

	1989	1990	1991	1992
Persons proceeded against under section 31 of the Fire Services Act 1947.	58	49	70	61
Persons with charge proved under section 31 of the Fire Services Act 1947.	55	41	64	57
Malicious false alarms attended by fire brigades.	13,795	15,241	18,481	22,485
Total incidents attended by fire brigades.	96,124	98,763	112,196	113,102
Malicious false alarms as a percentage of total incidents.	14·35	15·43	16·47	19·88

Notes:
1. Information for 1993 is not yet available.
2. Information on prosecutions for 1988 is not available on the same basis.

Drug Offences

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of 14 to 17-year-olds cautioned, fined, or given custodial sentences for drug offences in each year since 1987.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Cautioning offenders is not a disposal which is available to the police in Scotland.

The available information is given in the table.

Number of persons aged 14 to 17 years old with a charge proved for drug offences in Scottish courts by type of disposal

Year	Custody	Fined	Other	Total

Asthma

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the number and percentage of children in Scotland with asthma.

Mr. Stewart: Asthma can best be defined as a disease caused by variable narrowing of the bronchial airways as a result of inflammation. The condition covers a wide spectrum of severity, however, from a single wheeze to a life-threatening attack. Measure of prevalence is therefore difficult, as the precise definition used is of critical importance. The evidence from a number of recent United Kingdom epidemiological surveys suggests, however, that between 10 and 15 per cent. of children suffer from asthma at some point during their childhood.

Neither the surveys nor routine statistics provide a sufficient basis for an estimate to be made of the number of children suffering from asthma at any given time. However, in Scotland in 1992—the latest year for which the information is available—the number of children aged under 16 with a principal diagnosis of asthma severe enough for them to be admitted to hospital was 3,548.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many working days were lost in Scotland because of asthma in the latest 12 months for which information is available.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not available.

Crime Statistics

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of crimes in a year not reported to the police.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The best estimate we have is from the Scottish crime survey. The first results of the 1993 survey, which were published on 22 April, suggest that the proportion of incidents reported to the police in 1992 for those crimes covered by the survey, which comprise crimes against persons and their property, was 52 per cent. The corresponding figures for 1981 and 1987 were 38 per cent. and 44 per cent. respectively. These figures suggest that the amount of crime not reported to the police has diminished over the period covered by the surveys.

Children (Accidents)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total cost in 1992 and 1993 to the national health service and the ambulance service in Scotland caused by accidents to children.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not available.

Respite Care

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of children with severe disabilities do not receive respite care.

Mr. Stewart: The information requested is not held centrally.

Our White Paper "Scotland's Children"—Cm. 2286—acknowledged the importance of well planned respite care tailored to the individual needs of children and their families. Respite care will feature in the new child care plans which local authorities will be required to prepare in collaboration with other relevant agencies, voluntary organisations and representatives of parents and carers.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the base locations of all accident and emergency ambulances in Strathclyde and Dumfries and Galloway; and which are (a) single manned or (b) double manned.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 27 April 1994]: The locations of ambulance stations are as follows:

We are committed to the double-manning of accident and emergency ambulances. We have made £6 million available over the last four years towards the elimination of single-manning.

Only those stations staffed by contractors are exclusively single-manned. At other stations the number of single-manned responses will depend on the level of "on-call" single-manned rostering and the incidence of short notice sickness absence. The percentage of single-manned responses across Scotland has fallen from 8·7 per cent. in 1990-91 to 1·75 per cent. in 1993-94. In Dumfries and Galloway during the same period there was a reduction from 28·97 per cent. to 6·14 per cent.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of accident and emergency ambulances achieved response times within the maximum in (a) Ayrshire and (b) Dumfries and Galloway in 1993 and for all available months in 1994.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 27 April 1994]: Target response times for ambulances vary according to population density. Ayrshire and Arran and Dumfries and Galloway health boards both cover areas of medium density and sparse density. The target response times which apply are:

Medium density population (0·5 – 3 people per acre) – 95 per cent. of calls responded to in 18 minutes
Sparse density population (less than 0·5 people per acre) – 95 per cent. of calls responded to in 21 minutes.

Ravenspark Hospital

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make a statement on the reasons for the Scottish Office's refusal to give its approval to a contract agreed between Ayrshire and Arran health board and the company Burley for replacement care provision arising out of the planned closure of Ravenspark hospital;

(2) if he will make a statement indicating when Ayrshire and Arran health board now expects Ravenspark hospital to close.

Mr. Stewart: The Scottish Office has not refused to approve a contract between Ayrshire and Arran health board and Burley Health Care plc. The board has been asked to look at the future needs, size and location of services for the elderly mentally ill throughout Ayrshire, before completing a contract with Burley Health Care.

Ayrshire and Arran health board has decided that Ravenspark hospital will close early in 1995 when suitable alternative care settings have been made available for the present residents. Hospital closures require public consultation and the approval of the Secretary of State.

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 17 February, Official Report, columns 949-50, when he will place in the Library a copy of the research report on "Accessibility to the Scottish Office".

Mr. Lang: The analysis of the data based on the results of the research into the effectiveness of the advertising campaign on accessibility to the Scottish Office is not yet completed.

Hospital Staff

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many hospital house officers, senior house officers, registrars and senior registrars there are in Scottish hospitals.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 April 1994]: The numbers of hospital doctors and dentists in whole time equivalent in each grade in post at 30 September 1993, the latest date for which information is available, are shown in the table:

	WTE[1]
TOTAL	3,506·9
House Officer	620·0
Senior House Officer	1,862·8

Racial Incidents

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of reported racial incidents for each police force area in Scotland for each year since 1988.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 April 1994]: The total number of reported racial incidents for each police force area in Scotland from 1988 to 1993 is as follows:

Speech Therapists

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) male and (b) female speech and language therapists are currently employed in the national health service in Scotland in each health board area.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 April 1994]: The latest information available is shown in the table.

Fraud

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many complaints of alleged fraud have been made to the serious fraud unit of the Crown Office in each year since 1986; and how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions have followed thereon.

Mr. Lang: The Crown Office fraud and specialist service unit is an integral part of the Crown Office and deals with all inquiries relating to fraud and related offences. A number of the more serious of these inquiries are investigated by the staff of the unit and others are referred to the procurator fiscal for attention, often with advice and assistance from the staff of the unit. Precise figures are not available to show how many complaints of fraud have been received in each year since 1986, although well in excess of 100 reports are considered annually. Of the cases considered by the staff of the unit, 56 cases have been prosecuted involving 94 persons resulting in 70 persons being convicted. An annual breakdown is provided as follows:

	Number of cases	Number of persons accused	Number of persons convicted
1986	6	14	12
1987	10	20	18
1988	7	10	6

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many civil servants in his Department applied in each year since 1986 through the business appointments system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) in a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

Mr. Lang: The information is set out in the table:

	As an independent consultant	In a firm of consultants	Other employment	Number referred to advisory committee on business appointments	Number approved

Junior Doctors

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases there have been in the past year of junior doctors not having at least (a) four hours rest within a duty period of 16 hours and (b) eight hours rest within a duty period of 32 hours.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 April 1994]: This information is not held centrally.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he expects to meet the target of no contracts of more than 72 hours a week for junior hospital doctors by 31 December.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 April 1994]: The Government remain committed to this objective for junior doctors in hard-pressed posts.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many junior doctors are contracted for more than 72 hours per week; and how many have regularly worked more than 72 hours per week in the past year.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 April 1994]: At 30 September 1993, the number of junior doctors contracted for more than 72 hours duty per week was 1,630. Information on the hours actually worked by junior doctors is not held centrally.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many junior doctors are contracted for more than 83 hours per week; and how many have regularly worked more than 83 hours per week in the past year.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 April 1994]: At 30 September 1993, the number of junior doctors in Scotland contracted for more than 83 hours duty per week was 30. Information on the hours actually worked by junior doctors is not held centrally.

Cremations

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest available annual figure for the number of people cremated.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 April 1994]: Data maintained by the Federation of British Cremation Authorities indicate that there were 35,558 cremations in Scotland in 1993.

European Social Fund

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland to what extent he has any responsibility for the operation of the European social fund in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend is responsible for the European social fund in areas in Scotland designatd as objective 1, 2 or 5b under the appropriate regulations. Responsibility in Great Britain for national schemes under objective 3 rests with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment.

Free School Meals

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children currently receive free school meals; and what percentage that forms of the total number of schoolchildren.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 24 November 1993, Official Report, columns 73-74, to my hon. Friend the Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Robertson).

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 4 May 1994

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Privatisation (Consultants)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will estimate the cost of employing consultants in connection with privatisation programmes in which his Department has been engaged since 1980.

Mr. John M. Taylor: No Department for which the Lord Chancellor is responsible has incurred any consultancy costs in connection with privatisation programmes since 1980.

HEALTH

Generic Prescribing

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the average proportion of generic prescribing undertaken by general practitioner fundholders now and before they became fundholders.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information is not available to make such an assessment. The generic prescribing rate for fundholders in 1992-93 was 49 per cent. compared with 43 per cent. for other general practitioners.

NHS Trust Chairmen

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current salary paid to each chairman of an NHS trust.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 14 February at column 987.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to increase Government funding for research into Alzheimer's disease.

Mr. Bowis: The Medical Research Council is always willing to consider support for soundly based new scientific proposals in competition with other applications. Funding for the MRC is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Dental Services (Stoke-on-Trent)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the availability of NHS dental care in the Stoke-on-Trent family health services authority area; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Staffordshire family health services authority, which includes Stoke-on-Trent, reports that national health service dentistry is available in the area. Patients who need help in obtaining NHS dental treatment should contact the FHSA.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those dental practices in the Stoke-on-Trent family health services authority area which in the last 12 months have withdrawn NHS dental services.

Dr. Mawhinney: No dentist in Stoke-on-Trent has given such notice to the Staffordshire family health services authority during the last 12 months.

Ambulance Services (Humberside)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by how much Humberside Ambulance Trust is overspent on budget.

Mr. Sackville: The 1993-94 finalised accounts will be published later this year.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list purchases of ambulance vehicles by Humberside Ambulance Trust since April 1993.

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for the Humberside Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mrs. Margaret Cracknell, chairman of the trust, for details.

Dental Services

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will revise the patients charter so that every patient seeking dental care under the NHS has access to NHS dental treatment on a planned and emergency basis; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: A working group, including representatives of the profession, has been set up to consider a charter for primary dental services. All family health services authorities report that they can if necessary assist patients seeking their help to receive national health service dental treatment.

Junior Doctors

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many postgraduate deans have taken action against hospitals where juniors are working 83 hours a week since 1 April 1993.

Dr. Mawhinney: Postgraduate deans are core members of all our regional task forces. As such they are actively involved in developing and implementing plans to reduce junior doctors' hours.

Children Act 1989 (Annual Report)

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when was the annual report on the Children Act 1989 due to be published; when it is now likely to be published; and what are the reasons for the change of date.

Mr. Bowis: There is no set timetable for producing the Children Act report. The second report is in preparation and will be published shortly.

Medical Ethics

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the Government's response to the report of the House of Lords Select Committee on Medical Ethics.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Government's response to the report of the House of Lords Select Committee on Medical Ethics has been published today. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Privatisation (Consultants)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will estimate the cost of employing consultants in connection with privatisation programmes in which her Department and its predecessor have been engaged since 1980.

Mr. Sackville: The Department has no record of any consultants having been employed in connection with privatisation from 1980.

Cardiac Unit, Plymouth

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to make an announcement regarding the business plan for the cardiac unit in Plymouth.

Mr. Sackville: The business case for a cardiac unit at Derriford hospital, Plymouth is currently being considered by the south and west regional office of the national health service executive.

Hospital Officers and Nurses (Training)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the report on the introduction of competency-based training for hospital officers and nurses, commissioned by the Home Office; and if she will ensure with her ministerial colleagues that it is published.

Mr. Bowis: This is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

National Blood Authority

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what annual salary is paid to (a) the chairman, (b) the chief executive, (c) the finance and administration director, (d) the medical director and (e) each of the non-executive directors of the National Blood Authority; what other remuneration and perquisites each of these received; and what is the total cost to the public funds of the National Blood Authority.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 22 April 1994]: The information available centrally is shown in the table. Information about payments other than annual salary and about the total cost of the National Blood Authority is not yet available, as the authority came into being on 1 April 1993. In 1992-93 central funding for the National Blood Authority's predecessor body, the Central Blood Laboratories Authority, for revenue and capital expenditure totalled £6·788 million. This figure derives from the Central Blood Laboratories Authority's audited accounts which are still subject to review by the National Audit Office. The bulk of the Central Blood Laboratories Authority's funding came from sales of plasma products primarily to national health service bodies.

Current annual salary rate	£
Chairman	8,968
Chief executive[1]	[2]76,388
Finance and administration director[1]	[2]58,114
Medical director[1]	[3]51,165
Non-executive members
Mr. L. Banks	5,000
Mr. D. Allison	5,000
Professor Van Aken	5,000

[1] The chief executive, finance and administration and medical directors are members of the NHS pension scheme.
[2] Salary of chief executive and finance and administration director includes performance related pay.
[3] The current post holder also receives an A+ distinction award at the rate of £48,605.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disability Working Allowance

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 29 November, Official Report, column 317-18, if he will update the information provided on awards of disability working allowance, also indicating the respective proportions of new and repeat claims which resulted in an award of benefit.

Mr. Scott: As of 31 March 1994 there were 3,680 current awards of disability working allowance.

The total number of claims for DWA with percentages, in the five-month period November 1993 to March 1994, was:

	Number	Percentage resulting in awards
New claims	3,356	35·13
Repeat claims	2,302	85·88
TOTAL	5,658	—

The number of claims adjudicated upon in the last five months is 5,230.

The reasons for unsuccessful claims with numbers and percentages for each ground for disallowance in the last five months are in the table.

Reason	Number	Percentage
Capital exceeds £16,000	5	0·24
Not in remunerative work	710	34·23
Income exceeds DWA level	342	16·49
No qualifying benefit	891	42·96
Disability test	2	0·1
Other reasons	124	5·98

Child Support Agency

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of whether the Child Support Agency is adequately staffed to deal speedily and effectively with its caseload.

Mr. Burt: We are keeping all parts of the agency's operations, including staffing levels, under close review. If changes should be needed we will make them.

War Pensions

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 30 March, Official Report, column 788, to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris), if he will publish his correspondence with the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions.

Mr. Hague: Correspondence between members of the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions and Ministers is in confidence. It has never been the practice to publish such correspondence.

Privatisation (Consultants)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost of employing consultants in connection with privatisation programmes in which his Department has been engaged since July 1988.

Mr. Scott: This Department has no privatisation programme.

Disability Living Allowance

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what analysis the Benefits Agency makes of claims for disability living allowance which are referred to disability appeals tribunals; and if he will provide a numerical breakdown of these cases.

Mr. Scott: The administration of disability living allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mrs. Jane Kennedy, dated 3 May 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question, asking for an analysis of disability living allowance claims which are referred to disability appeal tribunals.

I have provided, in the attached appendix, a table of the analysis made by the Benefits Agency within this area. The table covers the period February 1992 to the end of March 1994.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Appendix: DLA claims referred to disability appeal tribunals between 1 February 1992 and 31 March 1994

	Number
Number referred	34,679
Number decided:
Award increased	2,082
Award maintained	7,075

[2] The appeal was lodged but current decision was revised in the appellants favour without reference to the appeals tribunal.

TREASURY

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people will face larger mortgage statements at the end of this month following the Government's decision to reduce mortgage interest relief to 20 per cent.

Mr. Dorrell: There are about 10 million single people or married couples with mortgages. Not all of them will make larger interest payments straight away as a result of the restriction of mortgage interest relief to 20 per cent. This is because some mortgages are subject to annual reviews and these may take place at different times of year. Lenders may apply the new rate of relief, and make any necessary adjustments, then.

In addition, some 200,000 borrowers receiving tax relief have loans that are not in the MIRAS—mortgage interest relief at source—scheme. For them, the restriction of relief has no effect on their interest payments, but will be made through their PAYE coding or in an annual assessment.

The number of borrowers with annual review mortgages is not known: a precise answer to the question is therefore not available.

VAT (Domestic Energy)

Mr. Mills: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the application of value-added tax to the standing charge portion of central heating and electrical supply bills; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: I have received a large number of representations. I have made it clear on a number of occasions that the standing charge has always been regarded as part of the consideration for a single supply of fuel and power. If it were not, it would already have been standard rated as the services covered, when taken in isolation, have attracted VAT at the standard rate since 1 April 1973.

Valuation List

Ms Eagle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many proposals to alter the valuation list have been referred to the valuation tribunal by each district valuation officer.

Mr. Nelson: The number of proposals to alter the valuation list which have been referred to the valuation tribunal by each valuation officer was 660,384 in total as at 31 March 1994. The numbers referred by each office individually are not held centrally; however, the numbers referred in respect of each valuation office region are as follows:

Region	Appeals transmitted
East Anglia	71,730
East Midland	60,547
London	98,031

Region	Appeals transmitted
Northern	63,008
North Western	58,738
South Eastern	65,501
Southern	80,150
Western	68,321
West Midland	57,936
England total	623,962
Wales	36,422
Total England and Wales	660,384

Ms Eagle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many proposals to alter the valuation list have been received by each district valuation officer.

Mr. Nelson: As at 31 March 1994, a total of 945,795 proposals to alter the valuation list had been received by district valuation officers.

A breakdown by valuation office area of initial proposals received up to 30 November 1993 is available in the Members' Library.

EU Own Resources

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will bring forward in the current parliamentary Session a Bill to give effect to the own resources decision agreed at the Edinburgh summit.

Sir John Cope: Before a Bill to approve the new own resources decision can be introduced, a text must be adopted unanimously in the Council of Ministers. Agreement is at present being blocked by Italy. Once agreement has been reached, and before the new decision can finally be adopted by the Council and sent to member states for their approval, conciliation must take place with the European Parliament.

It is therefore not possible to know when the new own resources decision will be ready for final adoption by the Council and accordingly the Government are not in a position to say when the Bill might be introduced.

Public Service (Pay Rise)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for which categories of public service employee provision has been made for an average pay rise of more than 1·5 per cent. in the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The Government expect public sector pay to be considered in accordance with the approach which the Chancellor announced in his statement of 14 September 1993. In 1994-95 Government Departments are expected to keep their running costs, including pay bills, to their 1993-94 levels in cash terms. A similar approach applies to other public sector pay groups. Provision has been set on this basis. This is not a freeze on pay settlements and does not pre-empt annual pay determination arrangements. Pay should be set at levels necessary to recruit, retain and motivate staff within what can be afforded. All parts of the public sector should be able to make efficiency savings and other economies necessary to accommodate the costs of pay increases on this basis.

Foreign Currency Earnings

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on foreign currency earnings from overseas visitors to the United Kingdom as a result of EC Commission proposal Com (94) 5813 to amend directive 77/388/EEC.

Sir John Cope: There are trade concerns that there could be an adverse effect on sales in the event of the adoption of the European Commission proposals for a minimum threshold of 175 ecu before non-EC visitors can claim a VAT refund. The United Kingdom has accordingly registered its opposition to this proposal and will continue to listen carefully to trade concerns.

Company Cars

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the annual value to Customs and Excise of the special provisions in respect of VAT recovery of company cars; and when the provisions were imposed and under what authority.

Sir John Cope: Taxation of the private use of business cars is mandatory under Community law. Since the inception of the tax in April 1973, the United Kingdom has achieved this through restricting tax recovery on the purchase of cars. The current legal basis for this simplified procedure is permitted under article 17(6) of the sixth directive (77/388/EEC) implemented in the United Kingdom by an Order made under section 14(10) of the VAT Act 1983. The provision is expected to contribute around an estimated £1·6 billion to the Exchequer in 1994.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many excise verification officers are employed by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise on tasks connected with duty-paid imports to the United Kingdom from elsewhere in the European Union; and what is the cost to public funds.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 29 April 1994]: During the financial year 1993-94 Her Majesty's Customs and Excise allocated 253 staff years to single market duties. The majority of this work, for which the salaries bill was £4 million, was performed by excise verification officers. In addition, VAT staff and others assist in the course of their normal work in the control of the sale of excise goods which have not paid United Kingdom duty.

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil servants in his Departments applied in each year since 1986 through the business appointments system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) with a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referrred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The following table gives information from 1987 on applications from civil servants in my Department through the business appointments system to take up outside appointments. Information prior to that date could be obtained only at disproportionate cost as it would involve sifting through individual files. The table also shows which cases were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments and the total number of cases granted.

	(a) Independent consultant	(b) Firm of consultants	(c) Other employment	Referred to advisory committee	Total granted
1987	0	0	4	0	4
1988	1	2	4	0	7
1989	0	6	9	1	15
1990	0	6	12	0	18
1991	1	1	5	1	7
1992	0	1	2	0	3
1993	0	0	4	1	4

Council Tax

Mr. Burden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what targets the Valuation Office Agency has set for clearing council tax valuation appeals.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The Valuation Office Agency expects four out of five appeals to be settled by 31 December 1994 and the remainder as quickly as possible thereafter.

Edinburgh Summit

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 27 April, Official Report, columns 164-65, what was the projected monetary resources ceiling at the time of the Edinburgh summit; how that has been affected in monetary terms by current projections of growth and GNP; what are the implications for each year to 1999 in terms of change in available resources; and what are the implications for moneys available for cohesion.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The information is in the following table:

	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Own resources ceiling agreed at Edinburgh (per cent. of Community GNP)	1·20	1·20	1·21	1·22	1·24	1·26	1·27
Value of Edinburgh own resources ceiling on basis of growth projections available at the time (becu—1992 prices)	65·8	67·3	69·5	71·9	74·9	78·0	80·6
Value of Edinburgh own resources ceiling on basis of latest growth projections (becu—1992 prices)	64·4	65·2	67·1	69·4	72·3	75·2	77·8
Change in estimated available resources since Edinburgh (becu—1992 prices)	−1·4	−2·1	−2·4	−2·5	−2·6	−2·8	−2·8

The own resources ceiling is a legally binding limit on the amount of own resources which can be called up by the European Community to finance payments from the budget. In setting the annual budget, the budgetary authority—the Council of Ministers and the European Parliament—must ensure that the own resources ceiling is respected, if necessary by agreeing expenditure totals which are less than those in the financial perspective agreed at Edinburgh. The policies to be affected by these reductions would be for decision at the time.

Civil Servants

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest available figure for the total number of civil servants (a) including and (b) excluding those employed by "next steps" agencies.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 3 May 1994]: On 1 October 1993 there were in total 546,339 civil servants, the lowest in the post-war period. Of these 209,936 were not working in "next steps" agencies.

Upper Limb Disorders (Civil Servants)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the present number of civil servants taking legal action against their employer as a result of work-related upper limb disorders.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have been asked to reply. This information is not held centrally.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Cross-channel Electricity Interconnector

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals his Department has for expanding the capacity of the cross-channel electricity interconnector.

Mr. Heseltine: None. It is for the industry to make any proposals of this kind.

Sizewell B

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the costs in lost revenue from the delay in commissioning the Sizewell B nuclear reactor; and what are the reasons for the delay.

Mr. Heseltine: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 22 April 1994, Official Report, column 708.

Telecommunications

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on progress in negotiations with the United States of America regarding access for British telecommunications companies to the United States market.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government strongly support the effort of United Kingdom telecoms companies to enter the United States market and work closely with them. In particular, the Government have taken up with the United States authorities specific issues, including discriminatory regulation already in force or being proposed.

The Government are continuing to press for further liberalisation and market opening in and outside Europe to provide better access for United Kingdom companies, and to benefit United Kingdom consumers through lower prices for international calls.

Private Detective Agencies

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the use of private detective agencies and security companies by his Department.

Mr. Heseltine: My Department does not use private detective agencies. Private sector security firms are contracted to provide access control to departmental premises.

Launch Aid

Mr. Davidson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how much money has returned to the Government as partial repayment of launch aid for aircraft and engine programmes in each of the last 25 years;

(2) how much public money has been used in launch aid for specific aircraft and engine programmes in each of the last 25 years.

Overseas Mail

Mr. Davidson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the Government's policy in respect of the criteria to be used in determining which airline should carry British mail abroad.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 3 May 1994]: Decisions about which airlines are used to carry British mail abroad are a commercial matter for the Post Office.

Steel Production

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what agreement was reached by the Council of Ministers at its recent meeting in Luxembourg in regard to excessive steel production capacity and unfair trading practices by steel producers and regional or national administrations in other EC member states.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 3 May 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friends the Members for Basildon (Mr. Amess) and for Colchester, North (Mr. Jenkin) on 29 April, Official Report, columns 348-49.

Local Government

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what provisions of the Children Act 1989 and the Registered Homes Act 1984, as amended, have been considered by his interdepartmental scrutiny of local government enforcement; what proposals have arisen as a result; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neil Hamilton [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The interdepartmental scrutiny team is looking at all aspects of local government enforcement as they affect business and this will be reflected in their report. This includes social services activities. The scrutiny team will complete its investigations and make recommendations to Ministers by the end of May.

I understand that the specific legislation mentioned is being considered under a separate review by the Department of Health, but that the review and scrutiny teams are in regular contact.

Radio Frequencies

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the probable level of interference with aeronautical radio navigation services of high-powered national broadcasting on the 105 to 108 MHz radio frequencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 3 May 1994]: Broadcasting services in the frequency band 87·5 to 108 MHz have the potential to cause interference to aeronautical radio navigation services. It is the Government's responsibility, however, to ensure that any planned new radio station will not cause unacceptable interference. The assessment of potential interference is a complex task involving not only the power and frequency of a proposed new transmitter, but those of existing transmitters and, in particular, the dispositions of transmitters relative to each other, to airports and to flight paths. These assessments are made by the Radiocommunications Agency, in my Department.

It is not possible to carry out an assessment of the interference potential of radio stations in the band 105 to 108 MHz until the details of all proposed broadcasting transmitters are known. However, in preparation for the opening of that band, some hypothetical studies were made by the Radiocommunications Agency which led it to the opinion that transmitting powers as high as 40KW may be acceptable in locations and at frequencies that are favourable.

The Radio Authority is currently conducting a public consultation exercise about the possible service options in this new band of frequency spectrum, which the Government have made available for independent radio. These options range from the provision of a new national radio service to the provision of numerous low power and highly localised services. Having reached a decision, the Radio Authority will present a detailed transmitter plan for the proposed services to the Radiocommunications Agency for clearance. Until then, it is not possible to comment further, but I am confident that it will be possible to agree a plan which is fully compatible with aeronautical navigation services.

Coal Industry

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he last met representatives of trade unions within the coal industry to discuss redundancy schemes and payments after 30 April; what was the conclusion of those meetings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 3 May 1994]: Both my hon. Friend the Minister for Energy and I meet representatives of trades unions from within the coal industry from time to time to discuss a wide variety of matters affecting the industry. I understand that British Coal is currently discussing with the unions the redundancy arrangements to apply after 30 April.

Directors (Disqualification)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many adverse reports on directors have been submitted by insolvency practitioners in Scotland to the company directors disqualification unit in Edinburgh in each year since 1986.

Mr. Neil Hamilton [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The numbers of unfitted conduct reports on directors, submitted by insolvency practitioners in Scotland to the company directors disqualification unit in Edinburgh since 1986, are as follows:—

	Number
1986	nil
1987	67
1988	189
1989	152
1990	173
1991	181
1993	241

Mr. Wallace: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many disqualifications of directors of companies registered in Scotland have taken place under the Company Directors Disqualification Act in each year since 1986.

Mr. Neil Hamilton [holding answer 3 May 1994]: Since 1986 the number of disqualification orders made under section 6 of the Company Directors Disqualification act 1986 against directors of companies registered in Scotland is as follows:

	Number
1986	Nil
1987	Nil
1988	3
1989	4
1990	12
1991	17
1992	54

Gross Domestic Fixed Capital

Ms Armstrong: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the amount of manufacturing investment gross domestic fixed capital formation in each region in 1991; and if he will provide a consistent series of figures back to 1979.

Mr. Nelson: I have been asked to reply.

The latest available estimates of gross domestic fixed capital formation by region within manufacturing for 1988 to 1990 were published in the December 1992 issue of "Economic Trends", available in the House of Commons Library. Estimates for 1991 are to be published in the May 1994 issue of "Economic Trends". Information prior to 1988 is not available on a consistent time series basis.

PRIME MINISTER

Sir Peter Levene

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Mitcham and Morden (Dame A. Rumbold) of 10 March, Official Report, column 319, if he will list all the relevant interests of Sir Peter Levene, and any issues so far identified where a potential conflict of interest exists.

The Prime Minister: Sir Peter Levene is chairman of Canary Wharf Ltd. and its subsidiaries, deputy chairman of Wasserstein Perella and Co. Ltd., and an alderman of the City of London. No issues which involve a conflict of interest for Sir Peter Levene have arisen under the arrangements which I set out in my answer to the right hon. Member for Mitcham and Morden (Dame A. Rumbold) on 10 March, column 319.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Cox: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects the Scott inquiry report to be published; and in what form he intends to make known the Government's observations on the findings of the inquiry.

The Prime Minister: On the question of the timing of the publication of Lord Justice Scott's report, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Hazel Grove (Sir T. Arnold) on 15 March, Official Report, column 645.

It is too early to say in what form the Government will make their observations on the report.

Miss Beata Brookes

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Prime Minister whether the re-appointment of Miss Beata Brookes to be chairman of the Welsh Consumer Council was referred to his public appointments unit; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The re-appointment of Miss Brookes was referred to the public appointments unit before my views were sought. This is in line with the answer I gave on 14 May 1993, Official Report, column 583.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Driving Offences

Mr. Miller: To ask the Attorney-General in what form statistics are collected by the Crown Prosecution Service relating to the prosecution of drivers for (a) drink driving offences, (b) other offences and (c) offences causing death.

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service maintains no central records relating to the prosecution of drivers in respect of specific offences. Details are recorded on individual case files.

Offence-based figures are available in the "Criminal Statistics England and Wales" published by the Home Office.

Privatisation (Consultants)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Attorney-General if he will estimate the cost of employing consultants in connection with privatisation programmes in which his departments have been engaged since 1980.

The Attorney-General: None.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the total number of prisoners in custody in England and Wales on the first day of each month from April 1992 until the latest month for which figures are available;

(2) what was the total number of remand prisoners in custody in England and Wales on the first day of each month from April 1992 until the latest month for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 4 May 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about (a) the total number of prisoners and (b) the number of remand prisoners in custody on the first day of each month from April 1992 until the latest month for which figures are available.

The available information for the number of prisoners in custody is for the last day of each month. It is given in the attached table for the period March 1992 to February 1994.

Prisons (Drug Abuse)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what action is being taken to seek to reduce the incidence of drug abuse at each HM prison, HM remand centre and HM detention centre in (a) South Yorkshire, (b) North Yorkshire, (c) West Yorkshire and (d) Humberside;

(2) how often cells and other parts of the building are searched for drugs by staff and sniffer dogs at each HM prison and HM remand centre and HM detention centre in (a) South Yorkshire, (b) North Yorkshire, (c) West Yorkshire and (d) Humberside.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 4 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the action being taken to reduce the incidence of drug abuse at prisons in Yorkshire and Humberside and the searching of cells and other parts of prison buildings.

All prisons in Yorkshire and Humberside search cells and other areas of the prison on a daily, but random basis. Searches using dogs trained in drug detection are carried out at the more secure prisons in Yorkshire and Humberside. For example, Full Sutton uses dogs every six weeks, Leeds every three months and Hull uses them to search non living accommodation weekly. All prisons in the area will make special searches with or without dogs when security intelligence indicates need.

Security measures including the use of X-ray scanners for parcels, increased searching of visitors and prisoners and using security information to target other searches within the establishment, are aimed at preventing drugs being brought into prison.

All prisoners are warned of the dangers of drug abuse and are offered drug counselling about the dangers of drug abuse. There are also courses to help prisoners tackle their drug problem. Some establishments run self help or drug awareness groups.

In addition to these general measures, the establishments have tailored their programmes for tackling drug abuse to meet the differing needs of their prisoner population.

For example, in South Yorkshire, Moorland prison and young offenders institution screens all prisoners on admission offering those with a serious drug problem immediate treatment in the Health Care Centre. In North Yorkshire, Northallerton remand centre targets a Personal Social Education course at those in need using outside agencies to assist in counselling. Full Sutton prison has introduced a confidential telephone line.

Prisons in West Yorkshire have similar approaches. Rudgate has a trained drugs worker to help identify those with drug problems and refer them for specialist help. New Hall and Wakefield prisons offer drug rehabilitation courses through probation and local agencies.

In Humberside, Hull prison is training two dogs specifically for drug searching and female Prison Auxiliaries have been recruited for searching female visitors.

Chelmsford Prison

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home department (1) when work will be completed on sanitation at Chelmsford prison to enable slopping out to be ended; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what measures are being taken to reduce prisoner numbers at Chelmsford prison.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 4 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about Chelmsford prison.

Integral sanitation has now been installed in most of the cells at Chelmsford. The work to complete the installation in the remaining 65 cells is scheduled to be completed in September this year.

On 26 April there were 363 prisoners in Chelmsford prison. Although the prison's certified normal accommodation is 217, its operational capacity is 381. Chelmsford serves the courts in Essex and its prison population is determined by the numbers remanded or awaiting trial or sentence.

Sentenced prisoners are quickly transferred to training prisons in the region, in order to reduce pressure on places in Chelmsford. As another measure to ease this pressure, the prison's Bail Information Unit interviews remand prisoners in order to alert the courts to cases suitable for conditional bail.

Two new houseblocks are to be built and the first should be ready for occupation in 1996. These are intended to allow existing double cells to be converted for single use. The net effect of each block will be to provide 37 extra places.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average number of prisoners in Chelmsford prison in each of the last six months.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 4 May 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the average number of prisoners in Chelmsford prison in each of the last six months.

The available information for the historical prison population is for the last day of each month. It is given in the attached table for the period October 1993 to March 1994.

Firearms

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what information he has about the origins of firearms and shotguns used in the pursuit of crime;

(2) what proportion of firearms and shotguns used by criminals in criminal activity are believed to have been licensed, purchased legally and in the possession of an authorised person.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No statistical information is available. Firearms are only rarely recovered from scenes of crime and, in cases where they are, identifying marks have, almost invariably, been erased. Tracing the firearms back to their source is therefore extremely difficult. There is, however, no evidence to suggest any widespread use of legally held firearms by criminals in crime.

Prison Population

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the certified accommodation and the actual population at each prison in England and Wales at the latest possible date.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 4 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the certified accommodation and actual population at each prison in England and Wales.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are his latest projections of prison population growth for the next 12 months.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 4 May 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent Question about the latest projections of prison population growth for the next twelve months.

The latest population projection is described in paragraph 2·5 and Annex 1 of the HM Prison Service Corporate Plan 1994-97, a copy of which is enclosed. The projection is for an average population of 48,800 for 1994-95 and a population of 50,800 by March 1995. The projection is subject to considerable uncertainty as the population reflects what happens elsewhere in the Criminal Justice System.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average certified normal accommodation and the average prisoner population, at each prison since 1980.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 4 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what was the average certified normal accommodation and the average prisoner population, at each prison since 1980.

The information you have requested is published annually in the "Report on the work of the Prison Department" for years 1980-84 and 1985-86 to 1991-92 and in the "Prison Service Annual Report and Accounts" (Volume 2, Cm. 2385) for 1992-93. Copies of these publications are available in the House of Commons library.

Security

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the use of private detective agencies and security companies by his Department.

Mr. Howard: I know of no instance where a private detective agency has been employed by my Department. I refer the hon. Member to the reply to the hon. Member for Walsall, South (Mr. George) on Tuesday 26 April, column 98, for information in respect of security companies employed by my Department.

Prison Hostages

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hostage incidents in prisons in each of the last five years have involved women staff.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 4 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has sked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of hostage incidents in prisons in each of the last five years involving women staff.

There was one such incident in 1989 and two in 1991.

Civil Servants (Career Breaks)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many civil servants in his Department, including those working for agencies, have taken career breaks in each of the past five years; and how many of those civil servants were prison officers.

Mr. Howard: The number of civil servants in the Home Office, excluding the Prison Service, who have taken a career break in each year since 1989 is set out in the table. This information was taken from the Home Office personnel information system on 29 April 1994.

I have asked the Director General of the Prison Service to write to the hon. Member about career breaks in the Prison Service.

Prison Building

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his future prison building plans.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 4 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the new prison building programme.

A further six new prisons are planned under the prison building programme. On 2 September 1993 the Home Secretary announced that the design, construction, management and potential financing of future new prisons would be contracted out to the private sector. It is intended that all six of the planned new prisons will be procured in this way.

Sites at Fazakerley in Merseyside and at Bridgend in South Wales have been identified for the first two prisons. The proposals to build a prison on the Fazakerley site was the subject of a non-statutory public local inquiry held between 26 October and 10 November 1993 and we are awaiting the outcome. We have outline planning clearance to build a prison on the site at Bridgend. If we obtain planning clearance for a new prison on the Fazakerley site we expect construction work on the site and on the Bridgend site to begin in 1995-96 and the two prisons to open as early as possible in 1997-98.

Work is currently in progress to identify suitable sites for the other four prisons and it is too early to indicate a timetable for their construction and opening.

Notifiable Offences

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answers to the hon. Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth (Mr. Michael) of 26 April, Official Report, columns 98-102, regarding notifiable offences in 1993, if he will show (a) the total offences, (b) burglary, (c) theft, (d) criminal damage,

(e) theft from a vehicle and (f) theft of a vehicle in each police authority area (i) per uniformed officer and (ii) per thousand of population.

Somali Refugees

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to assist Somalis with refugee status or with permission for an extended stay in the United Kingdom who wish to return to help in the redevelopment of their country without losing the right to return if the situation in Somalia deteriorates.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Any refugee or person with exceptional leave to remain in the United Kingdom is free to seek to re-establish themselves in their country of origin, but this must raise the question whether they continue to have a well-founded fear of persecution or a humanitarian case for exceptional leave.

Hospital Officers and Nurses (Training)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department received a copy of the report commissioned on the introduction of competency-based training for hospital officers and nurses; and when he intends to publish it.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. David Blunkett, dated 4 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question as to when his Department received a copy of the report commissioned on the introduction of competency based training for hospital officers and nurses; and when he intends to publish it.

The report commissioned on the introduction of competency based training was received on the 28 February 1992. The report was judged to meet neither quality standards nor the tender specification. The report was therefore rejected by the Head of Nursing Services and not published. A further report was commissioned from an alternative source and received on 20 November 1992. As a direct result of this second report a policy of providing National Vocational Qualifications in care at levels 2 and 3 has been introduced for all hospital officers now called health care officers.

Pregnant Prisoners

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women prisoners gave birth during imprisonment in England and Wales in each of the last 10 years; in which prisons the women were held before the birth; in which prisons the women were held after the birth; and where the births took place.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 4 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of women who have given birth while serving a prison sentence in each of the last ten years; in which prisons the women were held before the birth; in which prisons the women were held after the birth; and where the births took place.

The annual reports on the work of the Prison Service until 1991-92 record the number of women temporarily removed to outside hospital for delivery and returning to establishments afterwards. Figures are now published in the annual report of the Director of Health Care for prisoners. The figures are:

	Numbers
[1]1984-85	70
1985-86	71
1986-87	62
1987-88	75
1988-89	63
1989-90	74
1990-91	65
1991-92	56
1992-93	29

[1] 15 month period.

In addition there were six deliveries within Prison Service establishments:

1983	1
1984-85	1
1985-86	1
1988-89	2

Pregnant women who wish to keep their babies with them in prison are held in Holloway, Styal or Askham Grange. It is not possible to say which prisons women were held in after the birth as such detailed records are not kept. If the baby remained with the mother on a prison mother and baby unit they would have been in Holloway, Askham Grange or Styal prisons. If the mother made alternative arrangements for the care of her baby then it is possible she may have been held in any of the women's establishments.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Sunday Trading (Cinemas)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations he has received about the effect the Sunday Trading Bill will have on the operation of cinemas on Sunday; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I have received no such representations.

Orchestras

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what information he has about the financial position of the Hallé orchestra, the Royal Liverpool philharmonic, the Bournemouth symphony orchestra and the City of Birmingham symphony orchestra.

Mr. Brooke: I am aware of concerns that the orchestras to which my hon. Friend refers are currently facing varying degrees of financial difficulty. However, I have no locus in matters relating to the funding of individual arts organisations. The orchestras in question are clients of the Arts Council of England, which closely monitors their financial as well as artistic and management performance.

Community Radio

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what information he has concerning the number of broadcasting franchises which have to date been allocated to community radio broadcasters, who are the broadcasters concerned; and on what date they took over the franchise in question.

Mr. Brooke: Government policy is that the responsibility for licensing independent radio services lies with the Radio Authority, which will have the detailed answers my hon. Friend seeks.

Some general information on independent radio licenses may be found in the Authority's annual report, a copy of which is in the Library.

Sleeping Drugs

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what restrictions are in place on advertising drugs available without prescription which are designed to aid sleep; what checks are carried out to ensure that addictive or potentially harmful drugs are not advertised for mass consumption; what health warnings should be given in such advertisements; in what ways regulations or guidelines on the advertisement of such drugs have been amended or relaxed within the past five years; what plans he has to introduce new legislation, statutory orders or guidelines to regulate the promotion of aids to sleep which are available without prescription; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I refer the hon. Member to the reply to his similar question given on 27 April, column 203, by my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville). The Independent Television Commission and the Radio Authority issue codes of advertising standards and practice, which include provisions on medicines and treatments. These codes are reviewed from time to time.

ENVIRONMENT

Retirement Housing

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether the current remit of the housing association tenants ombudsman will allow the extension of his work to incorporate those members of the Association of Retirement Housing Managers which are not registered housing associations; what is his policy on such an extension; and what is the estimated additional cost;

(2) what plans he has to support attempts by the Association of Retirement Housing Managers to bring all their members under the jurisdiction of the housing association tenants ombudsman.

Sir George Young: The housing association tenants ombudsman service was established by the Housing Corporation last autumn to handle complaints from tenants and leaseholders of properties owned or managed by housing associations registered with the Corporation. This is a very early stage at which to consider posible extensions of its remit, particularly outside the registered housing association sector. I shall, however, seek the views of the Housing Corporation about the feasibility of the proposal made by the Association of Retirement Housing Managers.

Tenants' Cash Incentive Scheme

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the sums given to each London borough for the year 1994-95 for the tenants' cash incentive scheme; and how each sum is arrived at.

Sir George Young: The table shows the additional Government resources allocated to London borough councils for cash incentive schemes in 1994-95.

In assessing bids and allocating the £16·2 million my right hon. Friend took account of a number of factors, including: how the housing needs of the area would benefit from a cash incentive scheme; the general needs index for the authority; the amount the authority proposed to allocate to the scheme from its own resources, and whether it had the means to do so; whether the authority had previously run a successful scheme; and the value of encouraging a local authority to run a scheme for the first time.

Ofwat

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidelines have been issued by his Department to Ofwat with regard to its scrutiny of future price limits for water companies; what responsibility they have to take into account the views of the consumer; and by what means.

Mr. Atkins: The Director General of Water Services, Mr. Byatt, has responsibility for setting water price limits. It is not for the Secretary of State to guide him. However, in preparation for his current periodic review of price limits, the Director General sought the perspective of the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales on the environmental and safety obligations which water companies will have to meet in the period 1995 to 2005. The Secretaries of State published their perspective, "Water Charges: The Quality Framework", in October 1993. The Director General has a duty to protect the interests of customers under section 2 of the Water Industry Act 1991. To assist him in this task, Ofwat has established 10 regional customer service committees and a National Customer Council.

Urban Development Corporations

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will carry out an investigation into the amount being spent by urban development corporations on private sector consultants.

Mr. Baldry: Urban development corporations make use of architectural, engineering, property, legal and other specialist consultancy to provide the necessary expertise in managing major regeneration projects. It provides better value for money to the Exchequer for corporations to make use of private practice in this way than to employ such staff with the appropriate technical expertise in-house. Consultants are appointed by competitive tendering and in accordance with strict procedures which are open to inspection by independent auditors, appointed by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many civil servants in his Department applied in each year since 1986 through the business appointments system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) with a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The information is given in the following table, which includes applications by staff of the Property Services Agency:

	Independent consultants	Firm of consultants	Other employment	Referred to advisory committee	Granted
1986	7	4	40	2	All
1987	7	3	29	0	All
1988	8	3	44	0	All
1989	10	12	37	0	All

1991	9	3	16 (29)	1 (3)	All
1992	9 (13)	4	39 (43)	2 (6)	All
1993	6 (10)	10	23 (34)	2 (5)	All
1994	4 (7)	0	13 (20)	2 (3)	All

Note: The figures in brackets are the number of applications received; all other figures refer to the number of individuals who applied.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment at what date the guidance in the revised planning policy guidance note 13 came into effect; and what influences it is expected to have on planning inspectors sitting on appeals at that time.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The revision of planning policy guidance note 13 was published on 15 March 1994. It is capable of being a material consideration in any planning decision taken after that date—whether by a local planning authority, the Secretary of State or a planning inspector appointed to take a decision on his behalf.

Water Charges

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effects of increases in water charges on old-age pensioners; and what plans he has for specific assistance.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The Director General of Water Services has a duty to protect the interests of customers and ensure no undue preference or discrimination in the fixing of charges. In performing this duty he is required to take into account, in particular, the interests of those who are disabled or of pensionable age. The Director General is currently undertaking a periodic review of charge limits for the 10 years from 1 April 1995 and will be announcing the results of his review in July.

Both the Government and the Director General are aware of the impact of rising water charges on all customers and are very keen to ensure that future charges are no higher than necessary. Specific assistance to those in need is a matter for the Secretary of State for Social Security.

River Pollution

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many miles of rivers and streams in England and Wales are polluted or are at risk of pollution from former mine workings; and what action he is taking in each region to ensure that such pollution is prevented following the passage of the Coal Industry Bill.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 3 May 1994]: In its report "Abandoned Mines and the Water Environment" published in March 1994, the National Rivers Authority estimated that some 200 km of waters in England an Wales are affected by abandoned coal mines. My noble Friend the Minister of State, Department of Trade and Industry addressed the issue in another place on 26 April. He noted that the Government are reviewing the framework of pollution legislation relating to abandoned mines. Pending the outcome of that review he made clear that the Government would expect the Coal Authority, as owner of all abandoned coal mines in Great Britain, to go beyond the minimum standards of environmental responsibility which are set by its present legal duties in these areas and to seek the best environmental result which can be secured from the use of the resources available to it for these purposes. The Coal Authority will have a specific budget for this, which will enable it to carry forward in full the role and activities of British Coal in this area.

European Regional Funding

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what are the criteria for bids for a share of the money allocated to East Anglia under objective 5b funding; what qualifying schemes he has been advised upon; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement clarifying how £46 million for East Anglia is to be allocated from the funds available under objective 5b funding; what is now the timetable for bids; and when he expects fund allocations to be made.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The Government presented six plans to the European Commission on 26 April for the development of those rural areas of England which are eligible to receive EC structural funds under objective 5b. One such eligible area covers parts of East Anglia. The plans describe the strategies and priorities which will be pursued with the funds in these areas for the period 1994-99.

The plan for the East Anglia objective 5b area identifies the types of activities for which assistance from structural funds will be sought. These include support for the development of businesses, agricultural and fishery diversification, the development of human resources, development of tourism and cultural activities and for research and development.

Under the structural funds regulations, the European Commission is required to respond to the plan within six months of receipt. It is not possible to draw upon the £46 million allocated to the region to fund projects until the Commission has reached a decision on the East Anglia plan. However, I hope bids can be invited before the autumn. The Government office for the eastern region is continuing to work closely with other local partners, such as local authorities and training and enterprise councils, on measures to implement the plan. In due course, a monitoring committee will be established to determine the detailed criteria for selecting projects.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy in regard to evaluating independent expert studies of the long-term safety of the storage of high-level radioactive waste liquor in the Sellafield storage tanks.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer which I gave him on 8 March, Official Report, column 203.

Council Tax

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the press statements, parliamentary answers and other official documents in which the average household council tax has been used as a measure since April 1992.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 29 April 1994]: The average household council tax was published in "Local Government Financial Statistics No. 4" 1990-91 to 1993-94 and in two departmental press notices, the first dated 31 March 1993, the second 31 March 1994. In each instance, a corresponding headline council tax figure for band C, two adults was also shown. The average household council tax has also been given in answer to four parliamentary questions:

On 24 February 1993 to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway) Official Report, columns 872-74;

On 28 April 1993 to the hon. Member for Houghton and Washington (Mr. Boyes) Official Report, column 941 and the hon. Member for Southampton, Itchen (Mr. Denham) Official Report, column 422;

On 7 February 1994 to my noble Friend Lord Braine of Wheatley, Official Report, column 118.

The Government believe that using the band C, two adults figure is the best way to compare council with council. But the average figure can be useful in comparing the council tax with the community charge, and in looking at year-on-year changes.

WALES

Water Services

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what correspondence he has had during 1994 with Dwr Cymru plc concerning water and sewage services to householders in Wales for 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend and his Department are in regular contact with Dwr Cymru on matters of common interest. The Director General of Water Services has responsibility for protecting the interests of customers for water and sewerage services in England and Wales.

Junior Doctors (Working Hours)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many junior hospital doctors in Wales are currently contracted for more than 72 hours per week; and what percentage of the total number of junior doctors in Wales this represents.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The latest returns for September 1993 showed that a total of 786 junior doctors were contracted to work for more than 72 hours per week, which represents 47 per cent. of the total number in Wales, while none was contracted to work more than an average of 83 hours per week, as required under the Government's programme to reduce the hours of junior hospital doctors. The next stage is to reduce contracted hours to 72 hours on average in hard-pressed specialties by 31 December 1994.

Wind Energy

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received on the content of annexe 1 to planning policy guidance note 22 referring to the development of wind energy plants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Since the publication of planning policy guidance note No. 22, my right hon. Friend has received two representations about the annexe on wind energy.

Local Structure Plans

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing on how many occasions each district council in Wales has granted planning permission (a) in departure from its structure plan and (b) against the advice of its chief planning officer in each year since 1990.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This information is not held centrally.

In the Government response to the Welsh Affairs Committee's report on rural housing, it was accepted that it would be prudent to survey the performance of local planning authorities in the handling of departure cases in view of the recent changes in planning legislation. Consideration is currently being given to how best to collect this information.

Suicides

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 25 March, Official Report, column 454, if he will publish for each district council in Wales, and for Wales as a whole, for the latest available year (a) the total number of suicides, (b) the number of suicides by farmers and (c) the figures in (b) as a percentage of (a); and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The information requested is for 1992 and is shown in the following table:

Community Care

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to obtain budgeted revenue information on community care for each local authority area in Wales since introduction of the programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This information is already collected.

Environmental Agency

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for local government representation on the proposed Environment Agency serving Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government propose that the Environment Agency should be established as an England and Wales organisation. The precise regional, and supporting committee, structure has yet to be determined; but the interests of local government in Wales will be taken fully into account when appointments come to be made.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to ensure local delivery of service by the proposed Environment Agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The detailed arrangements for service provision at the local level will be a matter for the Environment Agency itself to determine. However, Ministers will expect it to plan its operations so as to develop a close and responsive relationship with those whom it will regulate, the public and local communities.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to provide additional funding to local authorities to assist them to carry out surveys required by the Environment Agency by 1 April 1995.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Some information is needed from local authorities in Wales in connection with the planned transfer of the waste regulation function to the Environment Agency. However, the Welsh Office, and the Department of the Environment in England, intend to keep such requests to the absolute minimum; and no additional financial provision for local authorities is considered necessary.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to locate a regional headquarters of the proposed Environment Agency in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The precise regional structure of the Environment Agency will be a matter for its board to determine. However, Welsh Office Ministers regard it as of importance that it should have a strong regional presence in Wales.

Milk Marketing

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the objections he has received with respect to the revised scheme of reorganisation in milk marketing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I have received five responses to the consultation on the amended reorganisation scheme submitted by the Milk Marketing Board. They expressed support for the scheme in general, but were concerned about some points of detail.

Privatisation (Consultants)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the cost of employing consultants in connection with privatisation programmes in which his Department has been engaged since 1980.

Mr. Redwood: Since 1980 the Welsh Office has not incurred any expenditure on consultants in connection with privatisation programmes. The Department of Environment and the Department of Trade and Industry respectively took responsibility for the privatisation of Welsh Water and South Wales Electricity in 1989.

Miss Beata Brookes

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the public appointments of Miss Beata Brookes; what pay and time is allocated to each appointment; what is the term of office for that appointment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The information is as follows:

Welsh Consumer Council—Chair
Remuneration: £4,730 per annum
Time Commitment: 8 days per month
National Consumer Council—Member
Remuneration: £4,730 per annum
Time Commitment: 12-15 days per annum

Both appointments run from 1 June 1991 to 30 April 1997; these appointments are made by the President of the Board of Trade.

EC Economic and Social Committee—Member Remuneration: Nil
Time Commitment: Approximately 100 days per annum

This appointment is made by the EC Council of Ministers; the appointment runs from 19 November 1993 to 31 August 1994.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received in relation to Miss Beata Brookes' appointment as chairperson of the Welsh Consumer Council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 3 May 1994]: I have received a number of letters concerning the reappointment of the chair of the Welsh Consumer Council, all of which supported Miss Brookes' reappointment.

I am consulted about this appointment, which is made by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Canine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to her answer of 26 April, Official Report, column 92, what reports she has received of unconfirmed cases of spongiform encephalopathies in canines.

Mr. Soames: Since November 1986 41 brains from canines in Great Britain with signs of neurological disease have been submitted to the Ministry. None of these has been identified as being affected by a spongiform encephalopathy on laboratory examination.

We are also aware of on-going investigations into a single, unconfirmed case overseas. However, I am not in a position to provide further details, as the information was passed on in confidence.

Fisheries

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for each member country of the EC the number of fishing vessels, the total quota of fish by species of each country, the fishing capacity of each country as a percentage of their quota, the number of fisheries inspected and the number of fishing protection vessels and aircraft employed.

Mr. Jack: As regards the number of fishing vessels, I refer the hon. Member to the multi-annual guidance programme of each member state as set out in Commission decisions 92/588/EEC to 92/598/EEC, as amended and, as regards quotas, to regulation 3676/93. These documents are in the Library of the House. It would be misleading to compare total capacity and total quota, but the multi-annual guidance programmes do give a broad indication of the reductions needed to bring national fleets into better balance with the stocks they fish.

The most recent information available about fisheries inspected and the number of fishing protection vessels and aircraft employed by each member state is in the Commission report on monitoring implementation of the common fisheries policy, published in 1992. This document, which is also in the Library of the House, contains information about inspections carried out during 1990 and about member states' enforcement resources. As from 1995, the Commission will be publishing an annual report on the enforcement activities of member states under the provisions of the new fisheries control regulation, Council regulation 2847/93, which came into operation on 1 January this year.

Animal Slaughter (Costs)

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what arrangements she will be making to reduce the costs on the meat slaughtering industry; and what consideration she has given to (a) withdrawing the burden of veterinary supervision or (b) directly reimbursing veterinary costs.

Mr. Soames: The Government's policy is that the cost of the meat inspection service should be recovered from the industry. We have taken a number of steps to minimise costs, including in particular the introduction in mid-1993 of an upper limit on local authority charges. We have developed in consultation with the industry a hygiene assessment system, the results of which will help local authorities to ensure that supervision effort is targeted at the plants which present the greatest risk. We have no plans to withdraw the requirement for veterinary supervision, which is a fundamental element of the European single market legislation.

The new meat hygiene service, due to be launched in April 1995 to take over responsibility for meat hygiene enforcement, will be required to meet demanding financial and management targets to ensure that it delivers a cost-effective service.

Fishing (Conservation)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions since the decision in December 1993 to suspend the operation of the Sea Fisheries (Conservation) Act 1992 she or the Minister of State has met representatives of the fishing industry to discuss alternative conservation strategies; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: I have had various contacts with the industry since December 1993. Ministry and Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland officials met the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations and representatives of the Northern Ireland Industry on 8 March to examine their technical conservation proposals in detail, and there was a meeting with the Commission services on 5 April.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what arrangements are in place for the setting up of appeals tribunals under the Sea Fisheries (Conservation) Act 1992; and how many departmental officials and staff were engaged in work related to the setting up of these tribunals on 1 April.

Mr. Jack: Work on the Sea Fish Licence Tribunal has been suspended, and no staff were engaged on this work on 1 April 1994.

Beef

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence she has of damage to the export of British foodstuffs to Germany by the stance of the German Government towards British beef.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 29 April 1994]: According to Meat and Livestock Commission export survey statistics, beef exports to Germany declined from just under 2,500 tonnes in 1992 to 900 tonnes in 1993. So far in 1994, exports are running at an annualised rate of 300-400 tonnes. In addition, individual companies have given me reports of lost or threatened business for beef and other meats. The promotion of other British products has also been affected.

I have made the European Commission aware of these effects, which amount to an unjustified trade barrier against British goods in the single market.

Fisheries Management

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether Her Majesty's Government intend to propose or introduce effort limitation in respect of United Kingdom-registered vessels currently entitled to fish in the Irish sensitive zone.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 3 May 1994]: It is the responsibility of the Commission, and not individual member states, to bring forward proposals, by 1 June 1994, for the Community arrangements which will, inter alia, replace the sensitive zone of the Irish box when current provisions expire on 31 December 1995. The regulation concerned specifies that these arrangements must provide for close monitoring of the development of fishing effort deployed and of the state of resources in order that the necessary measures may be taken, where appropriate, to preserve the balance.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what fisheries management arrangements were proposed by her Department at the most recent meeting of the European Commission's working group dealing with the fisheries implications of Spanish accession.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The implications of the review of the Spanish and Portuguese accession arrangements for fisheries will be the subject of proposals to be made by the Commission by 1 June 1994, for subsequent discussion in Council and decision by the Council itself before 1 January 1995.

Lamb and Sheep Exports

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what tonnage of domestically reared lamb and sheep was exported for each year since 1979; to which countries; and in what form.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 26 April 1994]: Export data specifically referring to domestically reared lamb and sheep are not available. Total exports of lamb and sheep from the United Kingdom, by destination and form, for years 1979 to 1993, are shown in the following table.

Exports of sheep and sheepmeat

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Official Entertainment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Lord President of the Council what was the total cost of official entertaining in his office in each year since 1990-91; if he will list the receptions held in each year at his office's expense; and what was the cost of each reception.

Mr. Newton: The cost of official entertainment in the Privy Council Office in 1992-93 was £9,776, and in 1993-94 £9,892. Figures for previous years were not recorded. Expenditure on hospitality is, however, included within the running cost expenditure for my Department which is published each year in the annual report. Expenditure on entertainment covers a variety of functions, including receptions. Details of the expenditure attributable to particular functions could not be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Bolton Institute of Higher Education

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Lord President of the Council when he intends to announce his decision on the application by Bolton Institute of Higher Education in May 1993 for research degree awarding powers under the procedures and criteria formulated by the Higher Education Quality Council.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham) on 3 May, Official Report, column 460.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many parliamentary questions to his Department have not been answered because of disproportionate costs or because the information requested was not held centrally over the last five years; how many could be answered now due to computerisation and/or more effective operational systems; and if he will list each such question along with the name and constituency of the hon. Member who tabled it.

Mr. Newton: I and my predecessors have answered more than 900 questions, of which 1·7 per cent. have not been answered because of disproportionate costs or because the information requested was not held centrally. Information on how many of these questions could now be answered and details of the questions and the hon. Member who tabled them could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Lord President of the Council what plans he has to ensure that adequate opportunities are made available for full parliamentary scrutiny of agreements made in the GATT negotiations.

Mr. Newton: I have no current plans for a debate on GATT. However, I will certainly keep the matter under consideration.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many official Christmas cards were sent out in 1993 by (a) Ministers, (b) civil servants and (c) staff of Government agencies working in or to his Department; and how much these cards cost (i) to buy, (ii) to post and (iii) in staff time to sign, address and place in envelopes.

Mr. Newton: Last year 175 Christmas cards were sent out by me and 63 were issued by my private office at a cost, including second class postage, of approximately £312. It is not possible to ascertain the staff costs involved.

European Works Councils

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Lord President of the Council, pursuant to his answer of 18 April, Official Report, column 371, about scrutiny of activities of countries of the European Community, what official debate there has been on the proposed EC Council directive on mechanisms for informing and consulting employees in Community-scale undertakings or groups of undertakings prior to the Social Affairs Council of 19 April; and what draft reports have been available to hon. and right hon. Members.

Mr. Newton: The European Commission's proposal for the establishment of European Works Councils—

Council document reference 4466/91—was debated in European Standing Committee B on 3 July 1991. Both it and the subsequent amended proposal—Council document reference 8319/91—have been the subject of explanatory memoranda by the Department of Employment as follows:

4466/91: Explanatory memoranda dated 4 February and 6 March 1991;

8319/91: Explanatory memoranda dated 18 November 1991, 29 January 1992, 24 March, 20 May and 22 October 1993.

The Commission informed the Council on 19 April of its intention to table a revised version of the proposal under the agreement on social policy concluded between 11 member states. The revised proposal will not apply in the United Kingdom.

Former Members

Mr. Meale: To ask the Lord President of the Council (1) if he will list the names of all former hon. Members who since 1979 have been appointed to quasi-autonomous non-governmental organisations, excluding appointments as justices of the peace, giving in each case the title of the post, any salary payable and the duration of the appointment;

(2) if he will list the names of all former British representative members in the European Parliament who since 1979 have been appointed to quasi-autonomous non-governmental organisations, excluding appointments as justices of the peace, giving in each case the title of the post, any salary payable and the duration of the appointment;

(3) if he will list the names of all individuals who are or were members of the House of Lords who since 1979 have been appointed to any quasi-autonomous non-governmental organisations, excluding appointments as justices of the peace, giving in each case the title of the post, any salary payable and the duration of the appointment;

(4) if he will list the names of all living former hon. Members of this House since 1964, giving their seats by region.

Mr. Newton: I regret this information is not available in an easily accessible form and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Executive Agencies

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list for each of the "next steps" agencies now in operation and for each such agency due to come into operation for which the relevant information is available, (a) its chairman or chairwoman, (b) its chief executive and (c) other directors, executives and officers; and if he will set out the annual salary and emoluments for each, together with the cost to public funds, and number of employees, of each agency.

Mr. Waldegrave: There are 96 agencies and the name of the chief executive and the number of staff, as at 1 October 1993, of each is set out in the table. There are a further 56 agency candidates and four chief executives-designate have been appointed, who are also listed.

There are no chairmen or chairwomen; chief executives normally report directly to the responsible Minister. Information on the salaries and emoluments of chief executives and officers and the cost to public funds is not held centrally but can be obtained from the annual reports and accounts of each agency, which are available in the Library of the House. Some of the information will also be available in departmental annual expenditure reports.

Parliamentary Accountability

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to improve the accountability to Parliament of quangos and executive agencies.

Mr. Waldegrave: Non-departmental public bodies, formerly called quangos, are fully accountable for the use of public funds. All executive NDPBs publish an annual report and accounts which enable Parliament, the taxpayer and customers to judge whether that NDPB is securing value for money. The National Audit Office, which reports to Parliament, is either the auditor of, or has inspection rights to, all executive NDPBs. The Public Accounts Committee scrutinises the activities of NDPBs closely and may summon the chief executive to give evidence, if necessary.

The Government are committed to applying citizens charter principles to NDPBs and to encouraging executive NDPBs to prepare management statements, as a means of clarifying respective roles and responsibilities. The Government also want to see increasing emphasis placed on the use of performance targets covering financial performance, quality of service and efficiency; and publication of how those targets have been met.

Executive agencies are units within Government which were set up as a result of the "next steps" initiative. All staff in executive agencies are civil servants, or military personnel in defence agencies. They are accountable to Ministers, and through them to Parliament, in the same way as all other civil servants in Departments.

The "next steps" initiative has increased the accountability of whole areas of civil service work, through greater openness and clearer lines of responsibility. The Minister responsible sets each agency a number of annual targets covering efficiency, effectiveness and service to customers. Its performance is monitored by Ministers, and full details are reported to Parliament and published in its annual report and accounts. Agency chief executives may be called before the PAC and other Select Committees to account for the discharge of their responsibilities. However, the main line of accountability remains to the Minister, who is in turn accountable to Parliament.

Privatisation (Consultants)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will estimate the cost of employing consultants in connection with privatisation programmes in which his Department has been engaged.

Mr. Waldegrave: There has been no such expenditure by the Office of Public Service and Science.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Material (Transport by Rail)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if British Transport Police are informed of the movement by rail of nuclear warheads and nuclear material; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The British Transport police are informed whenever nuclear submarine fuel cores are transported by rail. Rail transport is not used for the movement of our nuclear warheads.

HMS Unseen

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long HMS Unseen and her sister submarine have been in active service; when it is planned to withdraw them from service; what has been the cost to his Department of maintaining these vessels to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The four Upholder class submarines were accepted by the Royal Navy from builders on the following dates:

HMS Upholder—6 December 1990
HMS Unseen—19 July 1991
HMS Ursula—2 June 1992
HMS Unicorn—23 July 1993

HMS Unseen and HMS Upholder were withdrawn from service on 6 April and 28 April 1994 respectively. Although it is not our practice to reveal the planned pay-off dates of individual vessels, we have previously made clear that the entire class will be withdrawn by 1995.

The cost incurred in maintaining the vessels of the Upholder class since their acceptance from builders has been approximately £2,690,000.

Naval Exercises (English Channel)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which area of the English channel was closed to traffic on 5 and 6 April due to a Sea Wolf missile failing to explode during a Royal Navy exercise.

Mr. Hanley: On 5 April, HMS Brazen was conducting routine training off Portland Bill, Dorset, which involved firing Sea Wolf missiles. Due to a minor technical malfunction, one missile veered off its intended course and fell into the sea. As a purely precautionary measure, the Portland naval authorities alerted HM Coastguard. A safety broadcast, advising shipping to avoid a 2-mile radius around the point where the missile fell into the sea, was issued immediately. Once it became clear that there was no risk to traffic in the area, HM Coastguard was advised and the safety broadcast was cancelled. The Sea Wolf is a fragile missile which travels at high speed and would almost certainly have disintegrated on impact with the sea.

Recruitment

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military recruiting establishments are currently operating throughout the United Kingdom; how many of these lie in Scotland; how many recruits have been recruited through these facilities; what plans he has to rationalise these facilities; and what is the annual cost of operating these facilities.

Mr. Hanley: At present, there are 251 service careers information offices in the United Kingdom. Of these, 31 are located in Scotland. In the financial year 1993-94, 10,494 personnel were recruited, of whom, 1,117 were recruited in Scotland. These recruiting figures reflect reduced targets as a result of the force restructuring under "Options for Change". The operating costs of the CIOs totalled £45,090,000 in financial year 1993-94, of which £5,320,000 related to the offices in Scotland.

It is our policy to collocate CIOs in bi-service or tri-service premises wherever practicable and cost-effective. Many CIOs are already collocated and future requirements are kept under regular review. In addition, recruitment arrangements are being considered as part of the "Defence Costs Study".

South African National Defence Force

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what role his military representatives will play in the integration of the new national defence force in South Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him to an identical question on 27 April, Official Report, column 227.

Market Testing

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what sections of his Department he plans to make the subject of market testing.

Mr. Aitken: The Department intends to pursue vigorously market testing opportunities across the whole range of defence support activities with the aim of maximising value for money for the defence budget. The "Defence Costs Study" will, however, have a significant influence on the scale of the future programme and decisions on future plans will therefore be taken in the light of the outcome of the study.

Bosnia

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many troops there are currently on active service in Bosnia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: There are currently some 3,500 British service personnel deployed on the ground in Bosnia and Croatia in support of United Nations peacekeeping operations. In addition, there are some 3,000 service personnel deployed offshore and in Italy in support of operations in the region.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British aircraft there are in use in Bosnia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: There are currently 33 British aircraft, both rotary and fixed wing, deployed in the Adriatic theatre in support of United Nations and NATO operations in the former Yugoslavia.

Royal Devonport Dockyard

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total amount paid to consultants by his Department for work concerned with the privatisation of HM Royal Devonport dockyard.

Mr. Aitken: Since October, when my right hon. and learned Friend announced our policy towards the future management of the royal dockyards, Official Report, 18 October 1993, columns 39-41, total expenditure of some £2 million has been incurred in the use of specialist consultants for work related to the proposed privatisation of the royal dockyards. Costs attributable to Devonport cannot be separately identified.

Privatisation (Consultants)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the cost of employing consultants in connection with privatisation programmes in which his Department has been engaged since 1980.

Mr. Aitken: The only privatisation programme for which information on the use of consultants can be made available without disproportionate cost and effort is that in connection with the proposed privatisation of the royal dockyards at Devonport and Rosyth, about which my right hon. and learned Friend made an announcement on 18 October last, Official Report, columns 39-41. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I have given today to the hon. Member for Plymouth, Devonport (Mr. Jamieson).

Defence Budget

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the reason for the removal from the defence budget from 1994-95 of the financial provisions for the security and intelligence services, as set out in note one to figure 10 of paragraph 502 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1994", Cm. 2550.

Mr. Hanley: As foreshadowed by the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to my hon. Friend the Member for Somerton and Frome (Mr. Robinson) on 24 November 1993, Official Report, column 52, expenditure on the security and intelligence services has been brought together into a single Cabinet Office vote from 1994-95—class XIX, vote 2.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Bosnia

17. Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with Mr. Slobodan Milosevic regarding Bosnia.

Mr. Hurd: I have not met President Milosevic since the European Union Foreign Ministers' meeting with the parties in November 1993. My right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs is meeting President Milosevic in Belgrade today.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what offers he has made to international relief agencies to treat casualties of the Bosnian war in British hospitals.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have told the International Organisation for Migration, which is responsible for the placement abroad of patients from Bosnia, that we will consider applications on a case-by-case basis. After the recent events in Gorazde, we exceptionally agreed to take up to 50 of those wounded by the shelling.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information is available from the International Red Cross, United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and other United Nations sources about the number of people who require major medical attention which, because of the war, cannot be met within Bosnia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees medical committee has to date identified 763 patients in need of medical treatment unavailable in Bosnia. Of these, 626 patients have already been evacuated, 41 have places abroad and are waiting to travel, and 96 are awaiting placement.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests are being made by the Red Cross and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for medical attention to the wounded from the war in Bosnia; and what representations they have made about the adequacy of the international response when those wounded people cannot be treated in Bosnia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Both the United Nations and the International Committee of the Red Cross have issued appeals for their operations in the former Yugoslavia, which include provision for medical supplies and health care. The International Organisation for Migration appealed to Governments in August 1993 for offers of hospital places for patients from the former Yugoslavia who could not be treated locally. As a result, 2,277 places were offered by 33 countries.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many patients injured in the war in Bosnia each European Union country has treated in its own hospitals.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Statistics do not distinguish between patients injured in the war and patients who are seriously ill and cannot be treated locally. The latest figures from the International Organisation for Migration are as follows: Belgium: 25; Denmark: 87; France: 10; Germany: 19; Greece: 19; Ireland: 23; Italy: 134; Luxembourg: 5; Netherlands: 15; Portugal: 0; Spain: 16; United Kingdom: 66.

28. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of the state of Bosnia has now been taken by the Serbs as a result of military action.

Mr. Hurd: The Bosnian Serb army controls about 70 per cent. of the republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina. A substantial Bosnian Serb withdrawal from territory it now holds will be an essential element in any future peace settlement.

23. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what British interests are served by involvement of British troops in Bosnia.

Mr. Hurd: It is a British interest to ensure that the war in Bosnia does not spread. It is in keeping with our interests and our position in the UN, EU and NATO that a negotiated settlement should be achieved. We have a responsibility to help relieve human suffering in this tragic corner of Europe.

The presence of UN troops is necessary to underpin the international diplomatic and humanitarian effort and to help restore regional peace and security. The British military contribution, although not the largest, is extremely effective.

European Union

18. Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his European Union counterparts about the public accountability and openness of European Union decision-making.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The General Affairs Council has had a number of discussions aimed at making the European Union more open and accountable, which led to agreements at the end of last year on the publication of votes and public access to documents. The United Kingdom strongly supports these moves.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a statement on the forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The following meetings are planned:

6 May:	Development Council
16 May:	ECOFIN Council

South Korea

21. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to visit South Korea; and if he will make a statement on United Kingdom relations with South Korea.

Mr. Goodlad: My right honourable Friend the Foreign Secretary has no plans to visit South Korea in the immediate future. I last visited Seoul in January this year. The United Kingdom's relations with South Korea are excellent.

Bulgaria

22. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Bulgarian authorities following the incidents involving the Bulgarian police and supporters of Rangers football club following the latter's European Cup match in Sofia last September.

Mr. Goodlad: Following complaints received by Glasgow Rangers fans about their treatment by the Bulgarian police, the embassy in Sofia made formal representations to the Bulgarian authorities on 23 November 1993. A reminder was sent on 22 December and again on 8 March. No reply has yet been received. We will continue to press the Bulgarian authorities.

Eastern Europe

24. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of the know-how fund in making east Europeans aware of democracy and free markets.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The know-how fund is generally well regarded for the effectiveness of the advice and expertise which it provides to help the countries of eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union move towards democracy and free market economies. Both the President and the Prime Minister of Russia commented favourably on the quality of know-how fund support to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister during his recent visit.

Council of Europe

26. Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy towards the enlargement of the Council of Europe.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The United Kingdom welcomes the accession of countries which meet the criteria laid down in the statute of the Council of Europe.

Foreign Affairs Council

27. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what particular issues he intends to raise for consideration at the next meeting of the Foreign Affairs Council of the European Union.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The agenda for the next Foreign Affairs Council on 16-17 May has not yet been agreed. It is too early to say what particular issues we shall wish to raise.

Italy

29. Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contacts he has had with the new Government in Italy.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The new Italian Government are not yet in place. When they are, we shall look forward to working closely with our new Italian colleagues.

Cross-border Enforcement

30. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he hopes to meet the President of the European Commission to discuss cross-border enforcement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I meet the President of the European Commission regularly, and we discuss a range of issues.

Kashmir

31. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Prime Minister of India, or his representatives, regarding Kashmir.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed the situation in Kashmir when he met the Indian Prime Minister in March during his visit to Britain.

Russia

32. Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met representatives of the Russian Government to discuss security and co-operation in Europe.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: When my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary visited Moscow in February, they discussed a range of issues with members of the Russian Government, including security and co-operation in Europe. Russian Deputy Foreign Minister Mamedov recently discussed these issues in London with my right honourable and learned Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in which countries along the border of the former Soviet Union Russian forces are currently deployed.

Mr. Goodlad: There are currently Russian forces in Ukraine, Belarus, Moldova, the Transcaucasus and Central Asia, as well as in Latvia and Estonia.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to the Russian plan to establish or confirm bases in countries which formerly belonged to the Soviet Union.

Mr. Goodlad: There have been reports that Russia intends to establish or confirm up to 30 bases in the rest of the former Soviet Union, on the basis of agreement with the Governments of the countries concerned.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those countries in which Russian forces are currently deployed (a) with the agreement of the Government concerned and (b) without agreement.

Mr. Goodlad: Moldova has asked for the withdrawal of the Russian 14th army. The future of the Black sea fleet is currently under discussion between Russia and Ukraine. An agreement has been signed between Russia and Latvia on withdrawals of Russian troops from Latvia by 31 August. Estonia is seeking the withdrawal of Russian troops by 31 August. We are not aware of objections, on the part of the Governments concerned, to the presence of Russian troops in any other countries where they are currently stationed.

37. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Russian Foreign Secretary about Russia's intentions in its near abroad.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed Russia's policy towards the other states of the former Soviet Union with the Russian Foreign Minister, Mr. Kozyrev, when he was in Moscow with my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister in February.

General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade

33. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held with representatives of central and Latin American Governments relating to the GATT agreement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I discussed this issue regularly with representatives of central and Latin American Governments in the period leading up to the Marrakesh ministerial meeting. I underlined the importance of the round and the need for rapid conclusion and implementation. With certain banana-producing countries which were also GATT contracting parties I also urged them to accept the Commission's banana offer so that this could be included as part of the Uruguay round.

European Political Union

34. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet his counterparts in the European Union to discuss greater political union.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There are no plans for a meeting of Community Foreign Ministers to discuss greater political union.

European Union

35. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his European Union counterparts about the public accountability and openness of European decision-making.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The General Affairs Council has had a number of discussions aimed at making the European Union more open and accountable, which led to agreements at the end of last year on the publication of votes and public access to documents. The United Kingdom strongly supports these moves.

Iran

36. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth affairs if he will make a statement about relations between Iran and the United Kingdom.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We restored our relations with Iran on 27 September 1990 on the basis of mutual respect and non-interference in each others' affairs.

The revelation of Iran—Provisional IRA links and the fatwa against Mr. Rushdie demonstrate why Iran's behaviour continues to cause us and other European member states serious concern.

It remains the case that improved behaviour will be important in determining the extent to which closer relations with, and confidence in, Iran can be developed.

Foreign Service (BBC Documentary)

38. Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effect of the BBC documentary on the Foreign Service on the public's opinion of that service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: No such assessment has been made, but I enjoyed the programme immensely.

Falkland Islands

39. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent visit to the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The visit by my right hon. Friend was the first by a Foreign Secretary. He received a warm welcome. The islanders are proud of their way of life and much attached to it and to the United Kingdom. They are confident about the future. He reassured them that sovereignty was not for discussion and that we would continue to support their right to self-determination. Clearly life would be simpler if Argentina dropped her claim.

Somalia

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent theft of money from the United Nations compound in Mogadishu in Somalia; and what action is now being taken on this matter.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The matter is being investigated by United Nations civil police and a team from the United Nations investigations unit. It would be imprudent to comment further before these investigations are complete.

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much of the £237,000 of departmental funds lost in Somalia in 1992-93 indicated in the appropriations accounts was (a) lost in transit and (b) lost from balances in the embassy bank accounts; how these losses occurred; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The loss of £237,000 occurred as follows:

(a) £130,000 lost in transit consisted of three fundings sent to the Bank of Somalia in 1989 for the credit of the Embassy account. Exhaustive inquiries with the Bank of England and the National Westminster Bank, the United Kingdom intermediary bank of the transactions, confirmed that this account had been sent to Somalia. Embassy staff investigated these missing items but were unable to locate them before they were evacuated following the collapse of law and order in Somalia. The decision to write off this sum was taken in 1992 because it was considered very unlikely that the bank of Somalia would ever be able to locate these missing funds following the extensive looting which occurred in Mogadishu.

(b) £103,000 from embassy bank accounts and £4,000 cash and miscellaneous items less some small recoveries were shown in the balances of the last imprest account submitted to the FCO before the evacuation. As the embassy and its bank in Somalia had been looted it was considered unlikely that these assets would ever be recovered.

Due to the complete collapse of law and order all diplomatic missions in Mogadishu were withdrawn and it was not possible to follow the usual procedures for protecting departmental funds overseas. There continues to be no recognised Government or banking system in Somalia.

North Korea

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what explanation North Korea gave for its withdrawal from the nuclear non-proliferation treaty; and if he will make a statement on the prospects of that country's return to the treaty.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: North Korea announced its intention to withdraw from the non-proliferation treaty under article X (i) on 12 March 1993. North Korea cited the joint United States-South Korea military exercise Team Spirit, and the International Atomic Energy Authority's request for special inspections of its nuclear facilities, as being grounds for withdrawal. North Korea subsequently suspended its intention to withdraw from the treaty on 11 June. We continue to urge North Korea to resolve all suspicions about its nuclear programme by complying fully with its safeguards agreement and by affirming permanent commitment to the NPT.

Macedonia

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Bulgarian and Romanian co-operation in the installation of a United Nations presence in Macedonia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Equipment destined for UNPROFOR Macedonia passed through Romania and Bulgaria and reached the Bulgaria/Macedonia border on 18 April. UNPROFOR Macedonia has taken delivery of the equipment.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent report he has received of armed Serbian activity around the border with Macedonia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have had no recent reports of any armed Serbian activity on the Macedonian border.

Hamas

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to him by the Government of Israel about the activities of Hamas within Britain.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have regular contact with the Israelis on a wide range of issues.

Brazil

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arms sales were discussed during his recent visit to Brazil; and what plans he has to make an announcement on this.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs reaffirmed the importance of the continuing partnership between British defence equipment suppliers and Brazil's armed forces, exemplified by the recent sale of Super Lynx helicopters to the Brazilian navy. He also discussed prospects for future sales.

Georgia

×Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with representatives of the Government of Georgia; whether British know-how fund assistance was offered; and if he will make a statement on the state of relations with Georgia.

Mr. Goodlad: We have regular contacts with the Georgian Government through our ambassador in Moscow. In addition, my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs also met senior advisers to President Shevardnadze last week. Know-how fund assistance is already available to Georgia and in 1993 we spent £71,000. The United Kingdom also contributed over £2 million in humanitarian relief since March 1993.

Relations between the United Kingdom and Georgia are good. We continue to emphasise the need for co-operation with the UN and CSCE in seeking a peaceful solution to disputes on Georgian territory.

Security

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the use of private detective agencies and security companies by his Department.

Mr. Goodlad: There is no record of the FCO ever having employed a private detective agency. Up to now the only recorded instance of the FCO employing a private security company in the United Kingdom was for the guarding of Wiston House conference centre for six months in 1992-93. However, under the market testing programme, six private security companies have been invited to tender, along with an in-house team, for guarding all FCO premises in London from 3 January 1995. The result will be announced in August.

We do not keep central records of security companies employed at our posts overseas.

Libya

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made as to the effect of current sanctions in respect of medical supplies upon Libya in respect of (a) the poor and (b) women and children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The supply of medical products is not prohibited under the current United Nations sanctions against Libya. As a matter of general principle, with which the United Kingdom agrees, the supply of medicines is exempt from the effects of all United Nations sanctions regimes.

Occupied Territories

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effect of the closure of the occupied territories by the Israel Government on the economic life of the Palestinians and the peace process; and what representations he has made to the Israeli Government.

Mr. Goodlad: We welcome the agreement reached in Paris on 29 April between Israel and the PLO on economic aspects of Israeli withdrawal from Gaza and Jericho, including the movement of goods and labour between the Palestinian areas and Israel.

Argentina and Brazil

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Argentina and Brazil.

Mr. Goodlad: On Argentina I would refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Stroud (Mr. Knapman).

Our relations with Brazil are excellent. On his recent visit with a party of senior business men, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs was able to see for himself how dynamic the Brazilian economy is and what opportunities there are for the United Kingdom. The Brazilian Foreign Minister has accepted his invitation to visit Britain later this year. Increasingly the United Kingdom and Brazil share a common international agenda.

Angola

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commownealth Affairs what discussions he has had with EU Ministers on the situation in Angola.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There are regular working level discussions of Angola at meetings in the framework of the common foreign and security policy.

Occupied Territories

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance Her Majesty's Government are providing bilaterally and through the EC for a Palestinian police force in the occupied territories.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom is providing 200 sets of riot-control equipment and organising training courses in the United Kingdom for senior police officers. The European Union has adopted a joint action which provides for up to ecu 10 million in grant funds from the Community budget towards the Palestinian police force. The United Kingdom played a leading role in stimulating the European Union contribution.

EMPLOYMENT

Self-employment

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on what is currently being done to encourage people to be self-employed; and what further changes he will make.

Miss Widdecombe: The business start-up scheme encourages unemployed people to set up their own new businesses. It offers a weekly allowance together with business training and counselling. Nearly 700,000 people have entered the scheme to date. The budget for the scheme has been transferred to the Department of Environment's single regeneration budget, one of the aims of which is the encouragement of sustainable economic growth and wealth creation by improving the competitiveness of the local economy, including business support.

The Department supports the Prince's Youth Business Trust in making funds available to disadvantaged young people to set up their own businesses. We have recently agreed additional funding to help the trust in its aim of doubling the number of young people it supports.

My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade is developing a network of business links, which will provide world class support to business—including those who are contemplating starting a new business.

TRANSPORT

M25

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what cost-benefit analysis his Department has undertaken of the delays experienced by motorists in roadworks for widening the M25 compared with the final benefits of a widened road; when he anticipates road widening on the M25 will be completed; and what will be the total cost of widening the M25.

Mr. Key: This question relates to operational matters of the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. John Spellar, dated 29 April 1994:

The Minister for Roads and Traffic, Mr. Robert Key, has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the M25.

The cost of delays to motorists caused by construction works is assessed as part of the overall economic cost benefit analysis of motorway widening schemes. The results of this analysis are published as part of the assessment framework for each scheme.

We have recently completed widening the M25 to dual four lanes between junctions 15 (M4) and 16 (M40) and two further schemes are under way between junctions 7 (M23)—8 (Reigate) and junctions 10 (A3)—11 (Chertsey) for completion during next year. Other schemes for widening most of the M25 to dual four lanes within the highway boundary were included in the recent review of the road programme and details published in the 1994

Review report. The total cost of widening to dual four lanes between junctions 5–28 (excluding junctions 11–15 which has been dual four lanes for some time) is approximately £672 million. Subject to the availability of funds, all these schemes should be completed over about the next 10 years.

There are also schemes in the programme for increasing the capacity of the western section of the motorway beyond dual four lanes. Two of these, between junctions 12 (M3)—15 (M4) and between junctions 15–16 (M40), have an estimated total cost of some £231 million. The timetable for construction of these schemes would depend on the time needed to complete the statutory procedures and the availability of funds. Widening beyond dual four lanes is also under consideration for the length between junctions 10 (A3) and 12 (M3) but the form of any scheme, and hence its cost, is not yet known.

M25 Programme

Construction schemes	Status and Cost £ million
Widening to D4
Junctions 3 (M20)—5 (M26)	Longer term scheme, to be reviewed later.
Junctions 5 (M26)—7 (M23)	Priority 2 scheme, programme to be reviewed. Cost: £101·1.
Junctions 7 (M23)—8 (Reigate)	Works started in March 1994. Construction expected to take about 15 months. Cost £63·5.
Junctions 8 (Reigate)—10 (A3)	Proposals published February 1994 with work likely to get underway early 1995. Cost: £78·2.
Junctions 10 (A3)—11 (A320)	Works started in February 1994. Construction expected to take about 12 months. Cost: £50·5.
Junctions 11—15	Already D4 standard
Junctions 15 (M4)—16 (M40)	Construction started 4 January 1993. The works completed end April 1994. Cost: 35·3.
Junctions 16 (M40)—19 (Watford)	Proposals published February 1994. Public exhibitions held and comments are now being considered. Cost: 71·3
Junctions 19 (Watford)—23 (A1)	Priority 2 scheme, programme to be reviewed. Cost: 86·5.
Junctions 23 (A1)—26 (A121)	Details published February and comments are now being considered. Cost: £81·1.
Junctions 26 (A121)—28 (A12)	Priority 2 scheme, programme to be reviewed. Cost: £104.
Capacity beyond dual four lanes
Junctions 3 (M20)—10 (A3) and Junctions 21A (M1)—30 (A13)	Announced on 22 July 1993 that for foreseeable future there would be no widening beyond dual four lanes for these sections which make up some 70 per cent. of M25.
Junctions 10 (A3)—12 (M3)	Consultants appointed October 1992 to study options. Proposals may be published Autumn 1994. Cost: £123·9.
Junctions 12 (M3)—15 (M4)	Draft highway orders published 7 April 1994. Already announced that public inquiry will have to be held, probably towards the end of this year. Cost: £164·3.
Junctions 15 (M4)—16 (M40)	Decision to proceed to order publication state with proposals for 2 lane link roads announced on 30 March. Cost: £66·2.
Junctions 16 (M40)—21A (M1)	No work on feasibility of providing capacity beyond D4 will be undertaken for many years.
Junction Improvement
Junctions 30 (A13)—31(A1306)	Consultants appointed 1 January 1994. Cost: £43·5.

A40

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to review the various speed limits on the A40 between the A40 (M) and the M40.

Mr. Norris: This question raises an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked Lawrie Haynes, the chief executive, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Peter Luff, dated 26 April 1994:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your question about his plans for reviewing the various speed limits on the A40 between the A40(M) and the M40 because this is now an operational matter for the Highways Agency.

Much has been, and still is being done to improve the length of the A40 in question and it is important to ensure current speed limits reflect today's conditions. Accordingly we intend to review the speed limit on the length between Hanger Lane and the Polish Memorial Junction later this year after the Traffic Director has announced his plans for red route measures for the road. Reviews of the speed limits elsewhere on the A40 will follow as and when the major improvement schemes currently under construction at Long Lane and Northolt Airport are completed at the end of the year, and when those planned at Gypsy Corner and Western Circus have been undertaken.

Annual Staff Reports

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 21 February, Official Report, column 86, if he will list by annual staff report box marking for the same reporting year the numbers of male grade sevens receiving box 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 performance markings.

Mr. Norris: In the reporting year 1991-92, 29 grade 7 males received box 1; 322 box 2; 260 box 3: and 3 box 4 ASR markings. No male grade 7 received a box 5 marking.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 21 February, Official Report, column 81, what targets and budgets he has set for the collection of unpaid vehicle excise duty.

Mr. Key: On the question of targets I refer the hon. Member to the answer of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 29 April, column 385. The agreed budget to carry out this work during 1994-95 is around £27 million.

Civil Aviation Authority

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will report progress on the privatisation of the Civil Aviation Authority.

Mr. Norris: We announced at the time of the 1993 Budget that we were asking a group of officials to examine whether the national air traffic services of the Civil Aviation Authority could be privatised. This group has now reported and we are considering its recommendations. We hope to announce our response shortly.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total amount of revenue that was collected in vehicle excise duty in each of the last three years.

Mr. Key: Net vehicle excise duty, after refunds, collected in the last three financial years was:

Motorway Pollution

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what steps he is taking to improve the treatment of surface water from motorways and other trunk roads so that it does not cause pollution;

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that all surface water run off from (a) existing motorways and (b) new motorways, is properly treated before discharge to the environment; and what are the implications for construction and maintenance costs for ensuring all surface water from motorways is properly treated;

(3) what assessment he has made of the future cost implications to his Department of the out-of-court settlement in respect of the case brought by Mr. Mohamed Al Fayed for pollution of his land by run-off from the M25; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what assessment he has made of the likelihood of future legal actions from people who have suffered as the result of pollution from motorways; and what contingency fund his Department has for such actions.

Mr. Key: These four questions relate to operational matters of the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Ms Joan Walley, dated 4 May 1994:

The Minister for Roads and Traffic, Mr. Robert Key, has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent four Parliamentary questions about the treatment of surface water from motorways and other trunk roads.

The Highways Agency is now responsible for research previously commissioned by the Department of Transport jointly with the National Rivers Authority on the design of highway drainage systems to avoid pollution problems. When the research has been completed I expect to issue advice to designers and those responsible for maintaining the drainage systems.

The out-of-court settlement in the case you mentioned reflected the particular circumstances of that case and cannot be taken to have implications for situations elsewhere. The settlement involved damages of £5,000 and agreed works to the drainage system likely to cost in the order of £60,000. In addition there will be legal costs of an amount yet to be agreed.

In the case of existing motorways, the arrangements for treating surface water run off before discharge to the environment have been accepted by the relevant water regulatory authority. The arrangements for new motorways will be considered within the environmental assessment and agreed with the water regulatory authority. We are currently reviewing the implications for construction and maintenance costs.

The Department does not, in general, assess the likelihood of future legal actions from people who claim to have suffered as a result of pollution from motorways and no contingency fund is kept for such actions.

Detective Agencies

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Clwyd, South-West (Mr. Jones) of 25 April, Official Report, column 42, if he will list all contracts with private detective agencies for the purpose of collecting evidence and serving papers on those who have trespassed on his Department's land, and the expenditure to date on each; how many former employees were inadvertently overpaid; and what was the total sum involved.

Mr. Key [holding answer 3 May 1994]: A single detective agency has been employed to serve papers and collect evidence on those who have trespassed on the Department's land. The recorded expenditure stands at £250,829·52p.

Detective agencies have also been used in connection with inadvertent overpayment of 15 staff, totalling £22,030·06p. Of this sum, £17,556·76p has been or is being recovered.

SCOTLAND

Correspondence

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what percentage of letters sent by his office to hon. Members are written in the Gaelic language;

(2) if it is his practice to sign personally letters in reply to hon. Members which are written in the Gaelic language.

Sir Hector Monro: Neither my right hon. Friend nor his office has had occasion to write to hon. Members in Gaelic.

Ardrossan, Saltcoats and Stevenston Bypass

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions the Scottish Office has had with the appropriate authorities concerning the implementation of plans for the Ardrossan, Saltcoats and Stevenston bypass; and when he expects the project to be started.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Officials have consulted regularly with district council officers. They have been made aware of the further work being undertaken to identify the best layout for a bypass. A further meeting has been arranged for May to explain the progress which has been made while these studies continue.

At this stage it is not possible to predict when work on construction might start.

Colorado Beetle

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent reports he has received about sightings of Colorado Beetle (a) tendered voluntarily and (b) in response to requests; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: So far this year six Colorado beetles have been found in Scotland, as a result of inspections undertaken by officials of the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department.

Colorado beetle is a notifiable quarantine pest under the Plant Health (Great Britain) Order 1993 and the United Kingdom is recognised as a protected zone against this pest under the EU single market plant health arrangements. Each year the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department conducts a publicity campaign which has helped to increase public awareness of the pest.

No breeding colony has ever been established in Scotland or elsewhere in the United Kingdom.

Strathclyde PTA

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what will be the future boundaries of the Strathclyde passenger transport authority.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The future boundaries of the Strathclyde passenger transport area will be decided in due course after consultation with appropriate bodies. It is not expected that there will be any reduction in the present area, but there may be some increase.

Fish Conservation

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions since the decision to suspend the operation of the Sea Fisheries (Conservation) Act 1992 pending a decision of the European Court of Justice he or other Ministers have met representatives of the Scottish fishing industry to discuss alternative conservation strategies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary with responsibility for agriculture and fisheries in Scotland, my noble and learned Friend the Minister of State and I have all met representatives of the Scottish fishing industry since 14 December 1993. In addition, my officials are in constant contact with fishermen's organisations regarding conservation issues.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what expenditure has been incurred by his Department (a) up to 31 December 1993 and (b) since 1 January 1994 in making preparations, including the purchase of equipment, for the implementation of the Sea Fisheries (Conservation) Act 1992.

Mr. Lang: Total expenditure on staff and associated costs up to 31 December 1993 amounted to approximately £140,000. Expenditure after 1 January 1994 totalled £16,000.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what amount of computer hardware and software has been purchased by his Department for the purposes of implementing the provisions of the Sea Fisheries (Conservation) Act 1992.

Mr. Lang: None.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many officials of his Department were engaged in work related to the implementation of the Sea Fisheries (Conservation) Act 1992 on 31 December 1993; and how many officials continue to be engaged in work related to the implementation of this Act.

Mr. Lang: At the beginning of December 1993, seven officials were responsible for assessing fishermen's representations against their provisional days-at-sea allocations. Since then all have been redeployed.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements are in place for the setting up of appeals tribunals under the Sea Fisheries (Conservation) Act 1992; and how many departmental officials and staff were engaged in work related to the setting up of these tribunals on 1 April.

Mr. Lang: Work on the sea fish licence tribunal has been suspended and no staff were engaged on this work on 1 April 1994.

Temporary Sheriffs

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many temporary sheriffs hold commissions to serve in sheriff courts in Scotland; how many sessions were undertaken by temporary sheriffs in each of the past five years; how many temporary sheriffs were employed in the Scottish courts for more than 80 per cent. of the available court sitting days in each of the past five years; what is the current daily rate paid to a temporary sheriff; what was the total cost to his Department of temporary sheriffs during the same period; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 April 1994]: One hundred and seven temporary sheriffs hold commissions to serve in sheriff courts in Scotland. The current daily fee paid to temporary sheriffs is £246. Information is provided on the number of sitting days undertaken, the usage made of temporary sheriffs and the total costs.

Court sitting days provided by temporary sheriffs

	Number
1989	4,046
1990	4,236
1991	5,147
1992	6,093
1993	6,660

Number of temporary sheriffs who sat for more than 80 per cent. of available sitting days

1989	0
1990	3
1991	3
1992	5
1993	4

	Total costs (£)
1989-90	950,000
1990-91	952,000
1991-92	1,512,000
1992-93	2,041,000
1993-94	2,308,000

The services of temporary sheriffs have contributed significantly to reducing inconvenience to court users resulting from cancellation of court sittings and to avoiding increases in court delays due to increases in workloads. The average waiting period for summary criminal trials at the end of 1993 was the lowest recorded over the past five years.

Police (Firearms)

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what firearms training police officers undergo who carry out duties (a) as an authorised firearms officer, (b) as a member of the tactical firearms unit, (c) as a CID firearms officer and (d) as a member of the firearms training department; and with what frequency in each case;

(2) if he will make a statement on the availability for call out of each category of firearms officers.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 29 April 1994]: Firearm training undertaken by police officers in Scotland is carried out in strict compliance with the manual of guidance on the police use of firearms adopted by the Association of Chief Police Officers in Scotland. Training input varies from force to force. In general, authorised firearms officers receive training on weapon handling and safety, firearms tactics, administration of firearms incidents and shooting skills. Where forces have tactical firearms units, or their equivalent, officers in them receive additional training which includes instruction on rapid intervention techniques. In forces which deploy them, CID firearms officers undergo the same training as authorised firearms officers and, if appropriate, receive additional specialised training in VIP protection duties. Officers who are members of firearms training departments have in most cases successfully completed the national firearms instructor's course conducted at one of the national police firearms training centres. In addition some personnel have undertaken a national bodyguard's course, a national rifleman's course and a local marksman's course.

Length of initial training also varies from force to force. On average authorised firearms officers receive 11 days' training; members of tactical firearms units, or their equivalent, receive 25 days' training; CID firearms officers receive 15 days' training; and members of firearms training departments receive 18 days' training. In each case refresher training is provided annually.

Chief constables can deploy police officers who have undergone firearm training in each category on a 24-hour basis.

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many police officers in (a) the Strathclyde police area and (b) Scotland are authorised to carry firearms;

(2) on how many occasions in the last two years police firearms have been discharged in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 29 April 1994]: There are currently 210 police officers in Strathclyde police authorised to carry firearms and a total of 712 officers in Scotland. Police firearms have been discharged on six occasions in the last two years in Scotland.

Public Appointments

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the (a) name, (b) occupation or former occupation, (c) place of residence, (d) date of appointment and (e) salary, honorarium or allowance of the highest-earning 20 people appointed by him to any organisation or body, both inclusive and exclusive of expenses for travel, subsistence and other items in the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 29 April 1994]: This information is not held centrally and culd be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The level of any salary or fee paid to a member of a nationalised industry, non-departmental public body or NHS body sponsored by my Department is listed in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1993", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Road Accidents

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children were killed or injured in road accidents in Scotland in 1992 and 1993.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The requested information is given in the following table. The 1993 figures are provisional.

Child casualties (aged 0-15 years) in road accidents in Scotland by severity, 1992 and 1993.

Year	Fatal	Fatal and Serious	Total
1992	40	897	4,052

Bullying

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the incidence of bullying at primary and secondary schools in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 3 May 1994]: Because bullying can take many different forms, it would be impossible to estimate meaningfully the incidence over the country. All instances of bullying are, however, serious matters and, in the interests of all children, schools should address the issue, whether or not they perceive bullying as a problem in their own circumstances.

That is why the Government commissioned and issued copies of a pack entitled "Action Against Bullying" to all Scottish schools in 1992. The pack, which was drawn up by the Scottish Council for Research in Education, stresses that the simple most important thing a school can do to prevent bullying is to have a clear policy to which teachers, pupils and parents are committed.

The Government also funded the distribution to all Scottish schools in September 1993 of a follow-up pack, also produced by SCRE. This pack contains a school booklet aimed at non-teaching staff and a family booklet. Its focus is how to ensure that the whole school community works together.

The Scottish Office Education Department is also funding the appointment by SCRE of an anti-bullying development officer.

Student Grants

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his target for the percentage of adults returning to education and training; what plans he has to increase student grants to the level of the present grant plus the present student loan; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 29 April 1994]: My right hon. Friend has no specific target for adults returning to education and training, but he has endorsed the target set by the Advisory Scottish Council for Education and Training Targets which is that, by 1996, all employees should take part in training or development activities.

On student support, we announced last November that we would gradually adjust the relative amounts of grant and loan over the next few years with the aim of bringing the two elements into broad balance in 1996-97. We have no plans to change those arrangements.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to encourage more adults to enter further and higher education, with particular reference to the making of Scottish Office Environment Department grants to students taking courses on a part-time basis.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 29 April 1994]: More adults than ever before are entering further and higher education in Scotland and we are encouraging more part-time study. Our vocational qualifications reforms are stimulating wider access and progression. Education authorities have a discretionary power to make bursaries available to part-time students and I have no plans to change that.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Residential Homes, Down and Lisburn

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is the role of the independent advocates who have been appointed by the Eastern health board in respect of residential homes in the Down and Lisburn unit of management;

(2) how many independent advocates have been appointed by the Eastern health and social services board in respect of residential homes in the Down and Lisburn unit of management;

(3) if he will list the names of the independent advocates who have been appointed by the Eastern health board in respect of residential homes in the Down and Lisburn unit of management.

Mr. Ancram: Prior to 1 April 1994, the Eastern health and social services board had not appointed independent advocates in the Down and Lisburn unit of management. Since 1 April the unit has been a health and social services trust and it has not yet taken any decision on the appointment of independent advocates.

Roads

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what financial amounts were allocated and spent on the maintenance of roads in each roads division since 1 April 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tim Smith: The information is as follows:

Expenditure in £'000's

Housing

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many houses were constructed by the Housing Executive between 1 April 1984 and 31 March 1994; what were the locations of these developments; and, of these, how many are still in public ownership.

Mr. Tim Smith: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. I have been advised by the chief executive that information on the location of houses constructed between 1 April 1984 and 31 March 1994 is available by Housing Executive region and is as follows:—

Number of houses constructed

Region	Number
Belfast	8,254
North-East	1,079
North-West[1]	2,224
West[1]	1,518
South	1,314
South-East	3,543
TOTAL	17,932

[1] On 1 April 1990, Coleraine District transferred from North-West to North-East Region and the remainder of North-West Region amalgamated with West Region.

The number of these specific houses that are still in public ownership is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many houses have been constructed under the co-ownership housing scheme between 1 April 1984 and 31 March 1994; and what were the locations of these developments.

Mr. Tim Smith: The Northern Ireland Co-ownership Housing Association, which operates the co-ownership scheme, does not construct or commission the construction of houses. People interested in the scheme select the house they wish to purchase, either newly built or second hand, from the open market. Between 1 April 1984 and 31 March 1994 the association has purchased 8,976 houses, distributed as follows:

Council area	New-build	Existing property	Total participants
Derry	524	82	606

TOTAL	6,461	2,515	8,976

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how much was allocated to each regional division of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in each year from 1 April 1984 to 31 March 1994;

(2) how much has been allocated to each regional division of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in the 1993-94 financial year; and how much is to be allocated to each district office in the 1994-95 financial year.

Mr. Ancram: These are matters for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. I am advised by its chief executive that the information is not available in the form requested. Expenditure by region for the years requested over the main expenditure blocks was as follows:—

Expenditure by regional division (£ million)[1]

Year	North East	South East	West[3]	South	Belfast
1984-85	41·251	42·710	62·949	35·242	109·587

1993-94[2]	56·940	51·678	69·001	42·028	69·891
TOTAL	448·787	481·653	631·165	367·726	884·985

[1] Comprises expenditure on new housebuilding, land and property acquisition, improvement work, office accommodation and equipment, maintenance, supervision and management and grants to the private sector. Loan charges, headquarters administration and other costs not allocated to the regions are excluded.

[2] Includes figures for miscellaneous expenditure, such as insurance and write-offs, which are only available by Region from 1990-91.

[3] The figures for West region include those for the former North West region which was subsumed on 1 April 1991, with the exception of the Coleraine district which transferred to the North East region.

Information on the allocations to district offices for 1994-95 is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many houses have been constructed by housing associations between 1 April 1984 and 31 March 1994; and what were the locations of these developments.

Mr. Tim Smith: Between 1 April 1984 and 31 March 1994, registered housing associations in Northern Ireland completed 6,599 new-build houses, flats and bungalows. This figure includes 30 hostels for special needs groups, each recorded as a single dwelling and 108 sheltered dwellings built by the Housing Executive but transferred on completion to housing associations.

A schedule of the 314 locations of these developments has been placed in the Library.

Education Reforms

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the cost of introducing educational reforms under the Education Reform (Northern Ireland) Order 1989 between 1 April 1990 and 31 March 1994.

Mr. Ancram: From April 1990 to April 1994 some £136 million additional resources have been made available for the implementation of the reform programme. These resources have been applied, on top of targeted baseline provision, to a number of areas, in broad terms the main ones being curriculum development, assessment and support—£67 million—the introduction of local management of schools and colleges—£16 million—and the accommodation and equipment needs of schools—£50 million. It is not, however, possible to identify expenditure due solely to the changes introduced in the 1989 Order.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the cost of introducing assessment arrangements as part of the education reforms for (a) 1992-93 and (b) 1993-94.

Mr. Ancram: The cost of introducing assessment arrangements as part of education reform is £2·50 million in 1992-93 and £2·63 million in 1993-94. These figures do not include in-service training costs incurred by education and library boards; this information is not held centrally.

Orthopaedic Operations

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are on the waiting list for orthopaedic operations; how long they have been on the waiting list; and what is the expected date for their operation.

Mr. Ancram: The number of people and the length of time for which they have been waiting for treatment in the trauma and orthopaedic speciality at 31 December 1993, the latest date for which information is available, is set out in the table:

Waiting times (months)	Ordinary Admissions	Day Cases	Total
0-2	847	215	1,062
3-5	564	165	729
6-8	501	115	616
9-11	374	69	443
12-14	242	63	305
15-17	211	61	272
18-20	134	45	179
21-23	139	23	162
24+	178	9	187
Totals	3,190	765	3,955

With regard to the final part of the question about expected dates for the above patients' operations, this information is not held centrally.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what financial amounts have been allocated to orthopaedic surgery in Northern Ireland from 1 April 1980 to 31 March 1994 under (a) PARR and (b) capitation funding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: None. Capitation funding, like its predecessor PARR, is not a mechanism for distributing resources for specific services. It is a means of allocating total revenue resources to the four health and social services boards which, in the light of perceived need, other competing service demands and the amount of resources available, then determine the amount to spend on specific services such as orthopaedic.

Information about the amount spent on orthopaedic surgery in Northern Ireland from 1 April 1980 to 31 March 1994 is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Asthma

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his policy in respect of community care grants and loans from the social fund for specialised furnishings for those who suffer from asthma; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: Every application for a grant or loan from the social fund is decided on its merits. There are no special arrangements for sufferers from asthma or any other illness.

Arthur Andersen

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on progress in the Department's civil action against Arthur Andersen in the New York courts.

Mr. Tim Smith: The Department continues to pursue its civil action against Arthur Andersen and Co., former auditors of De Lorean Motor Cars Ltd. No date has been set yet for the trial, but it is expected that the pre-trial procedures should be completed by September 1994.

Deer (Tuberculosis)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list, by region, the number of cases of tuberculosis in deer in each year since 1985.

Mr. Ancram: In Northern Ireland bovine tuberculosis has been detected in deer in one case in 1991 and four cases in 1992.

School Leavers

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what new measures he will introduce to reduce the number of school leavers with no qualifications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: The proportion of Northern Ireland school leavers with no qualifications has fallen steadily from a figure of 17·7 per cent. in 1986-87 to 7·4 per cent. in 1991-92. Pupils potentially in this category will continue to benefit from a range of education reform initiatives and from additional resources allocated through the targeting social needs policy and making Belfast work initiative. Consideration is also being given to targeting selected schools undertaking development plans to address the problem of under-achievement.

Economic Development

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will ensure that a comprehensive review and progress report is issued annually covering all agencies involved in economic development and their activities, following the economic assessment by the Northern Ireland Economic Council.

Mr. Tim Smith: I am considering the Northern Ireland Economic Council's recommendation. Before deciding, I need to be sure that such a document would bring benefits over and above the considerable amount of material already published in the agencies' own annual reports.

Tree Planting

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the present policy of the Forest Service Department of Agriculture, Northern Ireland in respect of planting in proximity to public roads.

Mr. Ancram: The general policy of the Forest Service is to keep planting back 10 to 20 m from the edge of a public road. The average distance would be about 15 m.

Sea Fish Licence Tribunal

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements are in place for the setting up of appeals tribunals under the Sea Fisheries (Conservation) Act 1992; and how many departmental officials and staff were engaged in work related to the setting up of these tribunals on 1 April.

Mr. Ancram: Work on the sea fish licence tribunal has been suspended, and no staff were engaged on this work on 1 April 1994.

Fish Conservation

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions since the decision in December 1993 to suspend the operation of the Sea Fisheries (Conservation) Act 1992 pending a decision of the European Court of Justice he or other Ministers have met representatives of the Northern Ireland fishing industry to discuss alternative conservation strategies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: My noble Friend has met representatives of the Northern Ireland Fishing Industry on two occasions since 14 December 1993. The National Federation of Fishermen's Organisation's technical conservation proposals included input from the Northern Ireland fishing industry. Officials from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland met the NFFO and representatives of the Northern Ireland industry on 8 March to examine their proposals in detail.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what expenditure has been incurred by his Department (a) up to 31 December 1993 and (b) since 1 January 1994 in making preparations, including the purchase of equipment, for the implementation of the Sea Fisheries (Conservation) Act 1992.

Mr. Ancram: The estimated cost for Northern Ireland of preparing for the introduction of fisherman's days at sea restrictions is £76,500 up to 31 December 1993. No equipment was purchased. No costs have been incurred since 1 January 1994 on such preparations.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what amount of computer hardware and software has been purchased by his Department for the purposes or implementing the provisions of the Sea Fisheries (Conservation) Act 1992.

Mr. Ancram: None.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many officials of his Department were engaged in work related to the implementation of the Sea Fisheries (Conservation) Act 1992 on 31 December 1993; and how many officials continue to be engaged in work related to the implementation of this Act.

Mr. Ancram: At the beginning of December 1993 four officials were responsible for assessing fishermen's representations against their provisional days at sea allocations; they have all been redeployed.

Privatisation (Consultants)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the cost of employing consultants in connection with privatisation programmes in which his Department has been engaged since 1980.

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is not available in the Northern Ireland Office nor in all of the Northern Ireland Departments prior to 1989. However, from April 1989 to March 1994 the cost of employing consultants in connection with privatisation programmes in the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments was £13·4 million.

Military Complaints

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends to lay before Parliament Mr. David Hewitt's annual report as independent assessor of military complaints procedures.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have today arranged for David Hewitt's first annual report as independent assessor of military complaints procedures to be laid before each House of Parliament. I welcome this thorough report, which represents a comprehensive examination of the complaints procedures which the Army now have in place in Northern Ireland.

I particularly welcome Mr. Hewitt's comment that "I would be fairly certain that no other armed force in the world has quite as detailed complaints procedures as those devised for military personnel in Northern Ireland".

This illustrates the importance which the Army attaches to its relations with the community in Northern Ireland.

There may, of course, be scope for yet further improvement to the procedures and I look forward to hearing the views of the General Officer Commanding Northern Ireland on Mr. Hewitt's comments, questions and recommendations.

The Government fully recognise that the emergency legislation provides the armed forces with additional powers, vital in countering the terrorist campaign, although it gives them no privileges. These powers must be exercised with sensitivity and due regard to the rights of individuals, as the Army's authorities have satisfied Mr. Hewitt that they themselves recognise. The independent assessor provides valuable assistance in ensuring that, where the highest standards are not met, appropriate and effective procedures are in place to enable and help the individual in seeking redress.

I am most grateful to Mr. Hewitt for his work throughout the past year. His report will receive careful and detailed consideration.

Social Security Agency

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Social Security Agency for the current financial year.

Mr. Ancram: The targets are included in the agency's 1994-95 business plan, which was published today. A copy of the plan will be placed in the Library. The targets are in line with the Government's policy of improving the service provided to customers and fully support the standards established in the Northern Ireland citizens charter. I am satisfied that the targets present a demanding challenge for the agency. They are as follows:

1. Benefit Clearance Times[1]
Social Fund Crisis Loans on the day need arises[2]
Social Fund Community Grants
65 per cent. in 7 days
95 per cent. in 20 days
Income Support
71 per cent. in 5 days
90 per cent. in 13 days
Sickness/Invalidity Benefit
65 per cent. in 10 days
95 per cent. in 30 days
Child Benefit
73 per cent. in 10 days
95 per cent. in 30 days
Family Credit
60 per cent. in 13 days
95 per cent. in 42 days
Disability Living Allowance
68 per cent. in 30 days
85 per cent. in 53 days
Retirement Pension
65 per cent. in 20 days
95 per cent. in 60 days
Unemployment Benefit
6·5 days
2. Benefit Accuracy
Income Support
to pay the correct amount in at least 92 per cent. of cases
Sickness/Invalidity Benefit
to pay the correct amount in at least 97 per cent. of cases
Child Benefit
to pay the correct amount in at least 98 per cent. of cases
Family Credit
to pay the correct amount in at least 93 per cent. of cases
Disability Living allowance
to pay the correct amount in at least 98 per cent. of cases
Retirement Pension
to pay the correct amount in at least 99 per cent. of cases
Unemployment Benefit
to pay the correct amount in at least 96·5 per cent. of cases
3. Customer Satisfaction
90 per cent. of customers to regard the Agency' service as satisfactory or better
4. Financial Recovery
recovery of Social Fund loans—£17·24 million recovery of Income Support overpayments—£1·40 million recovery of centralised benefits overpayments—£0·40 million benefit savings from detection and prevention of fraud—£11·50 million to carry out 5,100 National Insurance contributions surveys (including 1,020 employer educational visits) identify £1·10 million Class 1 arrears as a result of compliance work
5. Resource Management to live within a gross allocation of £29·80 million for Social Fund loans and community care grants to live within the Agency's gross administration budget of £130·0 million, of which £126·5 million relates to running costs to achieve cash efficiency savings of the order of £3·0 million

Notes:

1. In all cases, clearance time is measured from the date of receipt of a claim or application in the office to the date on which the claim or application is decided. The measure, therefore, excludes the time taken to issue notification of the decision and any payment.
2. Monitored against '95 per cent. in 1 day'.

Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many private security firms have been employed by his Department for each of the last 10 years; what has been the annual value of the contracts; and if he will estimate how many guards have been employed for each of those years.

Sir John Wheeler: Details of private security firms employed by the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments over the period 1991-92 to 1993-94 are as follows:

	Number of firms	Annual value £000s	Number of guards
1991-92	15	1,796·7	183
1992-93	18	2,050·6	163
1993-94	18	1,946·8	173

For the details of all contracts for each financial year from 1984-85 to 1990-91, I refer the hon. Member to the reply he was given on 22 October 1991, Official Report, column 552.

EDUCATION

Grant-maintained Schools

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the total number of (a) parents eligible to vote, (b) parents who have voted in favour of seeking grant-maintained status and (c) parents who have voted against seeking grant-maintained status in all the ballots so far held on grant-maintained status.

Mr. Robin Squire: In ballots on grant-maintained status held so far, 1,324,995 parents were eligible to vote: 544,170 parents voted in favour, and 306,296 parents voted against.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what percentage of (a) primary and (b) secondary pupils within each local education authority area are being educated in grant-maintained schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows the estimated percentages of pupils at maintained primary and secondary schools who are currently being educated in grant-maintained schools within each local education authority area in England.

[1] The approval date shown is the date at which the school was notified. In most cases the local education authority would have been informed on the same day. In some cases schools were given earlier notification that the Secretary of State was minded to approve the proposals subject to certain modifications.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the grant-maintained schools that have a policy of admitting the children of their teachers irrespective of those children meeting the other admission criteria.

Mr. Robin Squire: This information is not collected centrally. Circular 6/93—"Admissions to Maintained Schools"—notes that the admission arrangements of a school may provide that, if it is over-subscribed, priority will be given to children whose parents work at the school. This applies to schools maintained by LEAs, including voluntary aided schools, as well as to grant-maintained schools.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) which grant-maintained schools received details of their final annual maintenance grants for 1994-95 and on what date; and, for each, what is the level of (a) direct AMG, (b) central AMG and (c) the value of (b) as a percentage of (a);

(2) which grant-maintained schools have not received notification of their final annual maintenance grants.

Mr. Robin Squire: The calculation and notification of annual maintenance grant to grant-maintained schools are now the responsibility of the Funding Agency for Schools. I have asked the chairman of the Funding Agency to reply to the hon. Member.

Technology Colleges

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what bids were submitted for initial capital grant for each of the 13 schools listed in his announcement of 26 April; what allocations have been made; and what level and nature of additional annual funding has been agreed.

Mr. Robin Squire: The schools listed in the announcement have been invited to submit a bid for a capital project which involves a capital grant of up to £100,000. Accordingly, no allocations have yet been made. Additional annual funding for each of the schools in financial year 1994-95 will be at the rate of £60 per pupil, for the purposes of support, equipment and training for the teaching of technology, science and mathematics.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much of each sponsor's contribution for each of the 13 schools listed in his announcement of 26 April, is in the form of (a) cash, (b) goods and (c) services; and whether the value of each of (b) and (c) is based on the retail or normal commercial value or the cost to the sponsor.

Mr. Robin Squire: The value and nature of sponsorship pledged by the main sponsors for each of the 13 technology colleges is listed in the table. Information on the retail or normal commercial value of goods and services and the cost to the sponsor is commercially confidential.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is his estimate of the number of surplus places in each city technology college.

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member on 14 March 1994, Official Report, column 530. Recruitment at age 11 is over-subscribed for all city technology colleges, and we expect them all to be full to capacity once the build-up phase is complete. It makes no sense to describe the position therefore as involving surplus places.

Nursery Education

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his written answer of 18 April, Official Report, column 379, concerning the number of children attending pre-school activities, if he will (a) estimate the numbers attending more than one category of provision and (b) those attending pre-school playgroups with members of the Pre-school Playgroups Association, in (i) 1993 and (ii) 1994.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department does not collect information on how many children attend more than one form of pre-school provision in the course of a year, but the proportion is thought to be relatively small. I am informed by the Pre-School Playgroups Association that as at Janaury 1993 there were 771,397 children attending playgroups in membership of the Association. Data are not yet available for 1994, but the Association estimates that the total number of children attending member playgroups will be very close to the 1993 total.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he has taken to establish, or estimate, the level of parental demand for nursery education in all or part of (a) England and (b) Wales.

Mr. Robin Squire: Evidence from a variety of sources suggests that most parents want some form of provision before age five, and that many wish to have a choice of provision besides state nursery education. Nursery education in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Privatisation (Consultants)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will estimate the cost of employing consultants in connection with privatisation programmes in which his Department has been engaged since 1980.

Mr. Boswell: The value of consultancy contracts awarded by the Department in relation to privatisation programmes since 1980 is £627,000.

DEFENCE

Homosexual Service Personnel

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many (a) men and (b) women were discharged from (i) the Royal Navy, (ii) the Army and (iii) the Royal Air Force in (A) 1992, (B) 1993 and (C) 1994 because they were homosexual; and in each case what proportion this was of the total discharged and what proportion of the total employed;

(2) in which rank were each of the people discharged from (a) the Royal Navy, (b) the Army and (c) the Royal Air Force because they were homosexual in each of the last five years.

Mr. Hanley: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence will write to the hon. Member.

Search and Rescue

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the military search and rescue missions flown from RAF Brawdy and RAF Valley between 0001 hours and 2350 hours on Tuesday 19 April including time of call and time of arrival on scene.

Mr. Hanley: Neither the search and rescue helicopter flight at RAF Brawdy nor that at RAF Valley was called out on any military search and rescue missions on the day in question.

Oil and Gas Exploration

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what way his Department's operations in the Irish sea require drilling for oil and gas to be postponed until 1996-97; and what effect this has on military installations in Wales.

Mr. Hanley: My Department has requested that oil and gas exploration in a small number of MOD ranges and exercise areas in the Irish sea be delayed until 1996-97 to enable defence activities to be rescheduled. It is too early to say what impact any subsequent exploitation activities may have on defence installations in Wales.

Services Review

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is yet in a position to give details of the full team which will conduct the independent review of service career and manpower structures and terms and conditions of service.

Mr. Hanley: Further to the answer that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Wimbledon (Dr. Goodson-Wickes) on 30 March, Official Report, columns 752-53, which announced the appointment of Mr. Michael Bett, a former deputy chairman of British Telecom plc, to lead the independent team conducting this review, my right hon. and learned Friend has decided to appoint the following as team members: Mr. Anthony Vineall, who has had a career as a senior personnel executive with Unilever plc; Mr. Michael Garner, who was recently a director of TI Group plc; and Admiral Sir John Kerr, who retires shortly from the Royal Navy.

TREASURY

Orimulsion

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if it is his policy under article 3(3) of directive 92/12/EEC to apply excise duty to orimulsion for electricity generation; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if it is his policy to levy excise duty on orimulsion for electricity generation at the same rate as heavy fuel oil;

(3) when he expects to lay regulations to apply excise duty to orimulsion.

Sir John Cope: Provision was made in the Finance Act 1993 to levy an excise duty on products falling within harmonised system heading 27.15. Following the recent decision of the harmonised systems committee of the Customs Co-operation Council, orimulsion no longer falls within this heading and no regulations will therefore be laid concerning it. We have no plans to use the provisions of article 3(3) of directive 92/12/EEC to impose excise duty on orimulsion.

Foreshore and Seabed Leases

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what directions he has given to the Crown Estate Commissioners under section 1(4) of the Crown Estate Act 1961 as to the charging of rents for the lease of foreshore and seabed.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 4 May 1994]: I have given no directions.

Taxpayers

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many taxpayers paid as a maximum each rate of tax, including those paying no tax at all, for each year since 1970; and what percentage of total taxpayers each number represents.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 20 April 1994]: Available information on income tax payers is given in the table. Estimates of taxpayers by marginal rate are not available for years prior to 1973-74.

TRANSPORT

"Establishment News ENT/2/94"

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will define the term "financial area of work" as used in section 7(IV) of his Department's "Establishment News ENT/2/94".

Mr. Norris: The Department's redundancy arrangements for non-industrial staff—set out in ENT/2/94—contain no such reference. Section 7(iv) refers to "the functional area of work".
This means an area of work identified by the particular function or type of work which is performed.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the compliance, in respect of the overall approach to redundancies and the principal of how to handle them, of "Establishment News" ENT/2/94 with section 188 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1993 as amended by section 32 (2)(b) of the Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: The Department's redundancy arrangements for non-industrial staff—set out in ENT/2/94—contain an assurance that, in handling redundancy situations the Department or its agencies will act in accordance with statutory requirements as embodied in employment and other legislation.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what reference to section 34(2)(b) of the Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993 appears in "Establishment News" ENT/2/94.

Mr. Norris: The Department's redundancy arrangements—set out in ENT/2/94—contain an assurance that, in handling redundancy situations the Department or its agencies will act in accordance with statutory requirements as embodied in employment and other legislation. Since this assurance is all-embracing, no reference to particular sections of specific Acts is necessary.

British Transport Property (Trespass)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many hunts have been prosecuted for trespassing on British Transport property since 1990.

Mr. Freeman: The BTP charged one person with trespass following an incident at Brent Knoll, Somerset on 9 November 1991 involving the Weston and Brean hunt. The case was heard at Bridgwater magistrates court on 11 May 1992 and the offender was given an absolute discharge.

A second prosecution for trespass near Oxford in November 1993 involved the Bicester with Whaddon

Chase hunt. Two charges of trespass were brought against a member of the hunt who was summoned to appear before Bicester magistrates on 24 January. The case was subsequently withdrawn by the Crown Prosecution Service in the public interest.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many parliamentary questions, in the period November 1992 to March 1993, were answered with the response that the information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost; and how many were referred on to an agency chief executive.

Mr. Norris: The number of questions answered between November 1992 and March 1993 with a disproportionate cost reply was 13.

The number of questions referred to an agency chief executive during the same period was two.

M11 Link

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many dwellings were demolished in the Wanstead area solely for the purpose of facilitating the construction of the M11 road link; how many dwellings were demolished for other purposes; with whose agreement and with whose authority demolition took place; what was the cost of rehousing those displaced and who funded that expenditure; in what locality those displaced were rehoused; and what other plans there are for the future use of the land now vacant consequent on demolition.

Mr. Norris: This question relates to operational matters of the Highways Agency. I have asked the agency's chief executive, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 4 May 1994:

As the question you tabled in the House about the demolition of dwellings in Wanstead for the A12 Hackney Wick to M11 Link Road relates to operational matters for the Highways Agency, I have been asked to reply to you direct.

The first of four main contracts for building the Link Road started in the Wanstead area last September. A total of 19 dwellings had to be demolished to make way for the construction. All were included in the made compulsory purchase Order for the scheme, together with other land and non-residential property needed in connection with the works. The only exception to this were areas of Epping Forest land, the acquisition of which was sanctioned by Act of Parliament. At the time of demolition, all the dwellings had been conveyed to the Secretary of State for Transport, many of them some considerable time ago under the provisions for planning blight. No dwellings in Wanstead have been demolished other than for the road; and no authority was needed for demolition beyond the statutory Orders for the new road.

For completeness, I should explain that up to 24 other dwellings in the Cambridge Park area of Wanstead had been demolished more than a decade ago: they had also been acquired under planning blight resulting from earlier proposals to widen this part of the A12.

Under the Land Compensation Act 1973, any responsibility for rehousing those displaced by compulsory purchase falls to the local housing authority. To date, no rehousing costs have been incurred by the Highways Agency, but the Act's provisions allow the relevant authority—for Wanstead, the London Borough of Redbridge—to make a claim in due course. Those rehoused were mostly tenants of either the Department, that Borough or a Housing Association. Some found alternative premises with the assistance of their landlords; others made their own arrangements. I am not privy to where they may have moved to.

You may wish to note that dwellings have also been demolished in the Leyton and Leytonstone areas either for works in advance of the further main contracts or in preparation for those contracts. In addition, two not strictly required for the works have had to come down for structural reasons. Other dwellings bought in connection with the road under planning blight or discretionary purchase provisions, but not needed for it, will ultimately be sold, as will any surplus non-residential property or marketable pockets of land.

Ship Registration

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with his European Union counterparts on the formation of a European Union ship register; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: The Commission first put forward proposals for an additional register for Community vessels in 1989. There have been various discussions between the Commission and member states since then and I understand that the Commission is now considering whether to make further formal proposals.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the minimum number of nationals in its crew required for a ship to be registered under the national flag in each of the appropriate member states of the European Union.

Mr. Norris: The information that we have about other member states indicates that they require the following minimum numbers of nationals for vessels on their register:

Belgium—Master
Denmark—Master. On vessels 9000 grt or more—Master, plus three ratings
France—Master plus one officer
Germany—Master
Greece—All officers and 60 per cent. of total complement
Republic of Ireland—All crew above deckhands must have Irish certificate of competency or recognised equivalent
Italy—EU nationals only
Luxembourg—Master should be EC national Netherlands—Master
Portuguese—All
Spain—Master and First Officer

The United Kingdom currently requires that the master, chief mate and chief engineer must be British, Irish or Commonwealth citizens.

Public Service Vehicles

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will meet the President of the Board of Trade to discuss the exclusion of the continuous operator licence proposal for public service vehicles and heavy goods vehicles from the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill.

Mr. Norris: No. Continuous licences for operators of goods and public service vehicles would remove unnecessary bureaucratic procedures from the licensing systems and should remain part of the Bill. The proposal was debated at length during the Standing Committee's consideration of the Bill and the House will have the opportunity for further discussion on this topic during the remainder of the Bill's passage.

School Transport

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve safety standards on buses and coaches used to transport children to school; if he will specify the regulations which govern the transport of children to school; what proposals he has to amend these regulations; what plans he has to introduce a capping disregard for additional current expenditure in 1994-95 in respect of the additional cost to a council of dropping the three for two rule on dedicated school transport contract vehicles and requiring the fitting of seat belts on all contract minibuses and school minibuses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: We are currently considering the full technical and cost implications of fitting seat belts to all seats in all minibuses and coaches. We hope to publish the conclusions shortly.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education has advised me that school transport is governed by section 55 of the Education Act 1944 and there are no plans to amend this legislation.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has determined his principles for capping for 1994-95. These principles do not include any disregard in respect of expenditure on school transport.

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many civil servants in his Department applied in each year since 1986, through the business appointments system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) with a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 3 May 1994]: Since 1986, the Department of Transport has received 220 separate applications from 202 civil servants under the business appointment rules system; 63 applications have been to seek work as independent consultants, 39 to join a firm of consultants, and 118 to undertake other types of work. On a year-by-year basis, the detail of the applications is as follows:

	Independent consultant	Consultancy firm	Other	Total applications	Total applicants
1986	3	0	18	21	21
1987	7	1	14	22	21
1988	6	4	14	24	24
1989	6	3	18	27	24
1990	7	6	17	30	29
1991	15	4	9	28	21
1992	6	14	10	30	25
1993	7	7	15	29	28
1994	6	0	3	9	9
Total	63	39	118	220	202

Three of the cases shown were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments, in 1986, 1990 and 1991.

All applications submitted have been approved.

Lowestoft Relief Road

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement clarifying the position on the Department's requirement of the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Howard, 4 Blackheath road, Lowestoft NR33 7JG, for the A12 relief road, Lowestoft; and what is their entitlement to compensation.

Mr. Key [holding answer 4 May 1994]: I have written to my hon. Friend in response to his letter of 26 April on behalf of his constituents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard of 4 Blackheath road, Lowestoft.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action the Government will adopt as a result of the report from the photo-chemical oxidants review group in relation to pollution control measures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tim Smith: The publication of the report of the photochemical oxidants review group was announced by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Environment and Countryside on 19 April 1994. In his announcement, my hon. Friend referred to the pollution control measures taken by the Government and indicated that he shortly expects to receive recommendations from the expert panel on air quality standards on a standard for ozone based on effects on human health. The Government will be considering the need for further reductions of ozone precursors in the light of these recommendations and discussion at European and international level.

Ozone is one of the pollutants monitored in Northern Ireland as part of the national urban air quality monitoring network. The results measured show that ozone levels in Northern Ireland are well within national and international standards and indeed, are among the lowest in the United Kingdom.

Training and Employment Agency

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what targets have been set for the Training and Employment Agency for Northern Ireland for the period 1944 to 1997.

Mr. Tim Smith: The following targets have been set:

1. To increase the number of companies developing their management and work force skills through the company development programme from 300 at April 1994 to 350 by March 1995 and to maintain this number until March 1997.

2. To assess companies on the company development programme—CDP—against the national standard "Investors in People" and to encourage commitment to the standard from the wider private sector with the aim of having 120 organisations—including 70 CDP companies—receiving recognition by March 1997.
3. To offer every company referred to the agency by the Industrial Development Board relevant information, advice and customised training.
4. To increase the proportion of youth training programme leavers who achieve a full qualification at national vocational qualification level 2 or above from 20 per cent. in 1993-94 to 45 per cent. in 1996-97.
5. To increase the proportion of job training programme leavers who achieve a full qualification at national vocational qualification level 2 or above from 17 per cent. in 1993-94 to 30 per cent. in 1996-97.
6. To provide an average of 9,200 temporary employment places with training through the action for community employment—ACE—programme with the aim of placing 36 per cent. of ACE leavers in jobs, training or futher education within three months of leaving.
7. To place 33,000 people into jobs in 1994-95.
8. To maintain the high levels of customer satisfaction and where possible, increase them.
9. To reduce administration costs by more than 3 per cent. in 1994-95.
10. To have the agency meet the national "Investors in People" standard for employers by September 1995.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Attendants

Mrs. Roche: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, how many attendants are currently employed in the House and its outbuildings; how many were employed in each of the last five years; what is the current ratio of attendants to other staff working in the House and its outbuildings, hon. Members, their staff and staff of the House; and what was the ratio for each of the last five years.

Mr. Beith: The numbers of attendants employed in the House and its outbuildings in the years requested are as follows:

	Number
1994	56
1993	56
1992	59
1991	[1]57
1990	[1]49
1989	[1]49

[1] These figures are the staff complement. Actual numbers employed may have varied slightly from these figures.

It is not possible to make an exact calculation of the ratio of attendants to other occupants of the parliamentary buildings because no record is kept to identify which Members' staff work at Westminster on a regular basis.

Cleaners

Mrs. Roche: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Paisley, South (Mr. McMaster) of 20 April, Official Report, column 521, for what reasons the number of House of Commons cleaners is being reduced.

Mr. Beith: I have asked the Serjeant at Arms to write to the hon. Lady. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Loans Guarantee Scheme

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the average processing time to approval of a guarantee under the small firms loans guarantee scheme; and how his Department finances the transaction costs in such approvals.

Mr. McLoughlin: There is no information available on the time taken to process an application while with a lender. Once received by the DTI loan guarantee section, the average time taken to process an application in 1993-94 was 1·9 days.

None of the lenders transaction costs are met by the DTI. The cost of the small team of DTI staff involved in processing applications is met from the Department's running costs.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many applications under the small firms loan guarantee scheme have been made in each financial year since 1990-91; how many have been approved; and what have been the sums guaranteed and the cost to his Department.

Mr. McLoughlin: The number of applications made, guaranteed, their value and the net cost to the DTI in each year since 1990-91 is shown in the table:

	Applications received by DTI	Applications guaranteed	Sum guaranteed (£ million)	Net cost (£ million)
1990-91	3,676	3,387	84·56	16·5
1991-92	3,124	2,933	69·48	27·5
1992-93	2,408	2,342	52·35	19·2

Application figures for 1993-94 will be available shortly and are expected to show a significant increase in applications guaranteed. Fewer applications are guaranteed than are received. Rejections represent only a quarter of this difference. The rest is due to withdrawal by the borrower.

Guinness plc

Mr. Maxton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he intends publishing the report drawn up by the inspectors from his Department into the affairs of Guinness plc following their appointment by his predecessor in December 1986.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The inspectors have not yet completed their inspection, which was recommenced after the conclusion of the Guinness criminal trials. When their report has been submitted, consideration will be given to its publication.

Cross-media Ownership

Ms Mowlam: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many of his staff are assigned to the current review of cross-media ownership; and what is the cost to his departmental budget of the cross-media ownership review.

Mr. McLoughlin: A number of staff combine work on the review of the cross media ownership with other duties. At present it forms the main duty of two full-time members of staff and occupies a significant part of the time of three others. The cost this year of the individuals most involved, allowing for time spent on other duties, is likely to be around £184,000.

Nuclear Power

Mr. William Ross: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of the total sums of public money invested in the nuclear power industry since 1963 in cash terms and at 1993 prices; and what percentage of the United Kingdom's electricity is now produced by nuclear energy.

Mr. Heseltine: The main public sector companies in the nuclear power industry are Nuclear Electric and Scottish Nuclear. An indication of past investment in these companies is provided by the gross value—before depreciation—of tangible fixed assets stated in their published accounts. At 31 March 1993, the historic cost value of these assets was about £10 billion and the current cost value was about £15 billion. In accordance with standard accounting conventions, asset values are stated at the lower of cost—replacement cost in the case of current cost accounts—or value to the business.

In 1993 about 26 per cent. of electricity available from the United Kingdom public supply system was produced by nuclear power stations in the United Kingdom.

Source: Energy Trends, Tables 18 and 19.

Nuclear Review

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Warley, West (Mr. Spellar) of 25 April, Official Report, column 7, if he will list the organisations or individuals that have made representations on the nuclear review; and what response he gave to these representations.

Mr. Heseltine: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

British Coal

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many miners are currently employed by British Coal.

Mr. Heseltine: The number of wage earners on British Coal's colliery books at the end of March 1994 was 10,400.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he will seek the advice of the panel on sustainable development, on the subject of the programme of work of the Trade and Environment Committee of the World Trade Organisation.

Mr. Heseltine: The members of the proposed World Trade Organisation have agreed that a work programme considering certain important trade and environment issues will be carried out by a committee of the WTO preparatory committee, and then almost certainly by a committee of the WTO itself. The Government will continue to take a close interest in this work.

Privatisation (Consultants)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will estimate the cost of employing consultants in connection with privatisation programmes in which his Department and the Department of Energy have been engaged since 1980.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 4 May 1994]: A reply would incur disproportionate cost in view of the number of privatisations since 1980.

Consumer Councils

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received from Lady Wilcox, chairperson of the National Consumer Council for Great Britain, in relation to the proposed re-appointment of Miss Beata Brookes as chairperson of the Welsh Consumer Council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The views of the chairman of the National Consumer Council were sought on the reappointment of Miss Brookes as chairman of the Welsh Consumer Council and these were taken into consideration.

Public Utilities

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of the post-tax profits of the (a) gas, (b) electricity and (c) water privatised utilities was paid out in dividends in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Derrell: I have been asked to reply.

The table shows the percentage of post-tax profits paid out in dividends by the privatised companies in the industries concerned. All the data are for financial years ending 31 March 1993 with the exception of British Gas plc, whose data are for the year ending 31 December 1993.

Privatised utilities' dividends

Industry	Proportion of post-tax profits paid in dividends Per cent.
Gas	[1]–117·2
Electricity (England and Wales)	33·6
Scottish Electricity companies	41·3
Water and Sewerage companies	32·2

[1] British Gas plc made a loss. Dividends paid from reserves.

ENVIRONMENT

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many parliamentary questions, in the period November 1992 to March 1993, were answered with the response that the information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost; and how many were referred on to an agency chief executive.

Mr. Gummer: The number of answers given to parliamentary questions between November 1992 and March 1993 recorded in the POLIS database as including a reference to part or all of the information being available only at disproportionate cost or because the information was not held, collected or recorded centrally was 41 out of a total of 2,264 questions answered during this period. During the same period, seven questions were referred to an agency chief executive for reply.

Housing Renovation Grants

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will change the rules to enable an applicant's mortgage to be taken into consideration when assessing an application for a housing renovation grant.

Sir George Young: We are currently reviewing the future of the private sector renewal programme following last year's consultation exercise and will announce the conclusions in due course.

Development Corporations

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of gross expenditure is to be spent on staff and administrative costs by (a) the Leeds development corporation and (b) the Central Manchester development corporation in 1994-95.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 27 April 1994, Official Report, column 206.

Beckenham Place

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department will determine the appeal on the planning application for the proposed development at Beckenham place, Beckenham, Kent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: A decision on the proposals will be made soon.

Housing Associations

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much was allocated to living over the shop schemes under the flats over shops funding programme in 1993-94, how much has been spent; and what was the average length of lease obtained by housing associations involved in such schemes.

Sir George Young: Ten million pounds was allocated to the flats over shops programme in 1993-94. Early indications are that 97 per cent. of this has been spent. However, we are unable to confirm this until the final claims for supplementary credit approvals—SCAs—have been received from local authorities. SCAs are issued retrospectively, following the receipt of a certified claim giving details of expenditure. Local authorities have six months following the end of the relevant financial year in which to submit claims. Data on the average length of lease obtained by housing associations in 1993-94 are not yet available. For the first year of the programme, 1992-93, an average lease length of 13 years was obtained.

Opencast Mining

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he has given in regard to the effect of opencast mining on greenfield sites, in regard to agricultural production and other matters, following the conclusion of such projects.

Mr. Baldry: My Department has provided advice on how the quality of existing agricultural land should be taken into account in determining opencast mining proposals on greenfield sites in Mineral Planning Guidance Note 3—"Opencast Coal Mining", and Mineral Planning Guidance Note 7—"The Reclamation of Mineral Workings".

MPG3 is being revised, a consultation draft was published in December and the comments are currently being considered. MPG7 also provides advice on mitigating any adverse effects of opencast working and of the standards to be achieved at the end of restoration and aftercare, following conclusion of working. The standards are defined either by the restoration of the pre-existing physical characteristics, or by "fitness for use", which determine agricultural production.

International Monetary Fund

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he was consulted by the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding trade and the environment before the Chancellor addressed the recent meeting of the interim committee of the International Monetary Fund.

Mr. Atkins: The Government have set out their views on trade and the environment in "Sustainable Development, the United Kingdom Strategy", published in January.

Local Authority Services

Mr. Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what action he has taken following the curtailing of local authorities' ability to charge for services as a result of the 1991 McCarthy and Stone judgment;

(2) what progress has been made since the publication in 1986 of the Green Paper, "Paying for Local Government", to give local authorities powers to charge for providing services to individuals or companies.

Mr. Baldry: Under section 150 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989, the Secretary of State may make regulations providing that local authorities may charge for activities not already covered by a specific charging power or duty, with the exception of functions listed in section 152.

Two new charging powers have been introduced under section 150—the Houses in Multiple Occupation (Charges for Registration Schemes) Regulations 1991 and the Local Authorities (Recovery of Costs for Public Path Orders) Regulations 1993. My right hon. Friend intends to make further regulations soon which would enable authorities to charge for dealing with supplementary land search inquiries in respect of proposed property transactions. We will consult the local authority associations shortly on a number of other proposals for regulations under section 150.

Special Grants

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what expenditure is planned for 1994-95 under the special grants programme.

Mr. Baldry: In the current financial year—1994-95—the full allocation of £1·262 million is planned to be expended on the special grants programme.

Urban Regeneration

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all those community-led urban regeneration schemes assisted or funded from these programmes in the years 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94; and if he will make available in the Library a copy of the bidding guidance notes.

Mr. Baldry: The information sought cannot be produced in the form specified. In previous years a number of Government Departments, in addition to the Department of the Environment, have contributed to community-led urban regeneration through different programmes. From 1 April 20 of these programmes have been included in the single regeneration budget. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Congleton (Mrs. Winterton) on 13 April 1994, Official Report, column 174.

Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what performance targets he has set the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre executive agency for 1994-95.

Sir George Young: The agency's key target for 1994-95 is to reduce its net operating deficit—exclusive of rent[1]—from an expected £0·711 million in 1993-94 to £0·382.

The agency will also aim to increase total revenue from the centre's activities from an expected £5·129 million in 1993-94 to £5·616 million; to increase the number of calendar days with events at the centre from an expected 285 days or 78 per cent. in 1993-94 to 299 days or 82 per cent.[2]; and to improve its revenue to cost ratio from an expected 1:1·14 in 1993-94 to 1:1·07.

[1]An annual rent of £6·4 million was charged for the agency's occupation of the centre with effect from 1993-94.

[2]This target is based on an industry standard agreed by the International Congress and Convention Association. It compares with increasing overall occupancy for the main letting areas from an expected 41 per cent. in 1993-94 to 45 per cent. based on a previous measure which was unique to the centre.

Council Tax

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the maximum council tax chargeable by Liverpool city council; and what provisions exist for raising it.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 3 May 1994]: Council taxes must be calculated and set in accordance with the provisions of the Local Government Finance Act 1992 and the relevant secondary legislation. Central Government have no direct control over the rate of council tax charged by an authority: capping constrains an authority's revenue budget rather than council taxes per se.

Urban Policies

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list every urban policy that has been instituted or operated from 1979, the date that each scheme began operating, where appropriate when they ceased operating and the funds available on an annual basis at current prices.

Mr. Baldry: Economic, social and physical regeneration is supported through main programmes by several Government Departments and by targeted initiatives. My reply to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 25 April, Official Report, columns 36-37, contained detailed information about the latter programmes, including spending from 1981-82. For the urban programme, which began in 1979, the additional figures sought are £83 million for 1979-80 and £112 milion for 1980-81 in cash terms. All the programmes listed in the earlier reply have now been combined within the single regeneration budget from 1 April 1994.

While not included in the earlier reply, enterprise zones, also a targeted urban initiative were launched in 1981. They offer a range of incentives to industrial and commercial firms in designated areas. These have not involved any direct expenditure, but an estimated £1·7 billion has been forgone in rates and taxes.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Cross-media Ownership

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many of his staff are assigned to the current review of cross-media ownership; and what is the cost to his departmental budget of the cross-media ownership review.

Mr. Brooke: Four staff are assigned full-time to the review, at a cost of £131,000. There is a budget of some £48,000 for the running costs of the review.

Millennium Commission

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the estimated cost for 1994-95 of the Millennium Commission; and how much will be spent on (a) salaries and expenses of staff and commissioners, (b) publicity and (c) administration.

Mr. Brooke: The total estimated administration cost of the Millennium Commission for 1994-95 is £1,000,000, of which:

(a) Salary and staff costs are expected to be £285,000; and
(b) Publicity costs are expected to be £45,000.

Television Crime Reconstructions

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what further research his Department is planning into links between television programmes featuring crime reconstructions which are made purely for entertainment and women's fear of crime.

Mr. Brooke: I would look to the broadcasting regulatory bodies to commission any further research they considered necessary. The Broadcasting Standards Council, which is funded by my Department, has commissioned work in this area in the past.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to monitor television programmes featuring crime reconstructions which are not made in order to apprehend criminals and to discuss these programmes and their effect on women's fear of crime with television companies.

Mr. Brooke: Monitoring television programmes is the responsibility of the broadcasting regulatory authorities. I am meeting the chairmen of those bodies shortly to discuss concern about the portrayal of violence on television.

Executive Agencies

Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what targets he has set for the executive agencies in his Department.

Mr. Brooke: The following targets have been set for 1994-95:

For the Historic Royal Palaces Agency:

Financial Targets:

Commercial surplus	£6 million
Call on the taxpayer	£8·9 million

Efficiency Target:

Savings on running costs	2 per cent.

Conservation Target:

To complete the fire prevention works planned for 1994-95 and the programme of works identified by the building condition surveys as being a priority for 1994-95; to undertake further detailed inspections of the specific areas identified by the surveys as being a priority for 1995-96.

Visitor Satisfaction Measures[1]:

Value for money	0·7 to 1·0
Enjoyment	above 1·35
Helpful and friendly staff	above 1·35

[1] Visitor ratings are assessed from market research interviews with 900 visitors, undertaken by independent consultants each summer. 2·0 is Extremely Good; 1·5 is Very Good; 1·0 is Quite Good; 0 is OK; −1·0 is Quite Poor; −2·0 is Very Poor.

For the Royal Parks Agency:

Fabric:

(i) Prepare contract documents for the four grounds maintenance contracts which expire in March 1995, incorporating lessons from existing contracts. Let new contracts or extend existing ones.

(ii) Draw up and commence priority programme of works required to remove the six listed structures which are on the 'at risk' register.

(iii) Prepare detailed proposals for and consult all relevant parties about the pedestrianisation of the end of the Mall, with a view to commencing the project (if approved) in 1994-95.

(iv) Complete phase II of the Speakers Corner/Marble Arch competition (ie develop detailed designs from the six prize-winning sketch designs from phase I).

Financial:

(i) Increase income from £1·3 million to £1·8 million from sales, permits, fees, rents, licences, concessions and car-parking.

(ii) Achieve 1·5 per cent. improvement in running costs efficiency.

Park Users:

(i) Assess initial visitor survey results and achieve an overall quality rating of six marks out of 10 in response to the survey question "Overall, how would you rate the quality of this park?"

EDUCATION

Pupil Statistics

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many pupils in primary schools, though not in designated nursery classes in January 1993, were born between 1 September 1986 and 31 August 1987, in each local education authority.

Mr. Robin Squire: The number of pupils aged five at the beginning of the school year 1992-93 being taught in infant classes in maintained primary schools in each local education authority area in England is shown in the table.

Pupils aged 5 at 31 August 1992 in infant classes in maintained primary schools in each Local Education Authority in England. Position as at January 1993

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many full-time equivalent pupils in non-designated nursery classes at the latest available date were born between (a) 1 September 1987 and 31 December 1987, (b) 1 January 1988 and 31 March 1988 and (c) 1 April 1988 and 31 August 1988.

Mr. Robin Squire: The number of full-time equivalent pupils aged four at the beginning of the school year 1992-93 being taught in infant classes in maintained primary schools in England in January 1993 is shown in the table.

Pupils aged 4 on 31 August 1992 in infant classes in maintained primary schools in England January 1993

Date of Birth	FTE Pupils[1]
1 September 1987—31 December 1987	200,782
1 January 1988—31 March 1988	146,100
1 April 1988—31 August 1988	155,592

[1] Part-time pupils count as 0·5.

School Governors

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what information is available to his Department regarding the numbers of men and women governors of grant-maintained schools, by type of school and by category of governor; and how such information is collected.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department has no information on the numbers of men and women governors of grant-maintained schools.

Early Retirement

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the information he has available on expenditure in each local education authority on early retirement compensation in 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Robin Squire: Information on expenditure by each local education authority on early retirement compensation for the years 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93, is given in the following table.

Note:

1. Figures are derived from local education authorities' returns of their spending to the Department of the Environment.
2. The figures for 1992-93 include estimates of expenditure for LEAs marked "*". The 1992-93 figures are subject to final checking by the Department of Environment and the Department for Education.
3. The quality of information recorded on returns from LEAs is partly dependant on the accounting practices adopted. These can differ considerably.

English Language Courses

Mr. Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many complaints he has received in the last 12 months about unfair competition between private and state-funded colleges that both teach English language courses to overseas students, but where the latter are in receipt of subsidies provided by the Further Education Funding Council in order to do so; and what information he has with regard to consequential job losses in the private sector resulting from this practice.

Mr. Boswell: The Department has received six letters in the last 12 months on concerns about the sources of funding for English as a foreign language—EFL—courses in private and state-funded colleges. The Department holds no information on the number of staff employed in the delivery of EFL in the private sector.

PRIME MINISTER

Convention on Human Rights

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to incorporate the European convention on human rights into British law.

The Prime Minister: None.

Mobile Telephones and Pagers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister how many (a) portable telephones, (b) pagers and electronic bleepers and (c) car telephones are currently used by his Department; what are the annual costs of operating this equipment; and to which personnel it is made available.

The Prime Minister: There are 14 portable telephones, 19 pagers and four car telephones currently in use in No. 10 Downing street. The annual cost of operating the equipment is approximately £12,800.

The equipment is made available to those personnel who need to keep in contact with the office for purposes of official duty.

Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had with the Prime Minister of Turkey on the present United Nations-sponsored talks on Cyprus; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I discussed the United Nations-sponsored package of confidence-building measures with Mrs. Ciller in the margins of the NATO summit on 10 January. I sent her a message on 6 April urging her to encourage Mr. Denktash to adopt a more constructive approach to the negotiations on the package. The United Nations Secretary-General will shortly submit a report on the talks to the United Nations Security Council.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 5 May.

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 5 May.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when Mr. Croft, Ref. 353 IJOH1002188491, of Stockton-on-Tees will be officially notified by the Child Support Agency that his initial assessment has been withdrawn.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Tim Devlin, dated 5 May 1994:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the interim child maintenance assessment made in respect of Mr. Stephen Croft by the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Croft was originally advised that an interim maintenance assessment would be made because insufficient information had been supplied to permit a full assessment. Following a telephone call to the Agency, a two week extension was agreed. Unfortunately at the expiry of the extension, the interim assessment was made despite the fact that the relevant information had been received in the meantime. When this error came to light, immediate action was taken to cancel the interim assessment, and Mr. Croft was notified of this on 29 April 1994.

I hope you will convey to Mr. Croft my sincere apologies for any anxiety or distress which the actions of the Agency may have caused. I hope you will also accept my assurance that I shall be keeping a close watch on the developments in this case.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what benefit savings the Child Support Agency achieved in 1993-94.

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for the Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) on 3 May at columns 423-24.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the first year of operation of the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Burt: It is too early to make a full assessment of the first year of operation of the Child Support Agency. This will be done when the annual report is available later this year. Meanwhile I meet regularly with the Child Support Agency chief executive and look carefully at all the representations that have been made, and we keep the Child Support Agency under constant review.

Pensions

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many and what percentage of those people retiring in the last year for which figures are available had a total pension income amounting to (a) 100 per cent. or more, (b) between 90 per cent. and 99 per cent., (c) between 80 per cent. and 89 per cent., (d) between 70 per cent. and 79 per cent., (e) between 60 per cent. and 69 per cent., (f) between 50 per cent. and 59 per cent., (g) between 40 per cent. and 49 per cent., (h) between 30 per cent. and 39 per cent., (i) between 20 per cent. and 29 per cent. and (j) 10 per cent. or less, of (i) their final salary and (ii) average earnings.

Mr. Hague: Information on pension income as a proportion of final salary is not available. Information on pension income in relation to average earnings is not available in precisely the form requested. Estimates, which relate to female pensioners aged 60 to 64 and to male pensioners aged 65 to 69, are in the tables.

Pension income of male pensioners aged 65 to 69 compared to average earnings

	Number (000's)	Percentage of male pensioners 65 to 69
0-10 per cent.	[1]121	10
11-19 per cent.	308	25
20-29 per cent.	376	30
30-39 per cent.	[1]140	11
40-59 per cent.	[1]154	12
60 per cent. and over	139	11

Pension income of female pensioners aged 60 to 64 compared to average earnings

	Number (000's)	Percentage of female pensioners 60 to 64
0-10 per cent.	440	[2]31
11-19 per cent.	417	29
20-29 per cent.	271	19
30-39 per cent.	127	9
40 per cent. and over	177	12

[1] Denotes unreliably small sample size.

[2] This group includes married women whose husbands are aged less than 65 and who have no entitlement to a pension on their own National Insurance record.

Notes:

1. All figures are estimates and should be treated as such.
2. Figures are mean averages; they relate to individuals, not to pensioner units or households.
3. Estimates derive from the Family Expenditure Survey for the combined years 1990-91 and the Government Actuary's Department's Survey of Occupational Pension 1991.
4. Percentages may not sum due to rounding.

Operational Strategy

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much has been spent on consultants for operational strategy in each of the last five years.

Mr. Scott: The cost of consultancy services for the operational strategy over the five years ending 1992-93 was £191 million. Figures for 1993-94 are not yet available. Individual years' figures are in the table.

	£ million
1988-89	40·6
1989-90	31·2
1990-91	49·6
1991-92	37·5
1992-93	32·1

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current estimated total cost of operational strategy to 1998, in real terms; by how much this figure exceeds the initial estimated cost; and what percentage of the estimated cost is the cost of outside consultants.

Mr. Scott: The most recent—1993—estimated total cost in real terms of the operational strategy to 1998-99 is £2·6 billion, which includes an estimated £315 million—11·9 per cent.—for consultancy services.

The total cost of the operational strategy was originally —1982—estimated at £713 million. The current estimated cost exceeds the initial estimate by £1·9 billion. The original specification did not embrace the substantial cost of subsequent changes in social security legislation, notably the 1988 social security reforms. Estimates of total savings over the period of the operational strategy have also been revised from an initial estimate of some £1·9 billion—1982—to £3·3 billion—1993.

Security

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the use of private detective agencies and security companies by his Department.

Mr. Scott: This Department and its executive agencies use private companies to carry out a range of activities. This is done as part of our continuing search for better value for money. The companies we use include a private firm to serve documents in connection with the collection of arrears of national insurance contributions and private security companies for the guarding of some of our sites countrywide.

Personnel Costs

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of Information Technology Services Agency's total personnel costs for software development has been spent on outside consultants in each of the last five years.

Mr. Scott: The costs for software development and continuing support for 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94 are in the table. This work is done using a mixture of civil servants and external contractors some of whom are supplied by consultancy firms. The information for 1989-90 and 1990-91 is not readily available.

£'000	1991-92	1992-93	1993-94
Total personnel costs for software development (millions)	58·7	73·1	69·7
Cost of consultants/contractors (millions)	38·5	45·5	43·4
Consultancy/contractors as a percentage of the total	65·6	62·2	62·3

Lone Parents

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost to the Exchequer of allowing single parents on income support to retain (a) £5, (b) £10 and (c) £15 of any maintenance payments.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost to his Department in the form of reduced estimated savings of the introduction of a maintenance disregard of £15 for lone parents with care who are in receipt of income support.

Mr. Burt: It is estimated that the cost of £5, £10 and £15 child support maintenance disregards in income support would be approximately £145 million, £290 million and £435 million in the long run.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Council of Ministers

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Stafford (Mr. Cash) of 26 April, Official Report, column 123, what is the scope of the safeguards to which he refers in regard to the disclosure of information by the Council of Ministers.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The code of conduct on access to information sets out a number of grounds on which access to documents can be refused. Copies of the code were placed in the Library of the House on 14 January.

Mr. Van den Broek

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 26 April, Official Report, column 125, relating to Mr. Van den Broek, if he will give reasons for his answer.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The suggestion of my hon. Friend the Member for Northampton, North was neither practical nor necessary.

Libya

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contacts his Department has with the Red Cross or the Red Crescent concerning the blockade on Libya and its effect on medical supplies.

Mr. Goodlad: We have had no contacts with the Red Cross or the Red Crescent concerning the blockade on Libya and its effect on medical supplies.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from UNICEF concerning the sanctions on Libya and their effect on children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has received no representations from UNICEF concerning the sanctions on Libya and their effects on children.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the United Nations Security Council has received from (a) UNICEF and (b) UNESCO concerning the effects of the United Nations sanctions on Libya.

Mr. Goodlad: We are aware of no representations which the Security Council has received from UNICEF or UNESCO concerning the effects of United Nations sanctions on Libya.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from UNESCO concerning the effect of sanctions on Libya; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has received no representations from UNESCO concerning the effect of sanctions on Libya.

Rwanda

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the withdrawal of United Nations Assistance Mission in Rwanda forces from Rwanda is planned to be a temporary measure; and if he will encourage the United Nations to draw up plans for a strengthened force and mandate to return at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Goodlad: Security Council resolution 912 reduced the authorised size of UNAMIR, but stressed the Security Council's readiness to consider any recommendations which the Security General might make concerning the future force level and mandate of UNAMIR in light of developments.

We support the United Nations' efforts to promote a ceasefire and to encourage the parties to resume the peace process.

EU Common Foreign and Security Policy

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the items on the agenda at the EU common foreign and security policy working group meeting on 7 April.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The subject of anti-personnel landmines was one of a number of subjects discussed at the working group meeting on 7 April. However, the agendas of the meetings of this group are not published.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library copies of statements made by, or on behalf of, Her Majesty's Government at the EU common foreign and security policy working group meeting on 7 April.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Copies of all agreed European Union common foreign and security policy statements are placed in the Libraries of both Houses. No such statements issued from this meeting.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which state raised the subject of anti-personnel mines at the EU common foreign and security policy working group meeting on 7 April; what proposals were made; and what was the response of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The presidency is responsible for preparing the agenda of these meetings. However, the issue of landmines is currently of common interest to all European Union member states.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the next meeting of the EU common foreign and security policy working group is scheduled.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The date has not yet been arranged.

European Commission

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 26 April, Official Report, column 125, on the powers of the European Commission, in what way he wishes the Commission to become more accountable.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Powers exist to hold the European Commission to account, notably under articles 140, 143, 144 and 158 of the treaty of Rome. It is right that the Commission should be fully accountable for its actions and these treaty provisions need to be rigorously applied.

SCOTLAND

Security

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the use of private detective agencies and security companies by his Department.

Mr. Lang: My Department has made limited use of private detective agencies when attempting to locate individuals or companies who have defaulted on the terms and conditions of regional assistance grants. In addition, private sector companies are contracted to provide security guarding services for various Scottish Office buildings and properties.

Prisons (Suicides)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the self-inflicted deaths that have occurred in Scottish prison establishments over the past 10 years, giving details of the name, age, status, offence and inquest verdict of each of the deceased and the names of the prisons in which the deaths occurred.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Scottish Prison Service under its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. Tony Worthington, dated 5 May 1994:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about self-inflicted deaths in Scottish penal establishments over the past 10 years, including details of the prisoners' name, age, status and offence and the outcome of the Fatal Accident Inquiry into each death.

The information requested is provided, save for the details of the prisoners' offence (or alleged offence): this information is not meanwhile available and I shall write to you again as soon as our researches are complete.

Rent Registration Service

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in how many cases the rent review service was involved in the (a) private and (b) public sector as a result of an application for housing benefit in each of the last three years; and what are his comparable projections for the three years next.

Mr. Lang: The rent registration service makes determinations on rent levels at the request of local housing authorities, which have responsibility for administering the housing benefit scheme on behalf of the Department of Social Security. The number of such determinations, which relate to the private sector only, including housing associations, made for housing benefit purposes in each of the last three years is as follows:

	Number
1991	39,670
1992	45,690
1993	50,251

Projections for future years are not available.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many staff are employed by the rent review service in Scotland;

(2) what is the present cost of running the rent review service in Scotland in each of the last five years in constant terms;

(3) how many qualified surveyors or staff with a comparable technical qualification were employed by the rent review service in Scotland at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Lang: The rent registration service in Scotland currently employes 51 staff of whom 24 undertake rent officer duties and 27 are support staff. None are qualified surveyors or staff with a comparable technical qualification.

The costs, including accommodation and other overheads, of running the service in each of the last five years at constant 1993-94 prices, are as follows:

	£ million
1989-90	2·096
1990-91	1·946
1991-92	1·987
1992-93	1·695
1993-94[1]	1·728

[1] Provisional outturn.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Talacre Beach, Clwyd

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to be able to agree the draft byelaws relating to Talacre beach, Clwyd, forwarded by Delyn borough council.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Home Office officials wrote to the Council on 2 February commenting on the latest draft of the byelaws. We expect to give provisional approval to the byelaws once the few remaining issues have been resolved.

Prison Staff Disputes

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many working days have been lost to the prison service in each of the last five years because of strike action taken by prison officers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 5 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about strike action taken by prison officers.

No working days were lost as a result of strike action by prison officers during the last five years.

Just before this period, there was a ten day strike by prison officers at Wandsworth from 29 January to 8 February 1989, over the introduction of new shift systems. The figure for working days lost cannot be identified but the majority of prison officers (from a total of over 300 at the establishment at the time) were involved. The prison was managed by governor grades from Wandsworth and other Prison Service establishments, other managers, police officers and prison officers who refused to take industrial action.

The other serious dispute in recent years which resulted in strike action was at Holloway in July-September 1988, over staffing levels. The dispute ran for six weeks and over 7,000 working days were lost. The prison was run by governor grades and other staff who refused to strike.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many formally registered disputes there were in each of the last five years between the Prison Officers Association and the Prison Department; and how many of those disputes were resolved without recourse by the trade union side to industrial action.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 5 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about formally registered disputes with the POA in each of the last five years, and how many were resolved without recourse to industrial action.

The number of disputes or failures to agree declared under the Cubbon formula arrangements, the Disputes Procedure which replaced the formula in October 1989, and the Industrial Relations Procedural Agreement, which was introduced in July 1993, are as follows:

In 1989/90, 61 disputes were declared at 46 establishments; 30 disputes were resolved in that year.

In 1990/91, 119 disputes were declared at 77 establishments; 91 disputes were resolved in that year.

In 1991/92, 130 disputes were declared at 61 establishments; 134 disputes were resolved in that year.

In 1992/93, 38 disputes were declared at 34 establishments; 76 were resolved in that year.

In 1993/94, 139 disputes (or failures to agree from 1 July 1993) were declared at 67 establishments; 88 disputes/failures to agree were resolved in that year.

The vast majority of disputes were resolved without recourse to industrial action, the aim of the procedure being to provide a mechanism to resolve disagreements through discussion as quickly as possible at the lowest appropriate level. No strike action has been taken during the last five years (the last strikes by prison officers were at Holloway in 1988 and Wandsworth in early 1989). Where industrial action took place it varied in nature from, for example, a refusal to supply payphone cards to inmates, to action restricting prisoner intake and leading to locking out in police cells.

In 1989/90 there were some episodes of less severe action, including at Canterbury, Lindholme and Wymott.

In 1990-91 industrial action took place at 12 establishments arising from local disputes and in some cases this resulted in prisoners being accommodated in police cells. Industrial action also took place at ten establishments arising from the April 1990 prison disturbances, where POA branches would not accept prisoners from outside their catchment areas.

In 1991/92 industrial action took place at 11 establishments in connection with the disputes. Action at Winchester carried over into the following year and ended in June 1992. There has been no subsequent industrial action associated with disputes or failures to agree at individual establishments. There was national action, amounting to a work to rule, from 5 November 1993, until the Home Secretary obtained an interlocutory injunction on 18 November, restraining the POA from pursuing further planned industrial action, namely 'locking out' prisoners.

The threatened action would have put 1,700 prisoners in police cells in a matter of 72 hours. The disruption to the prison system, the police, the courts, prisoners, their families and legal advisers would have been very considerable, and would have filled up almost all the available police cell capacity in an unmanageably brief period. The cost to the taxpayer would have been nearly one million pounds over those three days.

Prison Disturbances

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will detail the prison disturbances which have taken place over the last 10 years to include (a) the nature of the damage, (b) the number of staff and prisoners injured and (c) the overall cost of the disturbance.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 5 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about prison disturbances over the past ten years.

Any action by two or more prisoners against the smooth running of a prison may be classed as a disturbance. Such disturbances may be either passive such as sitting down and refusing to leave the exercise yard, or active such as damaging the fabric of the prison and fighting staff.

The table below shows the number of disturbances since 1984.

Year	Number
[1]1984-85	38
1985-86	38
1986-87	45
1987-88	42
1988-89	67
1989-90	67
1990-91	105
1992-93	142
1993-94	147

[1] For this year only the figures are for a 15 month period.

I will write to you again about the more serious disturbances once this information is available.

Camp Hill

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by how much he intends to cut staffing levels at Camp hill; and for what reason.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 5 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about staffing levels at Camp Hill prison.

There are no plans to reduce overall staffing levels at Camp Hill but the governor is considering replacing some prison officers posts with prison auxiliaries.

Deportations (Private Security Firms)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce independent monitoring of complaints about private security firms used in deportations.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to her earlier question on this subject on 9 February 1994 at column 264.

Police Redundancy

Mr. Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce measures to require Metropolitan police officers with over 30 years' service, and who have previously refused to accept voluntary redundancy, to be made compulsorily redundant.

Mr. Charles Wardle: None at present.

Campsfield House

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans there are for Judge Stephen Tumim to inspect Campsfield house and to report to him.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend will be inviting Judge Tumim to inspect Campsfield house in due course as part of his future programme of inspections.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Departmental Publications

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster for how many regular publications he was responsible in 1993-94; what was their circulation; and how many were obtainable by subscription.

Mr. David Davis: During the financial year 1993-94 the Cabinet Office, including the Office of Public Service and Science and its executive agencies, together with the Central Office of Information and HMSO, produced 17 annual and 16 other regular publications.

I will write to my hon. Friend with details of the titles and print-runs of each publication. None of these publications is available by subscription.

Civil Service Year Book

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what procedures are followed for the authorisation of the front cover design of the "Civil Service Year Book".

Mr. David Davis: Since 1922 the front cover designs of the "Civil Service Year Book" have been approved within the Cabinet Office.

HEALTH

Junior Doctors

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many junior doctors applied for general practitioner training courses in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally.

Family Planning Clinics

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women were seen at district health authority and trust family planning clinics in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Sackville: The numbers of women seen in England were as follows:

	Thousands
1983	1,448
1984	1,487
1985	1,454
1986	1,406
1987-88	1,319
1988-89	1,115
[1]1989-90	1,116
[1]1990-91	1,060
1991-92	1,046
1992-93	1,030

[1] Figures are estimates based on those districts providing data and relate to the number of first contacts.

Women can choose the source of their family planning advice and treatment. Guidance from the Department stresses the need for the balance of clinic and general practitioner provision to match identified local need; 98 per cent. of GPs provide contraceptive services and more than two thirds of women seeking family planning advice now see their own or another GP.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to change prescription charges exemption arrangements.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: None. The existing exemption arrangements for retirement pensioners, which are the most generous in Europe, were challenged in the High Court on 26 April 1994. The court has referred the matter to the European Court of Justice and we must await the conclusion of the judicial process. It remains the policy of this Government not to impose prescription charges on state pensioners.

Nurses and Midwives

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give details of the distribution of average gross weekly earnings per person for each of the national health service clinical nursing and midwifery grades, listing the percentage of each grade earning (a) under £140, (b) £150, (c) £160, (d) £170, (e) £180, (f) £190, (g) £200, (h) £210, (i) £220, (j) £230, (k) £240, (l) £250, (m) £275, (n) £300 and (o) those earning £300 and over in each year since 1989.

Mr. Sackville: This information will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give details of the average gross weekly earnings and make-up of pay by type or allowance for each of the clincial grades for nursing and midwifery staff in each year since 1989.

Mr. Sackville: The information will be placed in the Library. We have used full-time staff data.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions her Department has had with representatives of the pharmaceutical industry about research into new drugs for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease.

Dr. Mawhinney: As part of the day to day operations of the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme, manufacturers have kept officials in touch with progress on development and licensing of new drugs, including those for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease.

Dentists, South Yorkshire

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in practice in South Yorkshire take (a) NHS patients and (b) private patients only, but took NHS patients until 1990.

Dr. Mawhinney: At September 1993 the number of dentists providing national health service general dental services in South Yorkshire, which includes the family health services authorities of Barnsley, Doncaster, Rotherham and Sheffield, was 481. The comparable number at 30 September 1990 was 444. Dentists are independent contractors who make their own decisions whether to accept patients under national health service arrangements.

Consultancies

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by general practitioner fundholders on consultancies in the latest year for which figures are available.

Dr. Mawhinney: Such information is not available.

NHS, London

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many inquiries her Department has received about the NHS in London in each of the last 12 months.

Dr. Mawhinney: It is not possible to identify all inquiries about the national health service in London.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many former Conservative Members and agents have been appointed as chairpersons or members of the boards of National Health Service trusts; and if she will name them.

Dr. Mawhinney: Those former Conservative Members currently serving on the boards of national health service trusts are listed:

Chairmen
Lord Hayhoe	Guy's and St. Thomas' NHS Trust
Lord Jenkin of Roding	Forest Healthcare NHS Trust
Mr. J. Lee	Christie Hospital NHS Trust
Sir Timothy Raison	Aylesbury Vale Community Healthcare NHS Trust
Mr. A. R. Favell	Tameside and Glossop Acute Services NHS Trust
Non-executive directors
Sir Robert McCrindle	Havering Hospital NHS Trust
Sir David Price	Southampton University Hospital NHS Trust
Mrs. M. Hicks	South Warwickshire Mental Health Services NHS Trust

Information on people who may be political agents is not available centrally.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 16 December, Official Report, columns 814-15, whether she has given permission to more units to apply for national health service trust status.

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health has given permission for a further four applications for national health service trust status. This will bring the total number of directly managed units applying for NHS trust status in the fifth wave to 12. Two further applications for mergers of existing trusts will also be subject to public consultation. An amended list which updates information which my right hon. Friend gave the hon. Member for Windsor and Maidenhead (Mr. Trend) on 16 December 1993 at columns 814-15 has been placed in the Library.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the annual total cost of (a) remuneration and (b) expenses of members of the boards of NHS trusts.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under what powers an NHS trust may make a payment to the NHS Trusts Federation by way of affiliation.

Dr. Mawhinney: A national health service trust may subscribe to the NHS Trust Federation under the powers in paragraph 16 of schedule 2 to the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the cost to NHS trusts of relaunching their corporate identities on becoming trusts.

Dr. Mawhinney: No such estimate can be made from the information collected centrally.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many first, second and third wave trusts failed to meet the targets of (a) earning a real return on capital of at least 6 per cent. and (b) remaining within external financial limits in 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table. The majority of trusts had technical issues which affected their ability to meet their financial duties. This does not imply any failure in financial control. In a number of cases, the difference between actual financial performance and statutory target is deemed to be immaterial.

	1991-92	1992-93
First wave trusts
Failed to meet target of earning a real return on capital of at least 6 per cent.	10	24
Failed to meet target of remaining within external financial limits	8	12
Second wave trusts
Failed to meet target of earning a real return on capital of at least 6 per cent.	n/a	27
Failed to meet target of remaining written external financial limits	n/a	17
Third wave trusts
None operational in the years asked	n/a	n/a

NHS Joint Ventures

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many joint ventures were entered into between the private sector and NHS bodies in each of the last five years;

what was the cost or income to the NHS from these ventures; and what measures are taken by her Department to monitor such ventures.

Mr. Sackville: Information in the form requested is not available centrally. I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) on 14 April at column 293 and on 3 May at columns 456-58, and the reply I gave the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms Harman) on 2 November 1993 at columns 171-72 for the available information on private finance schemes.

The Department does not monitor private schemes centrally. However, we conducted a special exercise earlier this year to assess the progress of the private finance initiative and it is our intention to repeat this at some future date.

NHS Contracts

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimates her Department has made of the annual cost of negotiating and managing NHS contracts.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

GP Fundholders

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost of allowances for computer equipment for (a) non-fundholding general practitioners and (b) fundholding general practitioners for 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. Sackville: The provisional total reimbursement to all general practitioners for computer equipment in 1992-93 and 1993-94 was £40·2 million and £36·5 million respectively. The apportionment of these costs between fundholders and other GPs is not available centrally.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current estimate of the additional audit cost incurred as a result of the introduction of general practitioner fundholding.

Dr. Mawhinney: General practitioner fundholders fundholding accounts are independently audited each year by the Audit Commission. The total estimated costs in the 1993-94 audit year are about £1·3 million. This is under 0·1 per cent. of budgets set.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost of management allowances made to general practitioner practices which became fundholders on 1 April.

Dr. Mawhinney: Management allowances are reimbursements against expenditure. Therefore, information for the 1993-94 financial year will not be available until after the year end.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total of budget underspends retained by fundholders in each region and district in 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Dr. Mawhinney: Audited underspends are held by family health services authorities on behalf of general practitioner fundholders for up to four years for reinvestment in patient care. Final audited figures for 1992-93 and 1993-94 are not yet available.

EMPLOYMENT

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 24 March, Official Report, column 368, by what date he intends to place each market research report in the Library.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Market research on a number of Employment Department campaigns has been conducted. The results will be available later in May. I will send a copy to the hon. Member at that time.

Health and Safety

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many prosecutions have been brought by the Health and Safety Executive against (a) regions of the National Rivers Authority, (b) regional water companies, (c) regional electricity companies and (d) "next steps" agencies in each of the last five years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information available is as follows:

(a) Regions of the National Rivers Authority (NRA).

No informations were laid during the financial years 1989-90 to 1992-93—provisional.

(b) Regional Water Companies.

One information was laid in England and Wales during the five years 1988-89 to 1992-93—provisional. The regional water councils control the industry in Scotland.

(c) Regional Electricity Companies.

The number of informations laid in England and Wales is set out in the following table:

Year of hearing	Information laid
1988-89	1
1989-90	2
1990-91	1
1991-92	—
[1]1992-93	9

[1] Provisional.

The information available for Scotland is as follows:

Year of hearing	Information laid
1988-89	—
1989-90	1
1990-91	—
1991-92	—
[1]1992-93	—

[1] Provisional.

The figures for England and Wales relate only to electricity distribution; the Scottish figures concern power generation as well.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many prosecutions have been brought by the Health and Safety Executive against (a) county councils and (b) district councils in England in each of the past five years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information available for local authorities in England is provided in the following table:

Year of hearing	Informations laid
1988-89	22
1989-90	21
1990-91	32
1991-92	21
[1]1992-93	47

[1] Provisional

It would not be possible to identify figures separately for county and district councils except at disproportionate cost.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what research his Department has commissioned in the last two years on the relationship between working hours, rest breaks and accidents in the workplace.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No research on this specific topic has been commissioned by the Employment Department in the last two years.

Professor J. M. Harrington of the University of Birmingham institute of occupational health was commissioned last year to identify and evaluate pertinent medical and scientific literature relating to the effect, if any, of hours of work on employees' health. The Health and Safety Executive has previously commissioned the study "Shiftwork, Health and Safety—an overview of the scientific literature 1978-1990", by Waterhouse, Folkard and Minors, 1992.

Sunday Working

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received regarding proposed changes in the ability of staff in (a) cinema retailing kiosks, bars or restaurants and (b) cinemas themselves, to work on Sunday.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Cinema Exhibitors Association has sought guidance as to whether the employment measures of schedule 4 to the Sunday Trading Bill will extend to employees in cinemas selling refreshments and souvenirs.

Training Schemes

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list all Government-operated employment and training schemes and the cost of each scheme each year since 1987; the number of providers on each scheme; how much grant each provider has received each year since 1987, in total and each year; the average payment to the providers for each person engaged on the schemes; the average payment to providers on North Norfolk Action and the cost of providers in total for each of the workstart schemes and per person who has found full-time employment on each workstart scheme.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. G. Johnson to Sir Ralph Howell, dated 5 May 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about Government operated employment and training schemes. I am replying in absence of the Chief Executive.

The Government has operated a large number of employment and training schemes over the period covered by your question, and it has not been possible to assemble all the information required for the reply in the normal timescale. Mr. Fogden will write to you again shortly with all the details that are available, but our people have told me that some of the information that you require is not held centrally.

I am sorry that we cannot reply to your question as speedily as usual.

Pit Closures

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how the funds allocated to TECs in 1993-94 specifically for areas affected by pit closures were spent; how much remained unspent; and if the remaining funds can be spent in 1994-95.

Miss Widdecombe: Funds allocated to training and enterprise councils in 1993-94 for areas affected by pit closure were spent on additional training and enterprise measures in line with TEC plans.

The full amount allocated to TECs in 1993-94 for coal special measures was not spent because of the uncertainty surrounding pit closure dates. Unspent funds from 1993-94 have been re-allocated for TEC coal special measures in 1994-95. Planned expenditure on coal special measures in 1994-95 is around £40 million.

Part-time Work

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many part-time workers there were in each year since data was collected; and if he will also show these data reworked on a basis of full-time equivalents.

Miss Widdecombe: Information on part-time workers has been collected since 1984 and is shown in the following table. The Department does not make estimates of full-time equivalents.

Work Force in Employment: Great Britain
Seasonally adjusted

	Part-time (thousands)
1984	5,282
1985	5,404
1986	5,566
1987	5,853
1988	6,047
1989	6,394
1990	6,642
1991	6,555
1992	6,599
1993	6,656

Labour Statistics

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the destination of those leaving the unemployment register, detailing specifically the numbers and proportions going into full-time work, part-time work, training, further education, on to another benefit or into inactivity, for as many years as the figures are available.

Miss Widdecombe: Information on the destinations of those leaving the claimant count is not routinely available.

The Labour Force Survey in Spring 1993 showed that about two thirds of those who had left ILO unemployment in the previous 12 months had found employment during that period.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will show for each year since 1979 the numbers coming on to and leaving the unemployment register.

Miss Widdecombe: Information on the numbers of people joining and leaving the claimant unemployment count is available on a monthly basis from June 1983 onwards. Figures can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Schools (Injuries)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the number of serious injuries and fatalities by school in local education authority maintained schools in England and Wales investigated by the Health and Safety Executive in the last two years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 4 May 1994]: The information available is as follows:

Year	[1]Fatal	[2]Major
1991-92	2	81
[3]1992-93	2	71

The names and locations of the schools where the fatalities occurred are listed in the table. Similar details for the investigated major injuries could be obtained and presented only at disproportionate cost.

1991-92
Ferryhill Comprehensive, Cambridgeshire
Millford Special School, Plymouth
1992-93
Coleman Primary School, Leicester
Brettenham Junior School, London

Notes to table:
[1] Fatal and major injuries to employees, self-employed people also members of the public—chiefly pupils—injured as a result of someone else's work activity.
[2] As defined under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985.
[3] Provisional.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the number of serious injuries and fatalities in private or independent schools investigated by the Health and Safety Executive in the last two years; and if he will list the schools concerned.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 4 May 1994]: The information available is as follows:

Year	[1]Fatal	[2]Major
1991-92	2	17
[3]1992-93	—	14

The names and locations of the schools where the fatalities occurred are given in the table. Similar details for the investigated major injuries could be obtained and presented only at disproportionate cost.

Gresham's School, Holt, Norfolk
Macintrye Independent School, Wingrove, Buckinghamshire

Notes to table:
[1] Fatal and major injuries to employees, self-employed people also members of the public—chiefly pupils—injured as a result of someone else's work activity.
[2] As defined under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985.
[3] Provisional.

TUPE Regulations

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what are the implications of the judgment of the European Court of Justice in the Schmidt case on Her Majesty's Government's implementation of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 and the 1993 guidance on TUPE;

(2) what are the implications of the attitude of Her Majesty's Government to the European Court of Justice's decision in the Schmidt case for Her Majesty's Government's policy in respect of the Rask case.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: United Kingdom courts and tribunals will take account, in appropriate cases, of the judgment in the Schmidt case, case C-392/92, and the existing case law of the Court, including the Rask judgment, in determining whether there has been a transfer of an undertaking. The Government are considering the implications of the judgment in relation to the guidance issued by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 11 March 1993, but the key requirement to look at each case on its own facts remains.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will present in tabular form the size of the working population for each of the last 30 years; and if he will divide this data into male and female workers and further subdivide the total as to whether these people work full or part-time.

Miss Widdecombe: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Habitat Conservation

6. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further plans she has to encourage the conservation of natural habitats.

Mr. Jack: We plan to increase the range of environmental schemes available to farmers and have also issued proposals to adjust ewe and beef premium payments to discourage overgrazing.

Deregulation

10. Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals for deregulation she intends to introduce.

Mr. Soames: We are finalising our review of regulations based on public consultations. Our proposals —involving firm plans for simplification and revocation of regulations—are being published as they emerge.

17. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the future of milk quotas.

Mr. Jack: The EC legislation provides for the milk quota system to continue until the year 2000. We will be pressing for the EU Council of Ministers to debate the future of milk quotas well in advance of that date. Our preference remains for artificial quota constraints to be replaced by a market-led system which would enable producers to plan their output according to the market and their business needs.

18. Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on progress towards deciding the location of the European plant breeder rights office.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The United Kingdom has submitted a formal bid to locate the new office at Cambridge and we understand that six other member states have now submitted bids.

A decision on the location of the office is expected to be taken at the June European Council.

Meat and Livestock Commission

19. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action she has taken to improve the marketing role of the Meat and Livestock Commission.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: A review of the Meat and Livestock Commission was published on 1 March and included recommendations on the MLC's marketing work.

I have asked for comments on the recommendations by 1 June.

I will then consider what action to take.

Sheep

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she is next due to attend the European Union Council of Ministers to discuss the future of the sheep sector.

Mr. Jack: The next meeting of the European Union Council of Agriculture Ministers is scheduled for 30 to 31 May. At that meeting my right hon. Friend expects to discuss the sheepmeat sector in the context of the debate on the Commission's proposals for prices and related measures in the 1994-95 marketing year.

Speedwell

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice her Department offers farmers and growers on the eradication of Veronica species, commonly known as Speedwell; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: This matter has been delegated to ADAS. I have asked the chief executive to reply to the hon. Gentleman direct.

Letter from Dr. J. M. Walsh to Mr. Gordon McMaster, dated 5 May 1994:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question concerning what advice the Department offers farmers and growers on the eradication of Veronica species, commonly known as Speedwell.

The genus Veronica includes a number of species of wild plant, two of which are common weeds of agricultural land. These two are:

Veronica persica ..... Common Field Speedwell
Veronica hederifolia ..... Ivy-leaved Speedwell

Speedwell is not an injurious weed as defined by the Weed Act 1959 and hence the Department is under no statutory/legal obligations with regard to its control.

ADAS, on behalf of MAFF implements a number of environmental schemes such as ESAs, and within the terms and conditions of the schemes provides husbandry advice to farmers. Such advice free at the point of delivery, i.e. to the farmer, may cover appropriate practical measures for the control of weed infestations.

ADAS independently of MAFF does of course offer a whole range of chargeable consultancy services to farmers and growers, and advice on the control or eradication of weeds would be provided where appropriate. There are no particular technical problems related to the control of Speedwell by herbicides.

Vessel Registrations

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the effect of EEC fishing permits will be on foreign vessels registered under the British flag; and whether they will qualify as British or home country vessels.

Mr. Jack: A Commission proposal for a framework regulation on fishing permits is currently being considered by member states. For the purpose of EU fisheries legislation, vessels flying a member state's flag are treated as vessels of that nation.

Security

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the use of private detective agencies and security companies by her Department.

Mr. Jack: No use is made of private detective agencies. Private firms are employed to provide security guarding, details of which were given in my reply to the hon. Member for Walsall, South (Mr. George) on 25 April 1994, Official Report, columns 72-73.

Fishing Limitations

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals she has made to the Fisheries Commissioner for a European days at sea limitation; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: None.

State Veterinary Service

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what dates and at what ports the state veterinary service has undertaken blanket surveillance for 24 hour periods in each of the last five years.

Mr. Soames: Blanket surveillance for 24-hour periods was introduced in May 1993 and undertaken by the SVS at the ports of Hull, Harwich, Dover, Southampton, Portsmouth, Poole and Plymouth on the following dates:

1993
May 25-26
August 12-13
November 10-11
December 2-3

1994
January 4-5
February 9-10
February 21-22

March 18-19
March 28-29
April 12-13
April 28-29

On introduction of the single market from 1 January 1993 routine inspections at these ports were replaced by random surveillance which continues.

Supermarkets (Pricing)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the pricing of agricultural goods by supermarkets.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Food retailing is a fiercely competitive business: this is helping to keep retail food prices down.

Beekeepers

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps she is taking to improve the training of British beekeepers.

Mr. Jack: On 10 March I announced new arrangements to help beekeepers maintain a healthy bee population in England.

Food Safety Directorate

Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received concerning the work of the Food Safety Directorate; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: We receive many representations about the work of the Food Safety Directorate.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Battle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current Government position with regard to BSE in the food chain.

Mr. Soames: Measures taken in the United Kingdom since BSE was identified protect public health irrespective of the progress of the epidemic, and have been endorsed by a wide range of independent experts in this country and international organisations. The chief medical officer has publicly stated that British beef can be safely eaten by everyone.

Milk Marketing

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she expects to make a decision on the proposals for the future marketing of milk by Milk Marque.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for High Peak (Mr. Hendry).

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reforms of the CAP are being promoted by Her Majesty's Government:; and what reduction in the cost of the CAP such reforms would bring about.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I will continue to press for the reform process begun in 1992 to be extended to the unreformed sectors such as sugar, wine, olive oil and fruit and vegetables.

I will also press for further reductions in support prices to the benefit of both taxpayers and consumers.

Fast Food

Mr. French: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment she has made of the benefits the development of fast food can bring to the British horticultural industry.

Mr. Jack: My hon. Friend is assessing this and other aspects of the fast food market as part of his discussions with the catering industry aimed at improving opportunities for the sales of British produced raw materials, including horticultural products. I am undertaking a similar project on the horticultural industry.

Sheep Disease

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what were the dates of entry to the United Kingdom and the route of each consignment of sheep where caseous lymphadenitis was present, the size of each consignment and the numbers of animals infected;

(2) which consignments of sheep entering the United Kingdom from Poland and Spain since 1 January did not comply fully with the requirement to give 24 hours advance notice to the local animal health office; at what point the Ministry became aware of each consignment's arrival in the United Kingdom; and by whom and by what means this information was conveyed;

(3) what assessment she has made of whether the procedures set out in directive 90/425/EEC, as amended by directive 92/60/EEC, were fully complied with in relation to each consignment of sheep imported from Poland and Spain subsequently found to be infected with caseous lymphadenitis.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 28 April 1994]: Information on the dates of arrival, the country of origin and the routes taken by each consignment of sheep imported into the United Kingdom from Spain and Poland since 1 January 1994 is given in my reply of 13 April to the hon. Member for Dulwich (Ms Jowell), Official Report, column 180. Information on the size of each consignment, the numbers of carcasses from each consignment condemned at meat inspection due to internal evidence of caseous lymphadenitis, and whether advance notice was received in respect of each consignment is given in the table.

Directive 90/425/EEC requires, inter alia, that the veterinary authorities in each member state ensure that only those animals which satisfy the animal health and welfare requirements for intra-Community trade are permitted to be exported to other member states and that all consignments are accompanied by the appropriate health certification or other documentation laid down in EC rules. The directive also requires that member state veterinary authorities send each other messages, via the ANIMO computer system, when an official export health certificate has been issued, so as to provide advance notification to an importing member state that a consignment of live animals is on its way. Directive 90/425/EEC does not apply to imports from Poland.

As far as the recent imports of sheep from Spain are concerned, after the initial consignment, the Ministry's chief veterinary officer wrote to his opposite number in Spain about a number of deficiencies in the documentation. Subsequent consignments have been accompanied by satisfactory health certification. In addition, the Spanish authorities have given us prior notification that consignments were being despatched, as required under the provisions of directive 90/425/EEC.

Imports of sheep from Spain and Poland since 1 January 1994

23 March 1994	Spain	268	8	Nil	>24 hours advance notification from slaughterhouse

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food with what other sheep, or areas frequented by other animals which are not capable of being disinfected after contact, sheep from consignments infected by caseous lymphadenitis came into contact.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 28 April 1994]: All consignments of sheep imported from Poland and Spain since 1 January 1994 were imported for slaughter and did not come into contact with other sheep until their arrival at the slaughterhouse in Birmingham. All lairage facilities in Great Britain in which any of the consignments were held en route to the slaughterhouse were required to be cleansed and disinfected after departure of the imported sheep.

Common Fisheries Policy

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what commitment has been made by the EU Council to confirm the full integration, by 1 January 1996 at the latest, of Spain and Portugal into the common fisheries policy.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The Council adopted a declaration in the context of the Norwegian enlargement negotiations which provides for the full integration of the fisheries arrangements in the act of accession of Spain and Portugal into the general rules of the common fisheries policy. To that end, the Council is required to adopt regulations before 1 January 1995, which will enter into force by 1 January 1996 at the latest.

As I reported in my reply of 13 April to my hon. Friend the Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison), Official Report, column 183-84, the Fisheries Council on 12 April adopted a regulation which provides further that no changes can be made to the current rules governing Spanish and Portuguese fishing until the replacement arrangements have been set out and agreed by the Council.

Thames Cockle Fishery

Mr. Channon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when there will be a public inquiry into the proposed regulating order for the Thames cockle fishery.

Mr. Jack [pursuant to his reply, 17 December 1993, c. 1070]: Arrangements have now been made for a public inquiry to be held into the proposed regulating order for the Thames cockle fishery on 12 May 1994 at the civic centre, Southend on Sea.

WALES

Agricultural Workers

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish for each district council and county council areas, and for Wales as a whole, the number of (a) full-time farmers, (b) part-time farmers, (c) full-time agricultural tenants and (d) part-time agricultural tenants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The annual June agricultural census collects information on the numbers of farmers who work on holdings, including any partners or directors associated with those holdings. Data are not collected specifically in terms of agricultural tenants although information is available for those farmers, partners and directors who work on holdings where all the land is being rented and this category is included in the following tables.

The figures for Wales as a whole and for the counties, shown in table 1, are from the 1993 census. The 1993 figures for district council areas are not yet available, however the equivalent results from the 1992 census are given in table 2.

Security

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the use of private detective agencies and security companies by his Department.

Mr. Redwood: Private inquiry agents have been used by the Welsh Office from time to time in cases of damage to trunk road furniture; personal injuries and medical negligence claims. Private security guards are employed to protect the Department's main offices at Cathays Park, Cardiff at night and at weekends.

Llandough NHS Trust

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales under what powers he has requested the Llandough national health service trust to bid to provide community health services for the Vale of Glamorgan; what other organisations have been asked to make bids for the same services; if he will publish the terms of reference to the invitation to reply; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Section 5 of the NHS and Community Care Act 1990 contains the power to make, and by implication to amend, an order establishing an NHS trust. A range of non-statutory guidance has been issued on trust-related matters, including the procedures to be followed prior to the submission of a formal proposal for NHS trust status.

I have placed in the Library of the House a copy of the letter inviting Llandough Hospital NHS trust to prepare formal proposals to extend its current range of patient care to include community and mental health services for the Vale of Glamorgan. As can be seen, I have not given my final consent to the bid so far. No other health body in South Glamorgan has been asked to prepare such proposals for this area, though all expressions of interest have been taken into account.

Employment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times he has met the Wales TUC to discuss employment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Since taking office, I have had two meetings with the Wales TUC, when we discussed a range of economic issues.

Milk Marketing

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what objections he has received to the revised scheme of re-organisation in milk marketing that will delay the vesting day; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and I will consider all representations made to us during consultation on the Milk Marketing Board's scheme of re-organisation. We will make our decision on whether or not to approve the scheme as quickly as our responsibilities under the Agriculture Act 1993 allow. I am not aware of any reason why vesting should be delayed beyond 1 November 1994.

EDUCATION

Teachers (Suspensions)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will institute an inquiry into the number of head teachers and other teachers suspended from schools in Cheshire in the last 12 months, and the schools involved.

Mr. Forth: As a result of concerns expressed recently about allegations against teachers, the Department is currently preparing a survey of all local education authorities to find out the number of teachers who have been suspended as a result of allegations involving pupils.

Women Teachers

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will review the information published in Statistical Bulletin 24/93 regarding teachers' responsibilities and pay scales, tables 9 to 12 and paragraphs 16 to 24, in order to identify whether women teachers in secondary schools which were grant maintained at the time of the survey appear to have had promotion prospects better than, the same as, or worse than women teachers in otherwise comparable local authority schools; what factors other than differences in experience and career break patterns account for any observed differences in pay scales between men and women teachers in grant-maintained schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: There are only relatively few self-governing grant-maintained schools in this survey, and they may not necessarily be representative of self-governing schools as a whole in this respect. However, the survey data show that women had a somewhat higher proportion of senior posts in these schools than in secondary schools as a whole.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is his policy towards the promotion of equal opportunities for teachers employed in grant-maintained schools; and what arrangements he has made for monitoring known or possible inequalities between men and women teachers regarding their responsibilities and pay.

Mr. Robin Squire: The governing bodies of self-governing grant-maintained schools must comply with the provisions of equal opportunities legislation which apply to them as employers. There are no specific arrangements for monitoring inequalities between men and women teachers: however, the Department collects and publishes statistical data on teachers' pay scales and positions of responsibility from time to time, and the School Teachers Review Body may examine such aspects of teachers' conditions of employment if it sees fit.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what goals he has set for the employment of women teachers in posts of responsibility in grant-maintained schools; what relevant advice or guidance he has given to the governing bodies of grant-maintained schools; and what progress is being made towards his goals.

Mr. Robin Squire: It is not for my right hon. Friend to set such goals; appointments of teachers to posts of responsibility are a matter for the governing body of the school. The Department's guide on education law for governors of self-governing grant-maintained schools refers to the requirements of equal opportunities legislation.

Mobile Telephones and Pagers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many (a) portable telephones, (b) pagers and electronic bleepers and (c) car telephones are currently used by his Department; what are the annual costs of operating this equipment; and to which personnel it is made available.

Mr. Forth: The Department currently has in use 100 portable telephones, at a total annual rental of £27,000 plus call charges, and 66 pagers, at a total annual running cost of £26,300. The portable telephones may be used in cars if a hands-free mount is fitted. It is not feasible to quote a separate figure for car telephones. Portable telephones and pagers are issued to key personnel in the Department who may need to be contacted urgently.

Sex Education

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he plans to publish his Department's circular of guidance on sex education in schools.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend is publishing the circular today. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what have been the costs to his Department in (a) providing legal advice to witnesses appearing before the Scott inquiry, (b) drawing up evidence to be submitted to the Scott inquiry, (c) officials and legal advisers attending the Scott inquiry and (d) other related costs.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Office of Public Service and Science has not incurred any legal costs in respect of evidence submitted to the Scott inquiry. Legal costs relating to my own evidence have been borne by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. I attended three sessions of the inquiry and was accompanied by my grade 5 private secretary. Records have not, however, been kept of the total amount of time spent by officials in preparing for, and attending, the inquiry and the cost of staff time is not therefore quantifiable. I prepared my witness statement myself during the recess.

Charterline

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he has completed an evaluation of the charterline pilot scheme.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have completed an evaluation of the charterline pilot scheme which ended on 31 March 1994. The pilot study has shown that people need more information about how to contact their public services. A number of proposals to meet this need have been identified during the charterline pilot. We are using the charterline database to work with the Royal Mail to produce a series of directories which will help people to contact their public services. We are also working similarly with BT and Thomson Directories. I do not propose therefore to continue the charterline service. In addition, we are working with organisations providing local services to produce information posters which will display helpline numbers and local information. We will continue to give priority to assisting others, such as the BBC, to develop their own helplines.

In line with the provisions of the code of practice on access to Government information, copies of the evaluation report and the research conducted before and during the pilot study have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. A copy of the evaluation report has been sent to each public service organisation participating in the pilot study.

ENVIRONMENT

Property Services Agency

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much was written off in the Property Services Agency accounts in 1992-93; broken down by (a) customer name and (b) amount; and which sums are still being pursued.

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 29 April, Official Report, column 354 for the details of the write-offs in the PSA services 1992-93 appropriation accounts. Of the total customer debt of £76·6 million outstanding at the end of the 1992-93, £6·9 million is still being pursued.

Fire Safety

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he will take to ensure that, when advice on fire safety and fire precautions is no longer provided to Departments by the Department of the Environment, all Government Departments will continue to obtain professional advice on these matters.

Mr. Baldry: Individual Departments remain responsible for protecting against fire hazards the buildings that they occupy. It is for them to decide on the extent and the source of professional advice for particular buildings. My Department will, however, continue to provide central guidance on fire safety protection standards for Government buildings and on procedures for the management of fire safety.

Mobile Telephones and Pagers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) portable telephones, (b) pagers and electronic bleepers and (c) car telephones are currently used by his Department; what are the annual costs of operating this equipment; and to which personnel it is made available.

Mr. Baldry: My Department currently uses 139 portable telephones, costing £44,000 per annum for line rental; 428 pagers and electronic bleepers, which cost £20,000 per annum to rent; and 15 car telephones, costing £5,000 per annum for line rental.

My Department is also responsible for 34 car telephones and two pagers and electronic bleepers which are fitted in the pool cars and associated maintenance vehicles operated by the Government car service. The annual rental for this equipment is £11,000.

The equipment is allocated to business units and not specifically to individual officers.

Urban Regeneration

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if an urban development corporation, arm's-length city challenge company, a housing action trust or the Urban Regeneration Agency may bid for the uncommitted non ring-fenced proportion of the single regeneration budget for 1995-96 and 1996-97.

Mr. Baldry: Paragraph 44 of the bidding guidance for the single regeneration budget for 1995-96, copies of which are in the Library of the House, explains that English Partnerships—the Urban Regeneration Agency—urban development corporations and housing action trusts may join with other partners in promoting a bid for uncommitted resources from the single regeneration budget. Similarly, city challenge companies may take part in bids and, as paragraph 29 of the guidance makes clear, existing city challenge partnerships might in some cases form the basis for initiatives supported by the budget. Arrangements for the budget for 1996-97, including those relating to any uncommitted proportion of the budget, will be finalised in the light of the public expenditure settlement later in the year.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

E-Mail

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chairman of the Information Committee (1) if he will institute an experiment directed to enabling hon. Members to receive E-mail from constituents similar to that currently being undertaken by the United States House of Representatives;

(2) if he will make a statement on the feasibility of connecting the Parliamentary Data and Video Network to the Internet.

Mr. Gary Waller: The Information Committee has reported on the Parliamentary Video and Data Network —PDVN—pilot project in its first report, "The Provision of a Parliamentary Data and Video Network", HC237 of the present Session. If the House approves the establishment of a permanent Parliamentary Data and Video Network as proposed in the report, the Information Committee intends to undertake an inquiry into future additional services which might be made available to Members on the PDVN.

Parliamentary Counsel Office

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many amendments for consideration at the Committee stage of the Sale and Supply of Goods Bill were drafted by the Office of Parliamentary Counsel.

Mr. Newton: None.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many amendments for consideration at the Report stage of the Civil Rights (Disabled Persons) Bill have been drafted by the Office of Parliamentary Counsel.

Mr. Newton: Those amendments tabled on Tuesday 3 May 1994 were drafted by the Office of Parliamentary Counsel. Those tabled on Wednesday 4 May 1994 were not.

TRANSPORT

West Cost Main Line

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the amount of maintenance and track renewal work to be carried out in the financial year 1994-95 on the west coast main line.

Mr. Freeman: The funds available to Railtrack this year for maintenance and track renewal are similar to 1993-94 levels. Railtrack is committed to maintaining the west coast main line in the steady state until work on upgrading starts in mid-1995. The amount of work to be carried out this year should therefore be broadly similar to that in 1993-94.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will implement the plan for investment in the west coast railway as set out by the west midlands regional rail forum; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The feasibility study on the modernisation of the west coast main line currently being undertaken jointly by Railtrack and WCML Development Co. Ltd. will examine a range of investment options. The contract for the work on the line will be let in early 1995 and the work itself is expected to commence in mid-1995.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the west coast main line will be modernised; by whom; and at what cost.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend announced on 1 December that, following a feasibility study by a private sector consortium working with Railtrack, a competition will be held early next year for the contract to design, build and maintain the improvements to the line. That remains the timetable. The feasibility study is under way. Work is expected to start in mid-1995 and to take eight to 10 years. The cost has been estimated at between £400 million and £600 million.

Rail Privatisation

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what will be the criteria for allocating rolling stock by the three proposed leasing companies.

Mr. Freeman: There will be a number of criteria. The most important are the suitability of rolling stock to the route and to meet the service specified by the Franchising Director. The final allocation of stock will be a matter for negotiation between the rolling stock company and the passenger train operator.

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much investment he estimates will be required to prepare the rail network for privatisation.

Mr. Freeman: Investment in the rail network has been geared to the maintenance and improvement of service standards and has been running at historically high levels in recent. years. Investment levels of around £3 billion announced last November for the three years from 1994-95 continue to support these objectives.

Driving Standards Agency

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when assistant chief driving examiners in the Driving Standards Agency were made equivalent in grade to senior executive officers; when the agency made this decision; when the appropriate trade unions were consulted; what powers within the agency's framework document were invoked to make this decision; and if senior executive officers will be eligible for assistant chief driving examiner posts.

Mr. Key: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Driving Standards Agency under its chief executive, Dr. John Ford. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from John Ford to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 4 May 1994:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your question about Assistant Chief Driving Examiners and Senior Executive Officers having equivalent status.

The Assistant Driving Examiner grade was established many years ago, and has always been on a comparable pay scale to that for the Senior Executive Officers, and is therefore classed as an equivalent grade. The pay scales were set at national not at Agency level and the relevant trade unions were consulted during negotiations. The Agency has followed the Departmental line on this issue and has not therefore had to invoke any powers within its framework document.

Lateral transfers of staff between jobs in different disciplines, of roughly equivalent levels are provided for in Civil Service terms and conditions as set out in the Staff Handbook. Therefore Senior Executive Officers would be eligible to be considered for Assistant Chief Driving Examiner posts, although training in the specialist aspects of the driving test would be required.

Night Flights

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, if he has reached a decision on the night flying restrictions to apply at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted from 23 October 1994; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: The proposals that I published on 10 November 1993 for revised night flying restrictions covered the arrangements for the 1994 summer season and those to apply from winter 1994-95 until the end of the summer 1998 season. We acknowledged the need for an early decision on the 1994 summer season by separating the proposals in the consultation paper and our conclusions for that season were announced by my hon. Friend, and my noble Friend on 1 February. The summer season commenced on 27 March and continues until 23 October. The conclusions that I am announcing today apply to the following four years.

Our November consultation paper proposed that there should be a movements limit for each airport with the quota system based on the noise certification of aircraft also applying as a supplementary control. An alternative approach was also set out which would dispense with the need for quotas but impose subsidiary limits on movements by the noisier types of aircraft. As in respect of summer 1994, the responses for the following four years showed very little support for this alternative approach. I have therefore concluded that the night restrictions should continue to be in the form of movements limits supplemented by quotas. The classification of aircraft according to the quota count system, the hours of the night restrictions and the night quota period will remain as I announced on 6 July 1993.

The night-time movements limits and quotas for each airport for each season will be:—

Winter	Movements Limit	Quota	Summer	Movements Limit	Quota
Heathrow
1994-95	2,550	5,000	1995	3,250	7,000
1995-96	2,550	5,000	1996	3,250	7,000
1996-97	2,550	5,000	1997	3,250	7,000
1997-98	2,550	5,000	1998	3,250	7,000
Gatwick
1994-95	3,000	6,820	1995	8,050	9,550
1995-96	3,750	6,820	1996	9,100	9,550
1996-97	4,500	6,820	1997	10,150	9,550
1997-98	5,250	6,820	1998	11,200	9,550
Stansted
1994-95	4,640	3,000	1995	6,750	4,200
1995-96	4,820	3,000	1996	7,000	4,200
1996-97	5,000	3,000	1997	7,000	4,200
1997-98	5,000	3,000	1998	7,000	4,200

The quotas for Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted remain as I announced on 6 July 1993. The movements limits for Heathrow and Gatwick are as proposed in the November 1993 consultation. The Stansted movements limits that I am announcing for the first three seasons are slightly lower than those proposed, as was the movement limit for this summer announced on 1 February. I also confirm that the movements limits and quotas for Stansted have been set in the light of the present limit of 78,000 passenger air transport movements—ATM. I will review both the movements limits and the quotas if Parliament should approve an increase in the Stansted ATM limit before summer 1998.

The 10 per cent. end-of-season flexibility, with penalty for excess thereafter, will apply, as proposed, to the movements limits as well as to the quotas. The arrangements for dispensation also continue to apply. Experience of operating under the guidelines published on 6 July 1993 has shown the need for some minor amendments. These do not change the circumstances in which a dispensation might be considered but provide some further clarification for operators. I have placed a copy of the revised guidelines in the Library.

I have given careful consideration to the responses from people living around the three airports, the local authorities, environmental groups and local organisations and other representative bodies. I have also given careful consideration to the responses from airlines, aviation bodies and other user organisations. In general, the responses were more polarised than hitherto, reflecting not just the particular interests of those putting them forward but also, I am sure, the length of time for which we have been debating the issues. My aim is still to strike a fair balance between the different interests: to protect local people from excessive aircraft noise at night without unnecessarily impeding the airline industry. The movements limits and quotas that I have announced today for the three airports should achieve this. However, as explained in the November 1993 consultation paper, there are difficulties in setting appropriate movements limits several years ahead. I therefore confirm that, as proposed, the Government will be prepared to consider adjustments to the movements limits prior to 1998 in the light of advice from the airport consultative committees.

I fully acknowledge that aircraft noise at night may disturb the sleep of some people near airports and that it is a matter of concern to many others who fear that they might be disturbed. However, a complete ban on night flights could not be justified. For many years, it has been the Government's policy to allow night operations to continue while seeking to ensure that eventually all such operations would be carried out by quiet types of aircraft. In my announcement on 6 July last year I drew attention to the great strides that had been made by the industry in phasing out older, noisier aircraft and to the regulations to ensure the phasing out between 1995 and 2002 of what are now described as the noisier chapter 2 jets. Those are aircraft once regarded as quiet.

The arrangements that I have confirmed today continue the policy of encouraging the use of the most modern and quietest types of aircraft. This will permit some increase in movements provided that the quietest types of aircraft are used but the noise quotas will keep overall night noise levels well below those for summer 1988 at Heathrow and Gatwick. The movements limits provide overall control on the number of movements at night. I understand the worries expressed by local people that substantial growth of the number of movements, irrespective of the noise performance of the aircraft concerned, might bring additional disturbance from the ground operations associated with those aircraft. I therefore indicated in the November 1993 consultation paper that we were considering whether to initiate a new study into ground noise at airports at night to see whether further measures of amelioration or control might be appropriate. This has been generally welcomed. I therefore confirm that I have asked my officials to consider further with BAA plc, which is responsible for measures to control ground noise at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted, the scope and form that such a study might take, and to present proposals to me by the end of this year.

I also confirm that the monitoring and reporting arrangements announced on 6 July 1993 and 1 February 1994 are under way. These are being overseen by the Department's aircraft noise monitoring advisory committee and comprise

(a) a review of the longstanding departure noise levels of 102 PNdB (night) and 110 PNdB (day), 89 and 97 dBA respectively;
(b) the monitoring of noise performance of aircraft covered by the QC classification;
(c) reports by each airport to their consultative committee on all night movements, whether covered by quota, or by exempt types of aircraft, or granted exemptions or dispensations;
(d) suitable confirmation that the reporting arrangements cover the full audit trail;
(e) an initial report by ANMAC on the performance of the new night restrictions system after the first year of operation.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of (a) northbound and (b) southbound traffic on the A34-A5 corridor parallel to the proposed Birmingham northern relief road is long distance; and what is the total amount of traffic on the Birmingham northern relief road that is expected to be long distance in 1996 and 2011.

Mr. Key: The question relates to matters which are the responsibility of the Highways Agency; the chief executive will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Dr. Tony Wright, dated 5 May 1994:

You asked the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of (a) northbound and (b) southbound traffic on the A34-A5 corridor parallel to the proposed Birmingham Northern Relief Road is long distance; and what is the total amount of traffic on the Birmingham Northern Relief Road that is expected to be long distance in 1996 and 2011. As this is an operational matter for the Highways Agency, I have been asked to reply.

The Traffic Model used by Midland Expressway Limited indicates that there are negligible numbers of vehicles using the A34 from Walsall to Churchbridge which then pass along the A5 to either Gailey (M6 J12) or Weeford. This model provides the basis for the traffic figures included in the Statement of Reasons for this scheme, a copy of which was sent to you recently. Full documentation of the model was published in February and is available to the public. I can arrange for a summary to be sent if you require one.

But the A34/A5 route is not a close parallel to BNRR and you may be interested in traffic flows on the A38/A5 route which does more closely parallel the Birmingham Northern Relief Road.

Current daily traffic flows in the A38-A5 corridor vary between 25,000 and 50,000 vehicles a day depending on which sector is looked at. Only a small proportion, some 2,750 vehicles, travelling over the entire length between Bassetts Pole and Churchbridge have an origin and a destination beyond the corridor. Of this traffic approximately 1,250 vehicles are southbound, 1,500 northbound.

Long distance traffic which uses other trunk routes into this corridor, and which could use BNRR for part of its journey, is also present; for instance vehicles travelling from north of Fazeley to Churchbridge and beyond.

Should BNRR be built, two way flows of through trips (that is traffic between with an origin and destination outside the conurbation) are estimated at 19,500 vehicles per day in 1996 rising to some 33,000 per day in 2011. More details of traffic flows are given in the Statement of Reasons.

There are no known material differences in flows between northbound and southbound traffic although at peak hours there will be considerable differences in the local flows and hence in the proportions of traffic represented by these long-range vehicles.

Motorways

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of motorway in England and Wales were coned off in (a) October 1992 and (b) March 1994.

Mr. Key [holding answer 3 May 1994]: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. The chief executive has written to the hon. Gentleman.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. George Howarth, dated 5 May 1994:

You recently put down a Parliamentary Question asking how many miles of motorway in England and Wales were coned off in October 1992 and March 1994. As this is a matter for the Highways Agency, I have been asked to reply.

On 1 October 1992, 106 miles of motorway in England were coned off. On 1 March 1994 the figure was 139 miles. I do not have any figures for Wales since the Agency is not responsible for these roads.

The closure figures represent about 6% and 8% respectively of the total motorway network. But the nature of maintenance works is such that the figures can fluctuate from month to month throughout the year.

TREASURY

Security

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the use of private detective agencies and security companies by his Department.

Mr. Nelson: No private detective agencies are used by the Treasury. Information relating to the use of security companies was included in the answer that my right hon. Friend the Paymaster General gave to the hon. Member for Walsall, South (Mr. George) on 21 April 1994, Official Report, columns 596-97.

Coinage System

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes he is considering to the coinage system.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have asked the Royal Mint to undertake a public consultation exercise on the possible introduction of a £2 coin for general circulation and also on whether the 50p coin should be replaced with a smaller coin.

The Royal Mint will consult as widely as possible and will seek the views of the general public as well as those of special interest groups and major coin users.

Mobile Telephones and Pagers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) portable telephones, (b) pagers and electronic bleepers and (c) car telephones are currently used by his Department; what are the annual costs of operating this equipment; and to which personnel it is made available.

Mr. Nelson: The Treasury currently uses 23 mobile telephones, 71 pagers and electronic bleepers and seven car telephones. The total annual operating cost of this equipment is £20,300 excluding VAT and telephone call costs.

The mobile telephones are mainly used in the offices of Ministers and senior officials. The pagers and bleepers are provided to some staff whose jobs regularly take them out of their offices but who need to be contactable, for example, computer support personnel or office services staff.

Tax Relief

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what he estimates to be the total cost in 1994-95 of relief from capital gains tax for (a) retirement relief, (b) holdover relief for gifts, (c) relief for trading losses against capital gains, (d) indexation allowance and rebasing to March 1982, (e) exemption of first £5,800 of gains of individuals and first £2,900 of gains of trustees and (f) gains accrued but unrealised at death.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 28 April 1994]: Provisional estimates for the costs of the reliefs, allowances and exemptions for 1994-95 are given in the table.

	Cost for 1994-95 (£ million)
a. Retirement relief	65
b. Holdover relief for gifts	50
c. Relief for trading losses against capital gains	85
d. Indexation allowance and rebasing to March 1982 (individuals and trusts only)[1]	1,100
e. Exemption of first £5,800 of gains on individuals and first £2,900 of gains on trustees	450
f. Gains accrued but unrealised at death	500

[1] Company figures are not available.

These estimates are the costs of the present reliefs and do not represent the yield from abolition of the relief: consequential behavioural effects could substantially alter the yield. These figures are all tentative and subject to a wide margin of error. All figures relate to individuals and trusts only and exclude gains made by companies who pay corporation tax on their gains.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was (a) the total value and (b) the number of estates, notified for probate in the latest available year where the net estate was valued at £1 million or over and no inheritance tax was paid.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 29 April 1994]: Exemption from inheritance tax applies to certain transfers, for example between husband and wife and to charities. Relief is also allowed in respect of certain agricultural property and business assets in order that family farms and businesses can be passed on.

Provisional estimates for estates applying for grants of representation where death occurred in the financial year 1990-91, and where the net estate was valued at £1 million or over are given below. Figures for more recent years are not available.

	Number
Number of estates applying for grants of representation	743
Number of estates not taxed	226
Total net estate value of estates not taxed (£ million)	490

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update the answer to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, East (Mr. Brown), Official Report, 15 March 1991, columns 700-1, on capital transfer tax and inheritance tax.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 29 April 1994]: Latest available estimates for capital transfer and inheritance tax for 1993-94 and 1994-95 are as follows:

	Estimate
Reduction, compared with indexed 1978-79 regime is:
Total liability (£ million)
1993-94	770
1994-95	820
Average liability[1] (£)
1993-94	11,400
1994-95	11,800
Taxpayer numbers (thousands)
Indexed regime
1993-94	68
1994-95	69

	Estimate
Present regime
1993-94	20
1994-95	21

[1] The reduction in the average liability is calculated using estimated numbers of taxpayers under the indexed 1978-79 regime.

These estimates are based on the estimated number and value of taxable estates passing on death in 1993-94 and 1994-95 under existing rules and make no allowance for any impact which the indexed 1978-79 tax rate schedule would have on the level of taxable estates.

WALES

Deer (Tuberculosis)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by region the number of cases of tuberculosis in deer in each year since 1985.

Sir Wyn Roberts: There has been one notified outbreak of bovine tuberculosis in deer in Wales since 1985. It occurred in Dyfed in 1988.

Examinations

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a comparable table of the standards of each GCSE examining board covering pupils in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information requested is not available.

Concessionary Travel

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning concessionary travel for pensioners in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: No.

Sheltered Housing

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for the building of sheltered housing in Alyn and Deeside.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I expect Housing for Wales and the local authority to ensure that an adequate supply of sheltered housing is available. Housing for Wales plans, to complete six category 1 units for elderly people during 1994-95; the local authorities' plans are set out in their "Housing Strategy Operational Plan", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Housing Defects

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet community and town councils and tenants' associations in Alyn and Deeside to discuss investment to combat damp and cold conditions and defective doors and windows.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Such investment is a matter for the district council which determines local priorities within the resources that it has available.

Hospital Beds, Clwyd

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with health trusts in Clwyd concerning acute beds in hospitals.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Welsh Office health department officials have met the Wrexham Maelor NHS trust about its proposals for estate rationalisation on the Wrexham Maelor hospital site.

Internet

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans his Department has (a) to utilise the Internet, (b) to make available on the Internet press releases and other departmental information which the public may wish to have access to and (c) to use the Internet as a means of increasing the openness of his Department.

Mr. Redwood: My Department is considering the use of the Internet and other electronic services initially for the transmission to non-media outlets of press notices. The possibility of including other departmental information would be considered after this first stage.

Wind Farms

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has had regarding wind farms in Wales; what is the nature of these representations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Since 1991, I have received 91 representations in favour of wind farm developments, two of which included petitions with 10 and 60 signatures respectively, and 291 representations against developments, one of which included a petition with 879 signatures.

Sheep Scab

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what specific proposals he has to reduce the incidence of sheep scab in Welsh flocks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: A number of representations have been made calling for the Government to impose statutory controls in respect of sheep scab. However, this is a disease which can be controlled readily by individual farmers, who are well aware of the preventive measures and procedures needed to deal with it. The Agriculture Departments have produced a guidance leaflet on how to safeguard against sheep scab and what to do if the disease is suspected. Veterinary field staff will also continue to watch for welfare problems at markets and on-farm and will be alert for cases of distress caused by sheep scab. We shall not hesitate to press for suitable action to be taken under animal welfare legislation against those who cause serious welfare problems by not dealing promptly and satisfactorily with outbreaks of sheep scab in their flocks.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Burns: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the guidance to the Health and Safety Commission on the exercise of its responsibilities for co-ordinating certain nuclear safety research programmes will be revised.

Mr. Eggar: I wrote to the chairman of the Health and Safety Commission recently agreeing a revision to the guidelines issued originally by the Secretary of State for Energy in 1989. The guidelines have been expanded to include research relevant to any activity or process associated with operation or decommissioning of nuclear power systems on a United Kingdom licensed site. Other changes take account of the changes in the status of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority, European Union procurement rules and departmental responsibilities.

A copy of the revised guidelines has been placed in the Library of the House. Copies have also been sent to Her Majesty's chief inspector of nuclear installations, and the chairmen of Nuclear Electric plc, British Nuclear Fuels plc, and Scottish Nuclear Ltd.

Strategic Technology Acquisition

Mr. Davidson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the progress made to date in creating a national strategic technology acquisition plan.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The Government adopted the technology priorities of the aviation committee's national strategic technology acquisition plan for civil aeronautics in July 1993. This plan is important in helping to identify and prioritise the research effort that may need to be taken in industry and through publicly funded programmes—and to bring about better complementarity and relevance of the latter including DTI, defence, science base and Community programmes. DTI has just completed a number of pilot exercises which are being evaluated.

Trade Associations

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will introduce legislation to protect the consumer against the setting up of unrepresentative or bogus trade associations.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 4 May 1994]: No, the consumer is already protected by a wide range of legislation such as the Trade Description Act 1968, the Consumer Protection Act 1987 and the Sale of Goods Act 1979 which, among other things, provide remedy against misleading or false representation in the supply of goods and services.

Urban Policy Initiatives

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list every urban policy initiative that has been instituted or operated since 1979, the date that each scheme began operating, where appropriate the date that the scheme ceased operating and the funds available on an annual basis under each scheme.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 3 May 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment on 5 May, Official Report, column 608.

HEALTH

Patient Statistics

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average length of stay in hospital for (a) all patients and (b) patients in surgical specialties in each year since 1988-89.

Mr. Sackville: The average length of stay figure relates to in-patients who use a hospital bed for at least one night. They exclude day cases, although procedures previously requiring a short stay in hospital are increasingly undertaken on a day basis. The proportion of finished consultant episodes which were day cases is also shown in the table.

Year	All specialties		Acute sector		Surgical acute
	Average length of stay	Percentage day cases	Average length of stay	Percentage day cases	Average length of stay	Percentage day cases
1989-90	18·5	13·5	6·2	16·6	5·4	21·1
1990-91[1]	15·6	14·4	6·0	17·7	4·8	22·7
1991-92[2]	13·0	16·6	5·7	20·4	5·0	25·8

[1] Provisional.
[2] Preliminary estimate.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the NHS trusts that came into effect from April 1993 which have held no meetings of the board in public.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that the Under-Secretary of State my right hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville) gave him on 25 April at columns 65-66. No public meeting is required for such trusts before 30 September 1994.

Health Trusts, South Yorkshire

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the names and full-time occupations of all the non-executive directors appointed to health trusts in South Yorkshire.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 17 January at column 385. The following amendments apply.

Doncaster Royal Infirmary & Montagu Hospital NHS Trust
Chairman
Formerly: Mr. C. Bryant
Now: vacant

Non-executive directors
Formerly two vacancies
Now: Mr. J. Pickup—Chartered surveyor
Mrs. E. Sparrow—Business services consultant

Sheffield Children's Hospital NHS Trust
Non-executive director
Formerly: vacancy
Now: Mrs. B. Wright—Former Matron

Out-Patient Appointments (Cost)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average cost of an out-patient appointment in 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Sackville: The average cost of an out-patient appointment in 1991-92 was £54·18. The figure is derived from the annual financial returns completed by health authorities and national health service trusts. It includes overheads and capital charges. Information for earlier years was not collected on a comparable basis.

Ritual Abuse

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what communication she had with the hon. Member for Liverpool, Mossley Hill regarding the publication of Professor La Fontaine's report on ritual abuse; when this communication took place; when the report was made available to the Press; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what is her timetable for the publication of Professor Jean La Fontaine's report on ritual abuse; and if she will make a statement;

(3) what considerations led to the selection of an anthropologist to produce a report on ritual abuse; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: A report of the main findings of Professor La Fontaine's survey into the extent and nature of organised and ritual abuse will be published shortly. Publication of her full academic book is expected in the autumn.

Professor La Fontaine's application was one of a number received. It was selected on the basis of scientific merit in the normal way, through independent anonymised peer review and consideration by the Department of Health child care research liaison group, which includes a number of independent academic and social service advisers.

Professor La Fontaine's report has not been made available to the press. Communication on this issue was by parliamentary question and answer, and I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 29 March at column 690.

Patient De-registration

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has for changing the regulations in respect of the explanation provided to patients who are de-registered by general practitioners.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Health Care (Purchase)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the total expenditure by (a) NHS trusts, (b) regional health authorities, (c) district health authorities and (d) family health services authorities on purchase of health care from non-NHS service providers in 1992-93 and 1993-94;

(2) what was the total expenditure by NHS trusts, regional and district health authorities and family health services authorities on purchase of health care from non-NHS providers in 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. Sackville: The total expenditure by national health service trusts, regional health authorities, district health authorities and family health services authorities on purchase of health care from non-NHS providers in 1992-93 is shown in the table. Provisional figures for expenditure in the year 1993-94 will be available in December 1994.

Purchaser	£000
NHS trusts	45,436
Regional health authorities	21,421
District health authorities	187,335
Family health services authorities	13,127

Note: The figures are provisional: the summarised accounts for 1992-93 are subject to audit by the National Audit Office.

Specialist Medical Training

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to ensure that the medical colleges implement her recommendations on changes to specialist medical training.

Dr. Mawhinney: In December 1993, I announced the Government's acceptance of the recommendations in the report of the working group on specialist medical training "Hospital Doctors: Training for the Future". The work needed by medical royal colleges, postgraduate deans, the General Medical Council and national health service managers to ensure successful implementation of the report's recommendations is under way. All medical royal colleges have made substantial progress in their commitment to develop curricula for structured training programmes by July this year. Copies of the report are available in the Library.

Mobile Telephones and Pagers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) portable telephones, (b) pagers and electronic bleepers and (c) car telephones are currently used by her Department; what are the annual costs of operating this equipment; and to which personnel it is made available.

Mr. Sackville: There are 500 portable telephones, some of which are car telephones, and 460 pagers in use in the Department. The annual operating cost of this equipment is approximately £412,000. Authorised users, who are mainly medical, scientific, professional and managerial staff, represent fewer than one in five of the departmental total. These facilities are required to enable them to maintain necessary contact with the Department and the national health service when travelling or while out of normal working hours.

Pacemaker Leads

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which regional health authorities have completed the checks on patients implanted with Siemens pacemaker leads 1010T, 1050T and Prototype 93.

Mr. Sackville: The Department has not sought information from regional health authorities. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of individual RHAs for details.

Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Hackney

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to close Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Hackney.

Mr. Sackville: East London and the City health authority is at present undertaking public consultation on proposals for the future of hospital services for children in east London. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mrs. Frances Heidensohn, chairman of the authority, for details.

Ministerial Visits

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether journalists were present at the visit to the ambulance service on 28 April by the Under-Secretary of State for Health, the hon. Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville).

Mr. Sackville: No, the press was not informed of the visit.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list each hospital, general practitioner practice or other where health workers are employed, visited by her and members of her Ministerial team since 1 April; and which such sites it is intended to visit before 9 June.

Mr. Sackville: Health Ministers have visited the following establishments since 1 April:

Chase Farm Hospitals NHS Trust, Enfield, Middlesex
Dulwich Medical Centre, East Dulwich
Dr. Grey's Hospital, Elgin
East Grinstead Health Clinic, East Grinstead
Enfield Community Care NHS Trust, Enfield, Middlesex
Farnham Road Hospital, Guildford, Surrey
General Practitioner's Surgery, Kingston Upon Thames
General Practitioner's Surgery, Nottingham
Hayward House Hospice, City Hospital, Nottingham
Heathlands Project, Guildford, Surrey
Hillingdon Hospital NHS Trust, Uxbridge, Middlesex
Hurst Health Centre, Walthamstow, London
London Ambulance Service, Waterloo
MeathHome Mental Illness Project, Godalming, Surrey
MENCAP, Stallington Hospital, Stafford
Princess Royal Hospital, Haywards Heath
Skene Nursing Home, Elgin
Whipps Cross Hospital, Leytonstone, London
General Practitioner's Surgery, Peterborough
Peterborough Hospitals, NHS Trust
Royal Free Hospital NHS Trust
Guy's and St. Thomas's NHS Trust

Ministers will continue to make regular visits to national health service establishments in performing their official duties. A number of these visits are arranged at short notice and it is not possible to provide a comprehensive list of future visits.

Youth Treatment Service

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will publish the report of the 1993 social services inspectorate inspection of the youth treatment service and the second annual report of the youth treatment service group; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: Copies of these reports have been placed in the Library today. I have accepted the recommendations in both reports and have asked the chief executive of the youth treatment service to implement them as soon as possible. This requirement is included in the "1994-95 Service Annual Plan for the YTS", a copy of which has also been placed in the Library today.

Psychotherapists

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she has any proposals to establish a national register for psychotherapists; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: We support self-regulation by the profession and have welcomed the initiatives taken by the United Kingdom Council of Psychotherapy and the British Confederation of Psychotherapists to establish their own registers.

Lumpectomies

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will seek from her United States counterpart the information he holds about the dangers of lumpectomies; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Decisions on treatment protocols for breast disease are matters for the professions.

Hospital Appointments, Dewsbury and Huddersfield

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is her estimate of the number of general practitioner referrals for hospital treatment who are waiting to get on the waiting list for first appointments in the Dewsbury and Huddersfield area;

(2) how many people are waiting for their first out-patient appointment with a consultant in (a) the Dewsbury area and (b) the Huddersfield area.

Dr. Mawhinney: There are no waiting lists for first out-patient appointments and no information is held centrally on the time taken between a general practitioner referral and first appointment. The hon. Member may wish to contact the local hospitals for details.

Community Care

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the minimum recommended frequency of visits by home helps/care assistants to people having been assessed as needing social care support in their own homes.

Mr. Bowis: The amount of support will depend on the assessed need of each individual.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether contracts with National Health Service trusts constitute contracts with the independent sector for the purpose of community care special transitional grant.

Mr. Bowis: Yes. The conditions attached to the special transitional grant define the independent sector as a body which is not owned, controlled or managed by a local authority.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General what have been the costs to his Departments of (a) providing legal advice to witnesses appearing before the Scott inquiry, (b) drawing up evidence to be submitted to the Scott inquiry, (c) officials and legal advisers attending the Scott inquiry and (d) other related costs.

The Attorney-General: The following costs have been identified:

(a) and (b)	[1]8,700
(c)	143
(d)	1,240

[1] It has proved impractical to allocate costs to (a) and (b) seperately.

The amounts in (a), (b) and (c) do not include the costs of staff in the Treasury Solicitor's Department which have been charged to client departments or the costs of staff who have provided legal advice within my departments in the normal course of their duties.

PRIME MINISTER

Friendly Governments

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister when Her Majesty's Government introduced the practice of not commenting on the policies of other friendly Governments; and if he will list those Governments Her Majesty's Government regard as friendly.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Byers) on 31 March, Official Report, column 908.

Health Service Visits

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list each hospital, general practitioner practice or other national health service site (a) he has visited since 1 April and (b) which he plans to visit before 9 June.

The Prime Minister: I have made one visit, to Basildon hospital on Tuesday 5 April. No other visits are planned before 9 June.

Civil Servants (Business Appointments)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Prime Minister how many civil servants in his Department applied in each year since 1986 through the business appointments system to take up an outside appointment (a) as an independent consultant, (b) in a firm of consultants and (c) in other employment; how many were referred to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and how many were granted.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The information for the areas covered by the Cabinet Office and the Office of Public Service and Science votes is set out in the table.

Year	Number of applicants	Independent consultants	Firm of consultants	Other	Referred to committee	Granted unconditionally	Granted subject to conditions
1986	2	—	—	2	1	1	1

[1] In 1992 the Cabinet Office took on responsibility for the science functions of the former DES and the Treasury businesses (Her Majesty's Stationery Office; Central Office of Information; Chessington Computer Centre; and the CCTA.

Pakistan

Mr. Cox: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to meet the Prime Minister of Pakistan to discuss matters of interest to Pakistan and the United Kingdom.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 5 May 1994]: I hope to meet the Prime Minister of Pakistan again later this year.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Tuberculosis (Prisons)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in England and Wales have been diagnosed in each of the past five years as having tuberculosis; in how many cases the disease was judged to be in its infectious stage; in how many cases it is judged that infection took place in custody; and if he will make a statement about the Prison Service's policy in this regard.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 6 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to respond to your recent Question on tuberculosis in prisons.

Records of the number of prisoners in England and Wales who have required "treatment or special precautions" for active tuberculosis are recorded by prison medical officers and are reported to Prison Service Headquarters on an annual basis. The figures for the last four years are as follows:

	Numbers
1988-89	22
1989-90	11
1990-91	13
1991-92	13
1992-93	28

In all of the cases the disease was judged to be in its infectious stage. Because of the capacity of this infection to become active after years of dormancy and because of the very variable incubation period prior to manifest illness, it is not possible to determine how many of these cases of infection have taken place in custody.

The Prison Service recognise tuberculosis as a re-emerging problem. The Director of Health Care for prisoners has issued guidance to prison doctors reminding them of the need to undertake careful screening and examination of prisoners on first reception with tuberculosis and other infectious diseases in mind. Further detailed guidance specific to tuberculosis has been prepared in consultation with the Department of Health and the Tuberculosis Sub-Committee of the British Thoracic Society, and has been issued to prison doctors together with separate advice to prison staff relating to occupational health.

Executive Release Powers

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the maximum number of prisoners currently in prison who would qualify for release should the Home Secretary choose to exercise the powers of executive release granted to him by the Criminal Justice Act 1992.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Secretary of State for the Home Department has powers under section 32 of the Criminal Justice Act 1982 to order that persons who are serving a sentence of imprisonment, other than imprisonment for life or an offence detailed in schedule 1 to the Act, may be released earlier, but not more than six months earlier, than they would otherwise be so released.

Provisional information on the population at the end of December 1993 shows that if the Home Secretary were to invoke such powers up to about 9,000 prisoners would be eligible for release.

Stasic Chrenowski

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether Stasic Chrenowski, also known as Stanislaw Chrzanowski, a resident in the United Kingdom, is being investigated by the police for wartime Nazi crimes against humanity; what is the current state of the investigation; and if the information which has come into the public domain has been referred to the appropriate unit of the police who are investigating these wartime crimes.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The investigation of allegations against possible war criminals living in England and Wales is the responsibility of the Metropolitan Police war crime unit. It would not be appropriate for me to comment on any case which may be the subject of an on-going police investigation.

Prisoners (Assaults)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many assaults by prisoners on other prisoners have occurred in each of the past five years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 6 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking how many assaults by prisoners on other prisoners have occurred in each of the past five years.

The information you have requested is published in the Prison Service Corporate Plan for 1994-97. For ease of reference the information requested, including the updated provisional figures for 1993-94, is given in the table below.

Assaults[1] on prisoners 1989-90 to 1993-94

Year	Number
1989-90	1,932
1990-91	1,912
1991-92	2,007
1992-93	2,062
[2]1993-94	2,437

[1] Proved at adjudication, including any attempted assaults and inciting and assisting other prisoners in an assault.
[2] Provisional figures.

Pregnant Prisoners

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what advice is given on security to staff escorting pregnant prisoners to and from court and to and from hospital facilities;

(2) if he will now review security procedures applicable to women giving birth while in prison custody; and if he will make a statement;

Mr. Peter Lloyd: [holding answer 4 May 1994]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 6 May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the Prison Service's security policy for women under escort who are in labour or pregnant.

The general guidance on security applies equally to both sexes. The principal means of ensuring security on escorts is through the use of handcuffs or the closeting chain. The guidance gives discretion to governors to handcuff a woman when escorting her outside the prison is there are reasonable grounds for believing that she is likely to pose security or control problems.

When any prisoner is escorted to hospital under restraint, the guidelines allow the handcuffs to be removed with the authorisation of a governor or Principal Officer and require them to be removed at the point where treatment begins if the doctor so requests. In such cases the escorting officers are expected to try to maintain security by other means, such as blocking potential escape routes.

We have reviewed the guidance in the light of the recent case where a prisoner's handcuffs were not removed while she gave birth, but believe it remains appropriate. The guidance enables senior staff at the prison to consider each case in the light of the circumstances. It also makes it clear that the handcuffs must be removed in any case if the doctor treating the patient so requests.

It is clear that the local arrangements in this particular case did not work satisfactorily. The procedures at the establishment have been reviewed and more detailed instructions will be given to escorting staff in future. I have apologised to Mrs. Edwards.

Advice on the procedures for escorting prisoners is given in the Manual on Security, copies of which are in the Library.

Prison Statistics

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prison auxiliaries and civilian grades have been employed at each prison establishment in each of the last five years;

(2) what is the proportion of (a) male and (b) female prison officers who are aged (i) 18 to 24 years, (ii) 25 to 40 years, (iii) 41 to 55 years and (iv) over 55 years;

(3) if he will list the number of assaults on prison officers, and the rate of assaults on prison officers per 100 prisoners, at each prison establishment in England and Wales;

(4) how many working days in each of the last 10 years have been lost to the prison service because of assaults on staff;

(5) at what prison establishments creche facilities are provided for staff; and what are his plans to provide such facilities in the future;

(6) how many prison officers work in the prison service of England and Wales; in what establishments they work; and at what grade;

(7) how many people from the ethnic minorities work as (a) prison officers, (b) prison auxiliaries, and (c) civilian works staff; and at what grade and at what establishments they work;

(8) how many women prison officers currently work in the prison service; at what establishments; and at what grade;

(9) how many assaults on prison officers in each of the past five years involved weapons;

(10) how many prison officers in each of the last 10 years have been medically retired following an assault:

(11) how many women prison officers have been physically or sexually assaulted in each of the last five years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Brian Landers to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated May 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions asking for a breakdown of Prison Service staff by age, sex, grade and ethnic origin, and about assaults. The information you requested is set out in tables which have been laid in the library of the House.

Physical and sexual assault on women prison officers

Our recording of assaults does not distinguish between those on male and female staff, or between sexual and other types of assault.

Working days lost due to assault

Our information on the impact of assaults on staff is not as detailed as it might be, and we are considering the extent to which it can be improved. We do not record separately the amount of sick leave taken as a consequence of assault. Available figures for total sick leave taken per uniformed officer, for whatever cause, are 13·47 days in 1991-92, 12·75 days in 1992-93 and 13·05 days (provisional figure) in 1993-94.

Medical retirement due to assault

We do not have separate figures for members of staff who have been granted medical retirement as a result of assault, but the total numbers of Prison Officers who have been medically retired from the Prison Service since 1992 (reliable information for earlier years is not available) are 240 in 1992, 251 in 1993 and 95 in 1994 (as at 29 April).

As we have explained in our recent correspondence, we do take assaults on members of staff very seriously, and the numbers of all assaults, of whatever kind, is one of the Service's key performance indicators. Reducing violence in prisons is one of the top priorities identified in our Corporate Plan.

We endeavour to help any member of staff on long term sick leave, for whatever reason, by counselling and advice from line management or from our staff care and welfare service.

Creches in prisons

The Prison Service has one workplace nursery at Holloway prison, which is used by staff at Holloway and Pentonville prisons. It will shortly be expanding, to offer a total of 44 places.

To enable other governors to consider the need for childcare facilities for their staff, the Prison Service Guide to Setting Up a Nursery was published in 1993. This guide drew on the Service's experience in setting up the nursery at Holloway and on more general guidance issued by the Cabinet Office in 1992 on childcare in the Civil Service. A number of establishments are now surveying local demand for and feasibility of childcare facilities.

Prison Service staff in London and Croydon have access to nurseries run by the Home Office and other government departments and the Service has very recently bought five places in the British Rail network of nurseries around the country.

DEFENCE

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what have been the costs to his Department of providing (a) legal advice to witnesses appearing before the Scott inquiry, (b) drawing up evidence to be submitted to the Scott inquiry, (c) officials and legal advisers attending the Scott inquiry and (d) other related costs.

Mr. Aitken: The cost to MOD of providing legal advice to witnesses giving evidence to Lord Justice Scott's inquiry has still largely to be determined. Some bills have yet to be submitted and others are still receiving consideration within my Department. The known cost of legal advisers attending the inquiry on behalf of the MOD witnesses currently stands at £12,000. Sixty-six current and former MOD officials and Ministers have been asked to give written or oral evidence to the inquiry. They have given this evidence on a personal basis and have not been supervised by the Department in its preparation. There is therefore no central record of the time spent or cost incurred in the provision of such evidence; serving MOD officials prepared and gave their evidence as part of their official duties. The direct central cost of the provision of evidence and information from MOD to the inquiry is estimated to be £128,000, which represents the cost of the inquiry liaison unit within MOD and the costs of photocopying and general presentation of the information.

Ministry of Defence Police

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what consideration he has given to employing ex-service personnel to replace Ministry of Defence police and civilian guards; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what consideration he has given to the future financing of the Ministry of Defence police;

(3) what plans he has to introduce performance-related pay for Ministry of Defence police;

(4) what assessment he has made of the current performance of the Ministry of Defence police;

(5) what plans he has to change the arrangements for control of Ministry of Defence police operations; and if he will make a statement;

(6) what plans he has to reduce the capability of the Ministry of Defence police to deploy armed officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: As indicated in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Dorset, West (Sir J. Spicer) on 15 December 1993, Official Report, columns 738-39, a wide-ranging review is being carried out into the future role, aims, objectives, structure and pay of the Ministry of Defence police. This review, which is continuing, has been closely co-ordinated with the defence costs study. Formal recommendations have yet to be put to Ministers.

The MDP fulfils its current duties with a very high level of professionalism and my Department has no plans to change the arrangements for control of MOD police operations. MDP will continue to be funded by my Department at levels consistent with the requirements for its services.

Training Colleges

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total number of courses run at the Royal Naval college, Greenwich, over the past two years; how many people have participated; and from which (a) services and (b) countries they came.

Mr. Hanley: Over the past two years, 120 courses have been run at the Royal Naval college, Greenwich. There have been 2,183 participants on these courses, including 61 representatives from 30 foreign and Commonwealth countries. United Kingdom participants were from all three services, together with civilians and contractors.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is his estimate of the costs involved in closing the Royal Naval college at Greenwich and relocating the staff college to Camberley, including the costs of redundancy and relocation expenses, and of meeting the delapidation obligations at the premises currently occupied by the Royal Naval college;

(2) what is the estimate of the potential savings to his Department which could be achieved by closing the Royal Naval college at Greenwich, taking into account the redundancy and relocation expenses (a) on the assumption that alternative uses for the current premises can be found and (b) on the assumption that no such alternative use can be found and that the costs of on-going maintenance and upkeep of the buildings will continue to be met from central funds;

(3) what estimate he has made of the feasibility and cost of maintaining two service staff colleges at Camberley and Greenwich, as against the maintenance of all three current establishments;

(4) what consideration he has given to the future uses of the buildings currently occupied by the Royal Naval college at Greenwich, and the costs involved in the upkeep and maintenance of these buildings;

(5) what estimate he has made of the feasibility and cost of locating all three service staff colleges at Greenwich in the premises currently occupied by and adjacent to the Royal Naval college.

Mr. Hanley: I have given no formal consideration to these issues. Staff training in all three services has, however, been looked at as part of the defence costs study, but no decisions have yet been made by Ministers.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are currently employed by his Department at the Royal Naval college, Greenwich (a) in the supervision and management of the college, (b) in teaching, study and related research activities and (c) in the provision of ancillary and support services.

Mr. Hanley: The figures requested are as follows:

	Number
Supervision and Management	30
Teaching, Study and related Research	99
Ancillary/Support Services	[1]118

[1] Departmental staff plus approximately 150 civilian contract support staff.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the (a) direct and (b) indirect benefit to the United Kingdom of the attendance of overseas service personnel at courses run at the Royal Naval college, Greenwich.

Mr. Hanley: The direct benefit of overseas personnel attending courses at the Royal Naval college, Greenwich is the generation of valuable receipts; around £500,000 being generated during financial year 1993-94. The presence of international officers on courses run by the college also broadens the experience and understanding of all United Kingdom course members. The indirect benefits include the fostering and strengthening of our defence relations with friendly and allied countries through the useful exchanges of ideas and views with officers from other countries' armed forces.

Landing Platform Docks

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy in respect of the provision of ships for the British amphibious capability; and when it is expected that orders will be placed for one or more new landing platform docks.

Mr. Aitken: The Government have made it clear in the past, including in the recently published "Statement on the Defence Estimates", that they recognise the importance of an effective amphibious capabililty, and are currently making a sizeable investment in this area as a result. Progress continues on the design and construction of the landing platform helicopter, which we ordered last May. Responses to the invitation to tender for the ship life extension programme for the first of the three older landing ships logistics, RFA Sir Bedivere, are currently being evaluated. The project definition studies for the landing platform dock replacement—LPD(R)—have now been completed, and the results are being examined. We hope to be in a position to make a decision on the issue of an invitation to tender for the design and build of the first of class—LPD(R)01—later this year. Subject to the successful outcome of the competition, we would expect an order to follow during the course of next year.

Security

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the use of private detective agencies and security companies by his Department.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave the hon. Member for Clwyd, South-West (Mr. Jones), on 3 May, Official Report, column 474, about private detective agencies.

It is my Department's practice to employ private security companies to guard establishments where it is considered to be appropriate and cost-effective to do so.

Technology Centres

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what funds have been allocated within the Defence Research Agency to the setting up of dual-use technology centres; and what is now the programme of inauguration of such centres, and their location.

Mr. Aitken: This is a matter delegated to the Defence Research Agency under its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 6 May 1994:

In today's written answer the Minister of State for Defence Procurement said I would be replying direct to your question on dual use technology centres.

Dual-use Technology Centres (DUTCs) are one of a number of initiatives being taken by the Defence Research Agency to increase the contribution from defence research to wealth creation in the UK, in response to the 1993 White Paper on Science and Technology.

The idea behind DUTCs is to enable industry to exploit the facilities, technology, know how and teams which exist for defence research. No funds have been specifically allocated to setting up DUTCs by MOD although the research work in the centres is sponsored by the MOD and, occasionally, the Department of Trade & Industry. This provides the revenue that makes DUTCs possible. But it is left to industry to decide how to participate and how to fund its involvement.

The first DUTC covering the area of Structural Materials was established in April 1994. It aims to enable UK industry to gain more benefit from the very large expenditure by MOD on research in advanced structual materials and the combination and processing of such materials in advanced products. The Structural Materials Centre is currently spread around 11 sites but we plan to rationalise primarily into a new laboratory at Farnborough. The construction of this laboratory is funded by MOD as part of the programme of cost cutting and site closures that flowed from Options for Change and forms a key part of the DRA's rationalisation programme.

A second DUTC, the Software Engineering Centre, will be launched in May. This will aim to exploit MOD expenditure on engineering research software in order to encourage closer working between the UK software companies. This Centre will be managed from DRA Malvern but will involve many projects with multi-company teams located at DRA and industry sites.

A third DUTC is planned for the summer in the area of supercomputing. This will be a partnership between a number of UK organisations, both military and civil, aimed at providing world scale computing facilities to the DRA, its partners and other civil users.

Other DUTC opportunities are being considered in hydrodynamics and oceanography, using DRA's facilities at Haslar near Portsmouth, and in information systems and technology and electronics and opto-electronics.

Medals (Former Yugoslavia)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what rules exist regarding the wearing of medals by members of Her Majesty's armed forces which were awarded for participation in (a) UN missions in the former Yugoslavia and (b) EC missions in the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Hanley: Members of the British armed forces who meet the qualifying criteria for the United Nations medal or the European Community monitoring mission medal for service in the former Yugoslavia, may accept and wear these awards. The medals should be worn after all official British awards and medals approved by the sovereign.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Occupied Territories

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the terms of the agreement between Turkey and Israel about the supply of water from Turkey to the Gaza strip for the needs of Palestinians; and if he will send congratulations to both parties on this contribution to the peace process.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We understand that when the Israeli Foreign Minister visited Turkey in April, water was one of the main topics of discussion. It was agreed that Israel should join the Manavgat water project. However, we are not aware of any agreement between Israel and Turkey to supply water from Turkey to the Gaza strip.

Mobile Telephones and Pagers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) portable telephones, (b) pagers and electronic bleepers and (c) car telephones are currently used by his Department; what are the annual costs of operating this equipment; and to which personnel it is made available.

Mr. Goodlad: The number of portable telephones, pagers, electronic bleepers and car telephones presently used by the diplomatic and aid wings of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and associated annual operating costs are as follows:

FCO (Diplomatic and Aid Wings)	FY 1993-94 £
(a) 174 portable telephones	58,663
(b) 260 pagers and electronic bleepers	44,842
(c) 3 fixed car telephones	1,032
Total	104,537

Mobile telephones and pagers are issued to Ministers, the permanent under-secretary, assistant under-secretary of state and private offices on demand; heads of department for use by duty officers; information and emergency aid department; and any officer who can justify an official need.

India

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has had from the Indian Government about their attempts to reduce the number of child workers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have not recently discussed this issue bilaterally with the Indian Government. We have urged all United Nations member states to abide by the programme of action for the elimination of the exploitation of child labour, which was agreed in 1993 by the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, of which India is a member.

Sanctions (Iraq)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposal has been put forward for Lloyd's Register of London to verify the enforcement of sanctions against Iraq through Aqaba; and how this relates to the lifting of the siege on Aqaba.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We welcome the Jordanian proposal to replace the multinational interception force —MIF—in the Gulf of Aqaba with land-based personnel from Lloyd's Register. The task of the onshore inspection regime will be the same as that of the MIF: to prevent breaches of the sanctions regime imposed on Iraq by the United Nations. Until Iraq satisfies the terms of all relevant United Nations Security Council resolutions, we will continue to lend full support to efforts to enforce sanctions against that country.

Kosovo (Visit)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reasons were given by the Serbian Government in Belgrade for forbidding a British delegation, including representatives from his Department, from visiting Kosovo; and what was the purpose of the visit.

Mr. Goodlad: No British delegation containing representatives of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has been forbidden to visit Kosovo. My right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office was in Kosovo yesterday during his visit to the Balkans.

Internet

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans his Department has (a) to utilise the Internet, (b) to make available on the Internet press releases and other departmental information which the public may wish to have access to and (c) to use the Internet as a means of increasing the openness of his Department.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Internet is being considered as both a communications and publishing mechanism for the dissemination of material originating from the FCO. A number of different links to the Internet, both in the diplomatic and aid wings, have already been installed.

North Korea

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the International Atomic Energy Agency has yet received full co-operation from North Korea in its request to sample and analyse fuel at the Yongbyon nuclear reactor.

Mr. Goodlad: North Korea has yet to agree to the IAEA's request to be allowed to inspect the refuelling of its reactor at Yongbyon and to ensure that the fuel rods are put under seal pending future analysis.

Middle East

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received about the agreement between Hamas and Fatah Hawks in the Gaza strip; and what are its implications for the middle east peace process.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: According to reports from the occupied territories, leaders of the military wings of Fatah and Hamas have agreed to cease settling disputes by violent means. I hope that this will lead to a reduction of violence in the occupied territories and to improve the prospects for Palestinian self-rule in Gaza.

Human Rights

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the reservations the United Kingdom has entered in respect of the European convention on human rights and the associated protocols and additions, since 1964.

Mr. Goodlad: The United Kingdom has entered the following reservations in respect of the application of protocol 1 to the European convention on human rights to certain territories for whose international relations the Government is responsible:

1. In view of certain provisions of the Education (Guernsey) Laws and of the Education Ordinance of Gibraltar, the principle affirmed in the second sentence of Article 2 is accepted by the United Kingdom only so far as it is compatible with the provision of efficient instruction and training, and the avoidance of unreasonable public expenditure in Guernsey and Gibraltar.

2. The principle affirmed in the second sentence of Article 2 is accepted by the United Kingdom only insofar as it does not affect the application of the following legal provisions:

(i) the common law of Anguilla which permits the imposition by teachers of moderate and reasonable corporal punishment;

(ii) Section 26 of the Education Act 1977 of the British Virgin Islands (which permits the administration of corporal punishment to a pupil only where no other punishment is considered suitable or effective and only by the principal or any teacher appointed in writing by him for that purpose);

(iii) Section 30 of the Education Law 1983 of the Cayman Islands (which permits the administration of corporal punishment to a pupil only where no other punishment is considered suitable or effective and only by the principal or any teacher appointed in writing by him for that purpose);

(iv) the common law of Montserrat which permits the imposition by teachers of moderate and reasonable corporal punishment;

(v) the law of St. Helena, which permits the administration by teachers of reasonable corporal punishment; and Section 6 of the Children and Young Persons Ordinance 1965 of St. Helena (which states that the right of a teacher to administer such punishment is not affected by the provisions of that section which relate to the offence of cruelty to children);

(vi) the law of St. Helena Dependencies, which permits the administration by teachers of reasonable corporal punishment; and Section 6 of the Children and Young Persons Ordinance 1965 of St. Helena (which states that the right of a teacher to administer such punishment is not affected by the provisions of that section which relate to the offence of cruelty to children);

(vii) the common law of the Turks and Caicos Islands which permits the administration by teachers of reasonable corporal punishment; and Section 5 of the Juveniles Ordinance (Chapter 28) of the Turks and Caicos Islands (which states that the right of a teacher to administer such punishment is not affected by the provisions of that section which relate to the offence of cruelty to juveniles).

No other reservations have been entered by the United Kingdom in respect of the convention or its protocols since 1964.

Rwanda

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what view was expressed by Her Majesty's Government at the meeting of the Security Council of the United Nations of 21 April where it was decided to reduce the United Nations peacekeeping presence in Rwanda.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Security Council was unanimous in adopting Security Council resolution 912 on the basis of recommendations put to the council by the United Nations Secretary-General.

In view of the absence of any ceasefire and the casualties already inflicted on the United Nations Aid Mission in Rwanda, we supported the view that the United Nations forces in Rwanda were no longer able to fulfil their mandate and that the United Nations Assistance Mission in Rwanda should be scaled down, pending further recommendations from the Secretary-General.

We also stressed the importance of retaining a United Nations presence in theatre to support the Force Commander and the Secretary-General's special representative in their efforts to secure a ceasefire and an end to hostilities.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received, directly or via the United Nations, of outside military forces, helping the rebel forces in Rwanda; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have had no such reports.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what have been the costs to his Department of providing (a) legal advice to witnesses appearing before the Scott inquiry, (b) drawing up evidence to be submitted to the Scott inquiry, (c) officials and legal advisers attending the Scott inquiry and (d) other related costs.

Mr. Goodlad: To date, the direct costs of the Scott inquiry falling to my Department have been £160,759.

It is not possible to break this figure down as set out in the question, which includes unquantifiable elements. For example, no record has been kept of the time spent by FCO officials, in London and overseas, in drawing up evidence to be submitted to the inquiry.

The direct costs can be broken down as follows:

Legal advice, including attendance by lawyers at Inquiry public hearings	33,400
Copies of the daily transcripts of proceedings	3,000
Costs incurred by FCO witnesses (travel and subsistence)	19,838
Pay (FCO officials working full-time on Scott Inquiry business)	96,649
Running costs, eg office machinery, stationery	7,872
	160,759

Social Charter

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the reservations that the United Kingdom has entered in respect of the Council of Europe's social charter and its associated protocols and additions since 1964.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The United Kingdom has accepted 60 of the 72 provisions of the social charter. It has not accepted:

Article 2.1
Article 4.3
Article 7.1, 7.4, 7.7 and 7.8
Article 8.2, 8.3 and 8.4
Article 12.2, 12.3 and 12.4

The United Kingdom has not ratified the additional protocol of 1988, nor the amending protocol of 1991.

SCOTLAND

Registers of Scotland Agency

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has concerning the level of fees charged by the Keeper of the Registers of Scotland Agency; and what percentage increases there have been in the past 12 months.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Fees charged by the Keeper of the Registers of Scotland are mainly specifically listed in SI 1991 No. 2093 and these have not changed since coming into force on 16 October 1991, and where they are not so listed the keeper is required to charge fees on a full cost recovery basis.

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy for ensuring competition in the supply of land registry reports to solicitors as between those supplied by the Keeper of the Registers of Scotland Agency and members of the Society of Scottish Searchers.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In principle, the policy is to encourage competition from the private sector. The Scottish Office Home and Health Department is chairing a working group involving a wider spectrum of those interested in extending access to the databases held by the keeper.

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has concerning the level of charges made by the Keeper of the Registers of Scotland Agency to members of the Society of Scottish Searchers for a form 12 or 13 report; whether the same charges are being made by the keeper to his report section for similar reports supplied to solicitors; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The fees for charges in the Registers of Scotland Agency are set out in SI 1991 No. 2093 and this provides for a fee of £16.50 for each form 12 and a fee of £10 for each form 13 irrespective of whether supplied to a member of the Society of Scottish Searchers or to a solicitor.

Community Care

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he intends to introduce a requirement that a set proportion of local authority expenditure on community care must be spent in the private sector.

Mr. Stewart: Under powers proposed in the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Bill it would be possible for my right hon. Friend to require a proportion of local authority expenditure on community care to be spent in the voluntary and private sectors should he consider this necessary to ensure the development of the mixed economy of care.

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the cost of implementing formal directions on purchasing in community care plans, for local authorities.

Mr. Stewart: The directions will require local authorities to include in the community care plans that they are already required to provide information which should assist more cost-effective purchasing of services.

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are his intentions for consultation with hon. Members on the draft circular on community care plans.

Mr. Stewart: In accordance with normal practice, my right hon. Friend has consulted widely among appropriate bodies on the draft circular on community care plans. It is not normal to consult hon. Members on draft circulars.

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy for ensuring adequate funding for the development of good-quality public services by councils and the voluntary sector in the provision of care in the community.

Mr. Stewart: Substantial resources are being transferred from the Department of Social Security to Scottish local authorities to meet their new responsibilities. My right hon. Friend has also made available significant additional resources to enable them to develop community care services.

Domestic Air Services

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultation took place with his Department over the proposed arrangements involving British Airways and Loganair on Scottish domestic routes; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: These proposals are commercial matters for the parties concerned, although they provided advance notice of them to the Scottish Office. The Government welcome the commitment given by Loganair and British Airways to the continuation of air services in the highlands and island which are vital to the communities that they serve.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by route the subsidies currently paid by his Department in respect of domestic air services.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Under the provisions of the Highlands and Islands Air Services (Scotland) Act 1980, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State makes subsidy available for the operation of the lifeline air service between Glasgow and Tiree and Barra. Loganair operates the service under contract to the Secretary of State. Under the terms of the contract, which is for the period 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1998, subsidy of up to £115,000 per annum is provided to Loganair.

Training

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if Scottish Enterprise is required to produce a strategic plan on how it will meet the training needs of Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: Scottish Enterprise has responsibilities for training as laid down in the Enterprise and New Towns (Scotland) Act 1990. Scottish Enterprise is currently reviewing all aspects of its present strategy including training.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what publications Scottish Enterprise has produced on how it is meeting the training needs of Scotland; and what assessment he has made of these as a reflection of Scottish Enterprise's performance in this area.

Mr. Stewart: Scottish Enterprise produces an annual report which gives details of its network's activities including the provision of training programmes for young people and unemployed adults which contribute towards meeting the training needs of Scotland.

Scottish Enterprise's performance is monitored regularly on the basis both of the performance measures in its annual report and of other management information returns to the Scottish Office.

Bosnian War Casualties

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many casualties from the war in Bosnia have been treated in Scottish hospitals.

Mr. Stewart: None. However, and as indicated in the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Health on 15 April 1994, Official Report, column 315, the Department of Health is continuing to liaise with my Department on the placement of individual casualties.

Health Service Staff

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what staff were employed in all aspects of the health service except in general practice in each health board area as at 1 January in each year since 1992 (a) on professional administration of the service, with no direct medical or nursing responsibilities, (b) as practising medical staff and (c) as practising nursing staff; and what was the cost of salaries and related expenses of each of the three categories in each of the last three years.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The latest information available is shown in the tables. Staff figures are as at 30 September whereas salary costs are only available at 31 March each year.

[1] Includes general managers, unit general managers, senior managers, staff on grades 7-10 and staff on protected grades.
[2] Includes ambulance officers, ambulance control assistants, management trainees and staff on non-Whitley grades.
[3] Excludes GPs and locums, 1993 data are provisional.
[4] With the introduction of the "1992" courses of preparation, new student nurses ceased to be employed by the NHS and instead receive a bursary. This has resulted in a rapid drop in the NHS-employed student numbers. There were 8,161·8 basic students and pupils directly employed in 1991, 6,278·9 in 1992 and 3,845·7 in 1993. There were 1,403 students receiving bursaries indexed on "1992" courses in 1992 and 3,617 in 1993.

Ayrshire and Arran Health Board

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money Ayrshire and Arran health board spent launching, publishing, promoting and distributing its "Charter for Health"; and how much money Ayrshire and Arran health board is spending on the newly created post of consumer feedback manager.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 5 May 1994]: The cost to Ayrshire and Arran health board of the relaunch of its "Charter for Health" was just over £7,000. The post of consumer feedback manager has been in existence for two years. The actual salary involved is a matter between the board and the individual concerned.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money Ayrshire and Arran health board is spending on promoting general practitioner fundholding within the local area; and what remuneration it is paying to the general practitioner appointed to promote general practitioner fundholding within its area.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 5 May 1994]: The costs to Ayrshire and Arran health board, in line with other boards, of promoting general practitioner fundholding are largely indirect costs and are not separately identifiable within the overall health board expenditure.

The general practitioner appointed by Ayrshire and Arran health board to promote general practitioner fundholding in its area is being remunerated for two sessions a month, until March 1995, at £86 per session. This is a standard rate for general practitioners employed on specific projects by the health board as agreed with the British Medical Association.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement indicating what assessment he has made of the general practitioner fundholding system operating throughout the Ayrshire and Arran health board area.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 5 May 1994]: Currently there are four fundholding practices operating within the board area. These practices are using the scheme to improve the health care and range of services available to patients. Participation in the GP fundholding scheme by GP practices is voluntary.

Council Tax

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many appeals against valuations against council tax have been lodged; how many appeals have been considered; how many appeals have been successful; and what is the average amount of time taken to consider an appeal against valuation in each valuation area in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 5 May 1994]: The table provides the available information, which relates to all classes of proposals to change the valuation list made to assessors and subsequent appeals. The table, which is taken from information supplied by assessors, shows the position at November 1993 for all areas, and the position at March 1994 for those areas for which information is, at present, available.

Medical Treatment (Complaints)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what statutory procedures currently exist for pursuing a complaint against medical treatment received under the national health service; and what plans he has to amend the current statutory status of local health councils.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 5 May 1994]: My right hon. Friend has issued directions under the National Health Service (Scotland) Act 1978 and the Hospital Complaints Procedure Act 1985 requiring health boards and NHS trusts to operate procedures for investigating complaints about treatment received in hospital. The National Health Service (Service Committees and Tribunal) (Scotland) Regulations 1992 prescribe procedures to be followed in investigating complaints where it is alleged that a general medical practitioner has failed to comply with his terms of service. The Health Service Commissioners Act 1993 empowers the Health Service Commissioner for Scotland to investigate certain types of complaints made to him where it is alleged that a person has sustained injustice or hardship as a result of treatment provided under the national health service.

There are no plans to amend the current statutory status of local health councils.

School Transport

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the costs arising from his decision to allow Strathclyde council to end the dispensation allowing three children to share a two-seater seat in respect of school buses and coaches; and what were the costs of the other safety measures affecting school transport recently introduced by Strathclyde regional council.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The decision by Strathclyde regional council in March 1994 to end the three for two rule on vehicles used for the transportation of school children in their area and to introduce a number of other measures was entirely a matter for the regional council. In figures provided to the Scottish Office, the council has estimated that the cost arising from such measures in 1994-95 is £1·72 million.

Ayrshire and Arran Community Health Trust

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for what purpose David Fraser and Mervyn Gunn of the Ayrshire and Arran community health trust met Scottish Office officials on Thursday 14 April; what connection this meeting had with the subsequent resignation of Mervyn Gunn; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 May 1994]: No such meeting took place.

Local Government

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what safeguards he is planning for the funding of welfare rights, money advice centres and voluntary organisations following the dismantling of regional councils and social work committees.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The Government value highly the work of voluntary organisations and wish to ensure a smooth handover from the existing to the new authorities. For this reason, the Scottish Office will issue guidance to the new authorities on the key role of voluntary organisations and the importance of avoiding disruption. In addition, the Scottish Office will direct existing authorities to inform shadow authorities of all funding which is given to voluntary organisations by means of grants, service agreements, contracts and so on. This direction will ensure that the shadow authorities are aware of the full extent of funding of voluntary organisations including annual grants being paid to voluntary organisations in 1994-95.

Care Services

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what evidence he has of local authorities failing to consider quality of care and value for money when purchasing or supplying care services.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 May 1994]: While local authorities clearly consider issues of quality and value for money, the cost of their directly provided residential care is significantly higher than similar provision available from the private sector which meets the quality standards of registration. Residential care is a major component of local authority community care expenditure.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) the advantages and (b) the disadvantages to users of care services provided by (i) the private sector, (ii) the volunary sector and (iii) local authorities.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 May 1994]: Good qulaity community care services are available in the statutory, voluntary and private sectors. Authorities should seek to offer clients a choice of services from a range of providers which meet their needs and offer good value.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library a list of the individuals and groups who have made representations to him about the purchase of care services from the private sector by local authorities.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 May 1994]: No. Many representations have been received and could not be listed individually without disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy in the long run for the involvement of local authorities in the provision of care services.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 May 1994]: Local authorities will continue to have a role as providers of community care services, but, in order to maximise choice and value for money, they should both distinguish between their roles as purchasers and providers and make full use of the independent sector.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his intended circular and formal directions to local authorities on community care plans.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 May 1994]: Appropriate bodies have recently been consulted on draft guidance and directions which would require local authorities to include in their community care plans statements showing (a) the planned volumes and types of care services to be purchased (b) the estimated costs of such purchases and (c) the proportion of their total proposed expenditure to be incurred on purchases from the independent sector. Responses are being considered.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportions of local authorities' expenditure on care services he expects to be devoted to purchases from the independent sector, the voluntary sector and to in-house provisions.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 May 1994:] These proportions should be determined locally in the light of availability of services and as a result of authorities purchasing good-quality services from whichever provider meets the needs and wishes of clients within a reasonable cost.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which care services he intends should be subject to formal tendering; and which would be accepted for spot purchasing.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 May 1994]: These are matters for local authorities to determine in the light of local needs and circumstances.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what experience and qualifications he will require from new providers of (a) residential care and (b) home helps.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 May 1994]: There are no statutory requirements for qualifications. However, all residential care homes have to be registered with the social work authorities and are regularly inspected by them.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in what geographical area of Scotland he considers there is not a real choice of care services; and where he intends to promote the development of the independent sector.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 May 1994]: The extent of choice varies from area to area and service to service. It is the Government's policy to widen the range of choice by encouraging the independent sector throughout Scotland.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library a list of the individuals and groups he has consulted on his draft paper advising local authorities of new requirements governing the content of their community care plans.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 May 1994]: My right hon. Friend is making arrangements to place the list in the Library.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what length of contract he deems appropriate for the provision of residential care.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 May 1994]: That is a matter for local determination. In the case of individual contracts the length of contract will reflect individual needs.

Scottish Ambulance Service

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans the Scottish ambulance service has to pursue NHS trust status; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 4 May 1994]: The Scottish ambulance service has prepared an application for NHS trust status. I expect to make an announcement on the public consultation process shortly.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Act

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to undertake a fundamental review of the operation of the Child Support Act 1991.

Mr. Burt: We are keeping the operation of the Child Support Agency and policy under continuous review.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will list the organisations responding to the consultation document on the medical test for incapacity benefit;

(2) how many of the responses to the consultation document on the medical test for incapacity benefit (a) were in favour of the approach outlined in that document and (b) expressed criticisms; and when he will publish the responses.

Mr. Scott: The table lists the organisations that have responded to the consultation document. All the responses have been helpful and we have taken account of them in the further development of the new test of incapacity. A report will be published in August summarising all the stages in the development of the test.

Independent Tribunal Service

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action is being taken to speed up the review hearings for people awaiting the outstanding moneys due to them under the severely disabled premium awards.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the independent tribunal service is the responsibility of the president, His Honour Judge Thorpe. He will write to the hon. Member shortly.

EU Statistics

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of gross domestic product is spent on social security benefits for people unable to work because of sickness or disability in each of the member states of the European Union.

Mr. Scott: Comparable figures for expenditure on sickness benefits are not available in the form requested. The latest information available is in the Eurostat publication "Social Protection Expenditure and Receipts 1980-1991". This publication also shows expenditure on invalidity and disability for the same period.

The latest information available on invalidity/disability expenditure, shown as a percentage of gross domestic product for each member state of the European Union, is contained in the Eurostat publication "Digest of Statistics on Social Protection in Europe, Volume 2: Invalidity/ Disability". This publication covers the years 1980-1988 and includes information about differences of definition which highlight the need for care in interpreting the statistics for comparative purposes.

A copy of each publication has been placed in the Library.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of national average earnings is represented by the higher rate of statutory sick pay, at the latest available date.

Mr. Scott: As at April 1993, the latest date available, the higher rate of statutory sick pay was £52·50 per week, representing 16·6 per cent. of gross national average weekly earnings of £316·90.

Notes:

1. The earnings quoted are the average for all full-time adult employees and taken from the April 1993 New Earnings Survey (GB). The corresponding figure for April 1994 is not yet available.
2. Most SSP recipients get occupational sick pay in addition to SSP when they are sick. In many cases this brings the total payment received up to full pay.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of national average earnings is represented by the current average payment of invalidity benefit.

Mr. Scott: The average amount of invalidity benefit in payment on 4 April 1992, the latest date for which information is available was £75·45(i). This represents 24·8 per cent. of the gross average national earnings figure, £304·60(ii), for April 1992.

Notes:

(i) Based on a 1 per cent. sample of claimants in Great Britain, rounded to the nearest thousand.
(ii) Figure obtained from "The New Earnings Survey (GB)", April 1992.
(iii) Invalidity Benefit was uprated by 4·1 per cent. from 9 April 1992.

War Pensions

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current level of a full war pension; how many and what percentage of (i) men and (ii) women are currently in receipt of (a) the full war pension and (b) a reduced war pension; how many reviews of war pensions took place in the past five years; and how many war pensions were upgraded and downgraded as a result.

Mr. Hague: The available information is as follows: From week commencing 11 April 1994 the weekly rate of War Disablement Pension payable to a person assessed as 100 per cent. disabled, is £98·90 per week.

The amount payable may be increased where there is entitlement to additional allowances or supplements, eg. in respect of age, mobility or attendance requirements.

As of 31 March 1994, there were an estimated 245,445 War Disablement Pensions in payment; of these 13,648 (5·6 per cent.) were to 100 per cent. disabled pensioners, and 231,797 (94·4 per cent.) to pensioners with lesser disablement.

295,166 reviews of War Disablement Pensions have taken place from April 1989 to March 1994 and, as a result, 59,065 of these were upgraded and 588 were downgraded.

Polish Forces Pension Scheme

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications were made to his Department in 1993 for pensions under the Polish forces pensions scheme; and how many people are currently in receipt of payments under that scheme.

Mr. Hague: Some 673 applications were made in 1993. At 30 April 1994, 2,313 pensions were in payment.

Social Fund

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the outstanding balance of loans and grants of the Lewisham and Brixton district social fund for the financial year 1993-94; how many applications for a grant were refused, giving the reasons for refusal; how many applications for a loan were refused, giving the reasons for refusal; how many applicants refused went on to appeal; and how many of these appeals were successful.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 5 May 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Social Fund (SF) in the Benefits Agency's (BA) Lewisham and Brixton District.

The balance outstanding on the Social Fund budgets at Lewisham and Brixton District as at 31 March 1994 at the end of the financial year was £295·36 for grants and £19,267·36 for loans. This is an expenditure of 99·97 per cent. and 99·4 per cent. respectively.

With regard to the number of grant and loan applications refused in the District, at the end of the financial year 1993-94 the numbers of grant and loan applications refused were 8,875 and 1,475 respectively.

The Social Fund Computer System (SFCS), introduced to Lewisham and Brixton in July 1993, collects different statistics compared to the old system and are not directly comparable with previous years. The old system recorded reasons for refusal per application whereas the SFCS records reasons for refusal per item applied for, most applications being for more than one item. As such, in cases where a partial award is made, a reason for refusal will also be appropriate. Therefore, the sum of all reasons for refusal will not equal the number of application refusals. The reasons for item refusal are given at Annex A.

There is no right of appeal against discretionary SF decisions. Applicants dissatisfied with a decision may seek a review of the decision and this is initially conducted within the District. If still dissatisfied, the applicant can ask for a review by the Independent Review Service (IRS) which is independent of the BA.

For the period 1 April 1993 to 31 March 1994, 4,006 review applications were received by Lewisham and Brixton District. These figures include those that requested a review by the IRS. Overall, 1,188 resulted in a changed decision.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fruit

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what representations she has had urging her to support an EC orchard grubbing grant; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what representations she has made to EC authorities about the consequences for United Kingdom apple and pear growers of national aids to assist producers in other EC countries;

(3) what representations she has received urging more action by the EC and GATT authorities to exclude dumped fruit from non-EC sources from the EC;

(4) if she will make a statement on the representations received and action taken by her Department on the market in the United Kingdom for United Kingdom Cox apples.

Mr. Jack: I have received several representations about the United Kingdom apple industry from a variety of industry organisations, individual growers and hon. Members.

I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my noble Friend Earl Howe, during the debate on apple growing on Friday 29 April Official Report, House of Lords, columns 995-1002, which gives a clear statement of our position on the various points raised.

Norway (Fishing Rights)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list each aspect of the Norwegian EU accession treaty relating to the management, control, catches and policing regime for fishing permitted to Norway in (a) southern and (b) northern waters under the transitional regime; and what are the comparable provisions for the United Kingdom at the present time.

Mr. Jack: In waters south of 62 deg north—the North sea, Skagerrak, Irish sea and west of Scotland and Ireland —fish stocks will be managed by the European Union from the date of Norwegian accession, but in the Norwegian sector of the North sea for one year the current Norwegian technical measures and control system will apply and for three years the current discard ban will apply. Norwegian quotas are fixed as the average shares of each stock over the period 1989 to 1993.

The United Kingdom quotas for joint EC-Norwegian stocks in waters south of 62 deg north are calculated on the same reference period as for Norway and thus consolidate the existing relative stability shares. The United Kingdom's control, management and technical conservation measures, applied within the framework of the common fisheries policy, are unaffected by the treaty of Norwegian accession.

In waters north of 62 deg north, Norway will maintain her management responsibility for fish stocks, including negotiations with Russia, until July 1998, after which the European Union will assume management responsibility. The current Norwegian technical measures will apply for one year but for three years the current control system, discard ban, and system of opening and closing fisheries in biologically sensitive zones will apply.

Norwegian and United Kingdom quotas are fixed as the average shares of each stock over the period 1989 to 1993 except for north-east arctic cod and mackerel where the quotas are fixed at the same percentages as in 1994. The United Kingdom's control, management and technical conservation measures in the area of United Kingdom waters north of 62 deg north are unaffected by the treaty of Norwegian accession.

Warble Fly

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of warble fly there have been in each year since 1990; and from which countries the infected animals originated in each case.

Mr. Soames: The table shows the number of clinical cases in each year together with the number of animals which were positive in blood tests for the presence of warble fly larva.

	Clinical cases	seropositive
1991	0	0
1992	0	4
1993	207	298

The cases in 1990 and 1992 were not linked to imports. In 1993, all cases were found in cattle imported from France, apart from one clinical case imported from Belgium.

The 37 clinical cases of warble fly confirmed to date are in cattle imported from France all of which are being re-exported.

Arable Farming (Wales)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) when she next plans to visit Wales; and if she will make a statement concerning the recent losses to cereal growers in the less-favoured areas in Wales as compared with England;

(2) if she will visit Wales in order to study the relative effect of arable aid payments to farmers in Wales as against those in England; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: My right hon. Friend has made no plans to visit Wales in the near future.

Decisions on arable regionalisation for the United Kingdom under the arable area payments scheme are taken jointly by my right hon. Friends the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. They decided that for 1994 it was in the best interests of the United Kingdom as a whole for each country to determine the yield regions within its own boundaries.

The decision to divide Wales into less-favoured areas and non-LFA yield regions was taken by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales in order to bring levels of compensation for the majority of specialist cereal growers in Wales closer to those in England. I understand, however, that no Welsh cereal grower will receive less this year than last, subject to any changes in the green rate in force on 1 July 1994 which will be used to calculate payments.

Animal Identification

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she plans to publish information concerning the new arrangements for the EC directive on animal identification; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: Following the major consultation exercise with the industry last year on how to implement the EC directive on animal identification, EEC 92/102, we have been in close and regular contact with industry organisations on the detailed arrangements. Our aim is to achieve a smooth transition to the new arrangements and to that end we have decided to allow an extra three months between 1 July and 30 September 1994 during which calves may be marked with either the new or old-style ear tags. From 1 October only the new-style tags should be used. To publicise the new arrangements we shall be running a poster campaign at livestock markets and taking advertisements in the farming press and all livestock farmers will be sent a leaflet.

Deer (Tuberculosis)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list by region, the number of cases of tuberculosis in deer in each year since 1985.

Mr. Soames: The number of cases of confirmed bovine tuberculosis in deer in England which were notified to my department between 1985 and 1993 were:

	Eastern	Midlands and Western	Northern	South Eastern	South Western
1985	nil	nil	nil	2	1
1986	nil	nil	nil	nil	nil
1987	nil	nil	nil	nil	nil
1988	2	nil	nil	3	nil

	Eastern	Midlands and Western	Northern	South Eastern	South Western
1989	nil	nil	nil	3	2
1990	nil	1	nil	2	7
1991	nil	nil	nil	nil	nil
1992	nil	nil	nil	nil	nil
1993	nil	nil	nil	nil	1

There were an additional seven cases of confirmed bovine tuberculosis in deer in Great Britain between 1984 and 1986 and two in 1988. Details on these are not readily available.

Animal Transportation

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will outline the regulations covering those permitted to transport live animals for slaughter within (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the EC; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: Article 5.2(a) of directive 91/628/EEC requires member states to ensure that the person in charge of an animal transport undertaking entrusts the transport to staff who possess the necessary knowledge to administer any appropriate care to the animals. This provision is implemented in this country by article 5(a) of the Welfare of Animals during Transport Order 1992.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many sheep died during a crossing on the night of 25 April from Portsmouth to Le Havre; what was the cause of those deaths; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: A transport company has reported that 39 sheep died in this incident. An investigation is being conducted by Hampshire county council and the Ministry.

Woodlands

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make it her policy to allow for woodland planting on set-aside land for the purpose of establishing new woodlands in the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: My right hon. Friend the Minister has long been arguing for the EC rules to be changed to allow woodland planting on set-aside land. As a result, the European Commission is now looking into the possibility.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 242

SESSION 1993–94

25th April—6th May 1994

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
